A MARK TWAIN STORY

Showing What May Be Achieved by Nerve and Reiteration.

A LESSON IN PERSEVERANCE.

Going to Prove That Repetition Will Work Wonders if a Man Has Only the Necessary Amount of Cheek to Stand Up and Keep on Talking.

Mark Twain once told a reporter that if a man says the same thing often enough people will begin to listen to him.

"Now," said the great humorist, "there was that story about Hank Monk. That was the oldest, stalest, driest, deadest bit of alleged humor that any man ever heard. It had been circulated around Nevada and California until there wasn't a man left who would even listen to it. I had heard it so many times that I knew it by heart. It told how Hank Monk got Horace Greeley over the Glennbrook grade to Placerville.

"I was about to deliver my second lecture at Platt's hall in San Francisco—the second one I had ever delivered. It occurred to me that I might begin that lecture with the worst story I had ever heard and by telling it often enough start the lecture with a big laugh. I took that story and memorized it so that it would not vary in the telling, and I made it just as pointless and just as dull and just as dry as I could.

"When it came time for me to talk I stood up and with a few introductory remarks began that story. If I remember it went something like this:

"'Horace Greeley once went over the Glennbrook grade to Placerville. When he was leaving Carson City he told the driver, Hank Monk, that he had an engagement to lecture at Placerville and was very anxious to go through quick. Hank Monk cracked his whip and started off at an awful pace. The stage bounced up and down in such a terrific way that it jolted the buttons all off Horace's coat and finally shot his head clean through the roof of the stage, and then he yelled to Hank Monk and begged him to go easier—said he warn't in as much of a hurry as he had been awhile ago. But Hank Monk said, "Keep your seat, Horace, and I'll get you there on time!" And he did, too—what was left of him.'

"Now, that was all there was to the story. It was bad enough to begin with, but I made it worse in the telling. I droned it out in a flat, monotonous tone, without a gesture to mar its depressing effect. The people received it in dead silence. I had insulted every man in the audience—I had 'graveled' them with a story that was not only stale and pointless, but one which they had heard at least a thousand times. I waited a few seconds for the laughter, and then I began to hem and haw and shift my feet. I tried to appear just as embarrassed as I could, and after floundering about helplessly for a few sentences I cheered up a little and said that I would tell a funny anecdote which might be new to them. It began:

"'Horace Greeley went over the Glennbrook grade to Placerville'—

"I told it in exactly the same miserable, pointless way that I had told it before, and when I got through I waited a longer time for the applause, but there wasn't any applause. I could see that several men in the house were growing quite indignant. They had paid money to hear a humorous lecture. I took a long breath and plunged in a third time, more embarrassed and flustered and worried than ever, and by and by I worked around again to the time when Horace Greeley went over Glennbrook grade to Placerville.

"This time some of the smarter ones began to laugh, and this encouraged me so much that I thanked them and started right in to tell the story over again, never varying the delivery so much as a pause to take breath. The fourth time fetched 'em, and at the end of the story they stood up and whooped and yelled and cheered for some time.

"You see, I thought that if a man had sand enough to stand up before an audience and tell the oldest, stalest and most uninteresting story in the world he could make people laugh if he had the nerve to tell the story often enough. The rest of my lecture went very well. They were willing to laugh at my anecdotes the first time I told them. Maybe they were afraid I would tell them a second time.

"I felt so sure that I had discovered a new phase in human character that I tried the same thing in New York years afterward. There was an authors' reading bee one afternoon, and most of the authors read selections from their works. I sat on the platform beside James Russell Lowell. He asked me what I was going to read. I said that I wasn't going to read anything. I intended to tell an anecdote.

"'Is it a funny one?' he asked.

"I said it would be if I lasted long enough.

"I started out without any preamble, and I told the Hank Monk anecdote. There was an awful silence at the end. I took a drink of water, mopped my forehead and told the story again. Same effect. Young man, I told that story five times before I landed 'em. When I sat down at last Mr. Lowell whispered to me:

"'You have cost me dear. I have been sitting here and wasting sympathy on you.'

"That's the point, young man. Repetition will do anything if a man has the sand to stand up and keep on talking."—New York American.

THE UMPIRE WAS GAME.

And He Made the Kickers Play Out the Last Inning.

Speaking of the doings of the veteran umpires, an old timer claims that Honest John Kelly is entitled to the record for freak doings among the indicator handlers. Back in the American association days, in a game played on the old Union grounds in Allegheny, Galvin was pitching for Pittsburg against Casey of the Athletics. Kelly was the umpire. In the ninth inning, with the score 5 to 0 in favor of the Athletics, the first man up for Pittsburg made a home run hit to center, and the visiting team at once set up claim that it was too dark to play.

The center fielder came all the way in and pretended that he could not see the ball in the gathering darkness. "Here," said Kelly; "give me a glove," and with that he started for center field. "I'll see how dark it is out there," he said. "You, Casey and Galvin, bat me out a few." Players and spectators gasped, but Kelly made good his bluff. He went out to deep center and, with the smoke of the mills lying low about him, actually caught ten or fifteen long line drives and high flies from the bats of the two pitchers without missing one.

Then the umpire came in and, taking off his glove, said: "Play ball. If I can see 'em out there, you fellows can." The game was resumed, and the Pittsburgs won in a great batting rally by 6 to 5.—New York World.

WET AND DRY MOONS.

Old Superstition and Cold Facts From the Astronomers.

There is an old superstition which dies hard, and that is that the position of the horns of the new moon tells what the weather will be. If the horns of the crescent are on the same level it will hold water, and hence it is a dry moon, but if it is tipped up then the water will run out, and it is a wet moon.

One thing has helped keep this belief alive. The moon is "dry" in the part of the spring that is usually fair, while it is "wet" during the season of autumn rains.

If this were a sure sign of the weather we could have our predictions published many years in advance, for an astronomer can predict the exact position of the moon at any time in the future.

The cause for the different positions of the crescent is simple. The moon is south of the sun in the autumn and north of it in spring. The crescent is found by the light of the sun falling on the moon, and the horns are naturally in a line perpendicular to the direction of the sun from the moon. That is all there is to this old superstition.—Boston Herald.

Confucius.

Confucius regarded his own life as a failure. He spoke against ambition, yet he coveted high office, nothing less than that of political adviser to some great ruler. A man of the highest lineage in China, he was yet poor and early supported himself by teaching. His pupils showed him an extraordinary devotion. The pick of the young men in his native state of Lu sat at his feet, and it was they who transmitted his tremendous influence. But Confucius saw not his immortal success, but his temporal failure. Only for a few brief years did circumstances permit him to exercise his practical genius for government. He became first a magistrate, then chief criminal judge in Lu, and, to quote Professor Legge, "crime ceased." Confucius, however, became dissatisfied with the ruler whom he served, a weak man who neglected his duty and gave himself up more and more to dissipation, so he resigned his post and banished himself.—London Spectator.

Don't Give Up.

Among some skaters was a boy so small and so evidently a beginner that his frequent mishaps awakened the pity of a tender hearted if not wise spectator.

"Why, sonny, you are getting all bumped up," she said. "I wouldn't stay on the ice and keep falling down so; I'd just come off and watch the others."

The tears of the last downfall were still rolling over the rosy cheeks, but the child looked from his adviser to the shining steel on his feet and answered, half indignantly:

"I didn't get some new skates to give up with; I got 'em to learn how with."

Life's hard tasks are never sent for us "to give up with;" they are always intended to awaken strength, skill and courage in learning how to master them.—Selected.

VERBAL MISHAPS.

Dickens Once Made Two Bad Breaks the Same Evening.

Charles Dickens once wrote to a friend: "I have distinguished myself in two respects lately. I took a young lady, unknown, down to dinner and talked to her about the bishop of Durham's nepotism in the matter of Mr. Cheese. I found she was Mrs. Cheese. Later I expatiated to the member for Marylebone, thinking him to be an Irish member, on the contemptible character of the Marylebone constituency and the Marylebone representative."

Two such mishaps in one evening were enough to reduce the most brilliant talker to the condition of the three inside passengers of a London bound coach who beguiled the tedium of the journey from Southampton by discussing the demerits of William Cobbett until one of the party went so far as to assert that the object of their denunciation was a domestic tyrant given to beating his wife.

Much to his dismay the solitary woman passenger, who had hitherto sat a silent listener, remarked:

"Pardon me, sir. A kinder husband and father never breathed. And I ought to know, for I am William Cobbett's wife."

Mr. Giles of Virginia and Judge Duval of Maryland, members of congress during Washington's administration, boarded at the house of a Mrs. Gibbon, whose daughters were well on in years and remarkable for talkativeness.

When Jefferson became president Duval was comptroller of the treasury and Giles a senator. Meeting one day in Washington, they fell to chatting over old times, and the senator asked the comptroller if he knew what had become of "that cackling old maid, Jenny Gibbon."

"She is Mrs. Duval, sir," was the unexpected reply.

Giles did not attempt to mend matters, as a certain Mr. Tuberville unwisely did. Happening to observe to a fellow guest that the lady who had sat at his right hand at dinner was the ugliest woman he had ever beheld, the person addressed expressed his regret that he should think his wife so ill looking.

"I have made a mistake," said the horrified Tuberville. "I meant the lady who sat on my left."

"Well, sir, she is my sister."

This brought the frank avowal, "It can't be helped, sir, then, for if what you say be true I confess I never saw such an ugly family in the course of my life."—Youth's Companion.

A SMALL WORD.

It Has Only Two Letters, Yet It Is Not Easy to Define.

To define one word in the English language one modern dictionary takes eighteen columns of small type. And this solitary word upon which the dictionary bestows such a wealth of elucidation is one that hardly anybody except a dictionary maker can define at all. The ordinary educated, English speaking person's knowledge of it could be expressed in about half a single line.

This fecund word is "of." If you were asked to define it—unless you are a dictionary maker or of an allied trade—probably you would have to reply: "Of? Why, of just means of." You might add defensively, "I always comprehend perfectly what it means when I see or hear it and can use it correctly in speech, so what do I want to define it for anyway?"

But if you were a child your actual mastery of "of" would stand you in no stead whatever. You would be set to digging out and memorizing the things the dictionary had to say about it, or the driest and least informing of them, as, for instance, that in some cases it is such a kind of preposition and in other cases some other kind and that prepositions have such and such properties when they don't have some other, every bit of which you would absolutely and mercifully forget at the first possible moment. Look over a child's grammar or "language" lesson, with its ghastly array of useless bones.—Saturday Evening Post.

Persian Prayer Rugs.

About 200 years ago small embroidered rugs were largely made in Persia, chiefly at Ispahan. These were prayer rugs, and on each of them near one end was a small embroidered mark to show where the bit of sacred earth from Mecca was to be placed. In obedience to a law of the Koran, that the head must be bowed to the ground in prayer, this was touched by the forehead when the prostration was made, and so the letter of the law was carried out. The custom still prevails. The Persian women who weave the finest prayer rugs seldom weave any other kind of rug.

POSTED HERSELF.

And Then Told the Author About His Book of Travel.

Prince de Talleyrand one day, when rising from lunch, said to his wife, a very ignorant lady: "You will have at your side at dinner tonight a very remarkable man. He has written his travels. For heaven's sake, do talk to him sensibly. As you pass through the library ask for the book and glance it through and bring the conversation to this subject. Do not forget to ask for M. Denon's work."

The princess obeyed, but the thought of the torrent of sarcasm which would follow an unsuccessful issue of her lord's commands made her forget the name of the author. "Give me," said the princess, addressing the librarian, "the adventures of this traveler. Listen, now, a name which ends in 'on.'"

"I know," said the librarian, smiling, and he handed her "Robinson Crusoe."

Mme. de Talleyrand read the book and was enchanted with the story, and more so with the thought that she was to dine with the author. At night she found herself next to M. Denon at table. She was not long in turning the conversation into the line directed by the prince, so she said to her neighbor: "Your travels have interested me deeply, monsieur. What joy you must have experienced in your lonely island when you found 'Friday!'"—From "L'Esprit de Talleyrand."

HELD HIS JOB.

The Boy Was Willing to Be a Friend to Senator Hanna.

When Senator Hanna was walking through his factory in Cleveland some years ago on the lookout for new ideas or anything which would aid the progress of business he overheard a little red headed lad remark:

"Wish I had old Hanna's money and he was in the poorhouse."

The senator returned to his office and rang to have the boy sent to him. The boy came to the office timidly, just a bit conscience stricken, wondering if his remark had been overheard and ready for the penalty. As the lad twisted his hands and nervously stood on one foot before the gaze of those twinkling dark eyes fixed on him by the man at the desk he felt the hand of Uncle Mark on his shoulder:

"So you wish you had old Hanna's money and he was in the poorhouse, eh? Suppose your wish should be granted. What would you do?"

"Why," stammered the lad, "the first thing I would do, sir, would be to get you out of the poorhouse."

The senator laughed and sent the boy back to his work. Today he is one of the managers of a large factory, but he never tires of telling the story that held his first job.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

Canine Etiquette.

In their relations with one another dogs have a keen sense of etiquette. A well known traveler makes this unexpected remark about a tribe of naked black men living on one of the south sea islands: "In their everyday intercourse there is much that is stiff, formal and precise." Almost the same remark might be made about dogs. Unless they are on very intimate terms they take great pains never to brush against or even to touch one another. For one dog to step over another is a dangerous breach of etiquette unless they are special friends. It is no uncommon thing for two dogs to belong to the same person and live in the same house and yet never take the slightest notice of each other. We have a spaniel so dignified that he will never permit another member of the dog family to pillow his head upon him; but, with the egotism of a true aristocrat, he does not hesitate to make use of the other dogs for that purpose.—Henry C. Merwin in Atlantic.

When Lives Were Cheap.

In the prison of Luxembourg one of Fouquier Tinville's agents could make up only seventeen convicts out of the list of eighteen which had been given him. "I want one more," he said. He asked the first suspect who passed by his name and on hearing it said, "Yes; it is you." He had him carried off, and the next day he was guillotined.

On another occasion a warder called out the name of an aged prisoner. A lad who was playing ball in the gallery mistook the name for his own and asked if he was wanted. "Yes," was the answer; "come along," and the next day the boy was guillotined instead of the man.

At Bordeaux a boy of sixteen named Mellet was guillotined instead of an old man of eighty named Bellay. On objecting he was told that he was eighty years old in wickedness.

Not Guilty.

It was 4 a. m., and Bilkins crept softly into the house and removed his shoes, but as he tiptoed up the stairs one of the treads gave a loud creak.

"Is that you, John?" demanded Mrs. Bilkins from above.

"No, my love," replied Bilkins. "It's the stairs."—Judge.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES
NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.
DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.
Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.
We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.
IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

ARCTANDER STIRS UP A ROW

His Address Delivered at the Opening of the Norwegian-Bergen Railroad Considered an Insult to Sweden.

SWEDEN.

What the Swedish papers term "an insult to Sweden," has caused no end of caustic comment in both Swedish and Norwegian papers. It appears that when the Norwegian-Bergen railroad was dedicated some time ago, Mayor Arctander, who is now minister of commerce in the Konow cabinet in Norway, delivered an address in which he is reported to have made the statement that "if Norway had completed the Bergen railway in 1905 we would not have been compelled to raze the boundary fortresses and participate in the Karlstad convention, because then we could have transported the Vestland's battalions up to the boundary line; now that the railway would have been completed and we could send our battalions thither." Sweden's diplomatic representative was present when this address was delivered and naturally became very much chagrined at Arctander's undiplomatic reference, threatened to leave the fest, stating that he would report the matter to his government. On the suggestion of Premier Michelsen the Swedish diplomat promised that he would not act on the matter, provided the Norwegian press would keep quiet about it. Through an indiscretion of "The Intelligensersedlerne" the matter was published and now there is a great deal of repartee in regard to the incident, which is being freely used in the Norwegian papers.

Emperor William on his birthday appointed Ferdinand von Grumme as vice admiral in the German navy. Admiral Von Grumme was born in Stockholm and is a son of a prominent manufacturer. In 1874-76 he served as a cadet in the Swedish naval academy. He has since served in the Swedish navy a number of years. About a year ago he departed for Germany and joined the German navy and it did not take long for him to win recognition. He at once became a favorite with some of the officers in the German navy and now the emperor has appointed him an admiral in the German navy, which the Swedish papers refer to as a singular honor to come to a Swedish naval officer in so short a time.

The Swedish government during the last strike of the workingmen at Stockholm caused by the socialistic intrigues prohibited the sale of alcoholic drinks. The good results of this measure brought about a house to house canvass by total abstainers in order to find out the sentiment of the people independent of party or newspapers. At Stockholm 50,000 voted for prohibition, 15,000 refused to commit themselves, and only 3,000 were in favor of free alcohol.

The French minister to Sweden has received not less than 10,000 francs for the flood sufferers in Paris. A charitable giver has donated 5,000 francs, but does not want his name published. Such expressions of sympathy on the part of the Swedish people has tended to further cement the already very intimate relations between the two countries.

Dr. Sven Hedin, the famous Swedish explorer of Tibet, is the subject of angry attacks by Roman Catholic papers. In his book he says that many customs and ceremonies by the Buddhists in Tibet are very similar to those practiced by and in the Roman Catholic church. He mentions the rosaries, the monks and nuns, the worship and the pope-like Dalai Lama.

Bank Director Edward Heckscher, well and prominently known in financial circles in the capital city, died about three weeks ago, aged seventy-nine years. He was born in Copenhagen of German-Swedish parents. Prior to his death he donated not less than 600,000 crowns to the Stockholm Business college.

Count H. D. Hamilton has departed for Pau, where he is going to learn the art of traveling in the air. He is accompanied by G. Von Hesten, who is also going to learn to fly. These gentlemen are both noblemen and are prominent in aristocratic circles of the city.

Dowager Queen Sofia has again made a donation. She has this time given 400 crowns to the poor workingmen of the city. The good queen continues to give large sums of money to the poor and deserving right along. Well has she deserved to be known as "Queen Sofia, the Good."

Bellman's birthday was generally observed by the Swedish singing societies Feb. 4. A Bellman society, known as "Bellman's Minne," gave an entertainment in which at least 300 persons participated. There was some fine singing and of course the Bellman songs had the preference.

For the first time in Sweden it has occurred that the export of pork has exceeded the import to the amount of 1,634,000 kilograms. In the year 1908 the import exceeded the export by 1,634,000 kilograms and about ten years ago it was 9,425,000 kilograms.

Immigration continues. During the month of January there were 487 persons who emigrated from the country. In the same month during the year 1909 there were 319 persons who emigrated to foreign lands.

During the year of 1909 there arrived in Stockholm 1,665 carloads of paper, which was used by the daily papers of the city.

Stockholm has at present a population of 341,000. It is estimated that the population during the past year has been increased by about 1,500.

E. W. Von Duben, a Swedish nobleman, has been appointed as Swedish vice consul at Santa Cruz, Mex.

NORWAY.

It will not be as easy for foreign insurance companies to operate in Norway as formerly if a new law proposition will pass the storthing. The new law will demand that all foreign insurance companies in Norway will have to have at least one representative who is a permanent resident in the land and in addition to this the company which desires to do business in Norway must first deposit a sum of at least 100,000 crowns in the Bank of Norway ere they will have a right to operate at all. If the aforementioned will be embodied into a law a number of foreign insurance companies who are at present doing business in Norway will have to discontinue their operations unless they at once comply with the demands of the new law.

A terrible storm raged over Lofoten and vicinity during the first days of last month and many fishing craft were destroyed while at sea. A number of lives were lost and up to date there have been ten corpses of fishermen thrown ashore by the fierce waves. Six fishing boats with twenty men still remain unaccounted for and at last reports from this section it seems to be the general belief that they have all been lost. From Melbo it is also learned that three boats with twenty fishermen are missing. The fishing at Lofoten has through these terrible storms received a big setback.

It was interesting to notice that the effect that the new comet which has been seen in the sky had on some Christiania people recently, especially the old people. A number of the latter felt certain that the world was coming to an end and some so-called "free religious" preachers have been conducting sensational services, telling the superstitious people that they had better prepare to leave this world. In many sections of the city the singing of hymns and incessant praying has been the order of the day.

According to German papers, Queen Maud is an ardent enthusiast for women's suffrage. Already as princess of Denmark she is reported to have taken an active interest in promoting woman's suffrage and the British women who are struggling to win the right of ballot are sharing her deepest sympathy.

Up at Nedenes Kongsgard it is reported a goodly supply of gold has been found and arrangements have already been made to commence mining operations there at once. An English syndicate is supposed to be backing the mining movement in that region.

A concert and entertainment was given at the National theater in honor of the Australian pianist, Grainger, a few evenings ago in Christiania, in which some of the leading musicians and singers of the city participated. The concert was in every particular a great success.

Melting iron by means of electricity was first tested in Norway the other day at Tinfos under the direction of Engineer Ble Lorentzen. The experiment proved most successful and electricity will hereafter be used right along at this point.

The Molde Savings bank's new building has been completed and the same was dedicated the other day in the midst of great ceremonies. The bank is in a flourishing condition and is one of the most substantial financial institutions of the country.

Thomas C. Bang has been appointed consul general for Japan in Christiania. Mr. Bang has been connected with diplomatic work for a number of years.

The Smeby hotel is at present undergoing thorough repairs, which will entail an expenditure of several thousand crowns. It is a large hostelry and is much patronized by tourists.

The customs receipts for Norway for the month of January amounted to 6,536,000 crowns. During the year of 1908 the customs receipts were 6,503,000 crowns.

DENMARK.

Dr. E. Lehman of Copenhagen university, a noted Oriental scholar, was appointed professor of history and philosophy of religions in Berlin university. The new professor knows Sanscrit, Pali, Egyptian, Coptic, etc. His best known book is "Mysticism in Paganism and Christianity," which has been translated into several languages. He is the successor of Professor Pfleiderer.

No spiritous or malt liquors are allowed in the Danish army in any form at present by order of the commander of the army. The so-called "vaarnpligtige" when doing military service are also forbidden to use liquor in any form. The order is a stringent one and has recently been placed in force.

The immigration from Denmark during the past ten years exceeds 65,000. Thus it will be shown that there is a steady drain in this respect on little Denmark, even although it cannot be said that the Danes have emigrated as generally as the Swedes and Norwegians.

MARION S NORELIUS.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The death list in the Wellington (Wash.) avalanche, where a trainload of sleeping passengers were taken up by a tremendous snowslide and buried to death at the bottom of a 200-foot canyon, continues to increase. The officials of the Great Northern railroad have given out a list of the known dead. Upon this basis the total number may reach eighty-four before the rescuers reach the bottom of the mass of snow and wreckage.

Eighteen feet of snow on the western slope of the Cascades and eight feet on the eastern slope is being changed into water by a warm wind from the sea. The rivers cannot carry away the deluge and the Washington valleys are overflowed, railroads are compelled to suspend business and bridges are washed away by the most widespread flood in twenty years.

Thirty-one are known to be dead as the result of the snowslides in the mining districts of Northern Idaho. To the sixteen known to have perished in the snowslides at Mace and Burke are added three more who died in a similar disaster when the camp of the Carbonate Hill Mining company at Mullan was destroyed. Two more were killed at Dorsey.

The Russian steamer Korea, buffeted by storms on the North Atlantic and pounded into helplessness by the heavy seas, was abandoned by her crew on March 1 and left to her fate. She was sinking fast when her men abandoned her. The Korea's crew of forty-eight men were taken off by the Anchor line steamer Caledonia.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound, the Northern Pacific and Butte, Anaconda and Pacific railroads are indefinitely tied up west of Butte by torrents sweeping down Silver Bow canyon of such force as to tear out big piles faster than they can be driven to replace washed out bridges.

Twenty-three miners were killed by an explosion of a powder magazine in the 1,100-foot level of the Mexican mine, one of the group of Treadwell gold properties on Douglas island, Alaska. Eight men were seriously injured, of whom it is feared four will die.

At least 4,000 persons are homeless in Ohio as a result of the flood, which continues to devastate the state. Numerous plants have been forced to close down and hundreds are out of work. The material damage is estimated at over $1,000,000.

All hopes for the safety of the Royal West Indies steamship Prins Willem II., which sailed from Amsterdam for New York by way of Venezuela on Jan. 21, have been given up. The ship carried fifteen cabin passengers and a crew of thirty-eight.

Colorado Midland passenger train No. 8 ran into an open switch at Green Mountain Falls, Colo., colliding with a light engine, and forty-two persons were slightly injured, none seriously.

In a head on collision of cars of the Illinois electric interurban road near Canton, Ill., three persons were killed and fifteen injured.

The Y. M. C. A. building at Rotterdam Junction, N. Y., was destroyed by fire and three train employes perished.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The county option convention at St. Paul passed resolutions pledging themselves, individually and collectively, to use their utmost energies for the election of such delegates to party conventions as will aggressively support a county option plank in the state platforms and to support only such candidates for the legislature and state offices as are known to be in thorough sympathy with the county option idea.

PROMINENT MEN INVOLVED

Systematic Insurance Swindle in the Twin Cities.

Sensational developments are promised as a result of the investigation that is at present being carried on by officers and agents of fraternal insurance societies doing business in Minnesota. State Insurance Commissioner J. A. Hartigan said that criminal prosecutions are certain and that arrests may be expected at any time.

Mr. Hartigan declined to give out the names of persons under suspicion and against whom evidence is being collected by his department and the attorney general. From another source, however, it was learned that complete disclosures will implicate several persons professionally and politically prominent in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

That a systematic conspiracy to defraud fraternal companies has been in successful operation for the past three years has been proved beyond doubt.

Several instances were unearthed where substitution of parties has been made without detection.

GALE SWEEPS TWIN CITIES

High Wind Causes Much Damage to Property.

A fifty-mile-an-hour gale swept down upon the Twin Cities and before it subsided did much damage and endangered the lives of pedestrians, firemen and linemen who were called upon to risk their lives in saving property from further destruction. Telephone service was interrupted throughout the state.

The wind, with characteristic March severity, began to develop early in the morning and at 7 o'clock, according to the weather observer, was blowing a fifty-mile gale.

Throughout the entire day the gale continued its pace, sweeping down walls, tearing awnings from their fastenings, blowing down signs, and the flying debris smashed hundreds of dollars' worth of plate glass windows in all parts of the city.

Two were injured, many windows broken, telephone and signal wires blown down in different parts of Minneapolis and other damage done.

TWO ACCUSED OF MURDER

Duluth Men Are Indicted by the Grand Jury.

Ralph Jones must stand trial at Duluth for murder in the first degree for stabbing Walter Whitehead, a Duluth pugilist, to death early last January. Both men are colored. The stabbing occurred in the colored club rooms on West Michigan street during a fight over a crap game.

George Booker, a teamster, must stand trial for murder in the first degree for the alleged killing of his stepfather, Charles Clark, a few weeks ago.

The grand jury brought in indictments for first degree murder against both men. Jones will put up a claim of self-defense for killing Whitehead. Booker simply declares he did not harm his stepfather. The evidence is circumstantial.

ROOMERS NARROWLY ESCAPE

Fire Destroys Three-Story Building at South St. Paul.

Fire which started in the saloon of Ed Lawler at South St. Paul got beyond the control of the local volunteer fire department and Chief Ellsworth appealed to the St. Paul department to prevent a general conflagration. Two engine companies and a truck company answered the call and reached the fire in time to prevent it spreading.

The fire had a good start when it was discovered and soon broke through the floor into the saloon and up through the three floors of the building. Fourteen roomers over the saloon had narrow escapes with their lives and were unable to save their effects.

PROSPECTS SOMEWHAT DIM

High Dam May Not Be Constructed Between Twin Cities.

Prospects for the construction of a high dam between St. Paul and Minneapolis were dimmed somewhat by the receipt at St. Paul of a dispatch from Washington announcing that the board of army engineers, while favoring the project, have recommended that the Twin Cities contribute nothing toward the expense of additional work necessary to produce power and that the government alone bear the cost, afterwards leasing the power to city or state institutions. Such a proposition, it is said, develops new questions which may not be of easy solution.

LOSS FROM FIRE VERY HEAVY

Residence of H. P. Upham at St. Paul Destroyed.

The H. P. Upham home at St. Paul was entirely destroyed by fire and only the prompt arrival of firemen prevented serious injury to Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stem, John P. Upham and two maids, who were rescued from second story windows by means of ladders. The house and its contents were valued at $150,000.

Laborer Killed by Train.

Frank Ukle, a farm laborer employed by John Pfeiffer of Dover, was killed by a Northwestern train near St. Charles while he was driving homeward. He had been warned that he was too drunk to try to make the trip.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state highway commission has apportioned among the eighty-five counties in Minnesota the road and bridge fund of between $75,000 and $80,000 to be used for building good roads. Ramsey, Hennepin and eighteen other counties are to receive $1,500; nine counties $1,200; twenty-one counties $1,000 and thirty-six counties less than $1,000, the least received being $400.

Persistent reports in railroad circles in Duluth say the Great Northern is planning to build a line from the Mississippi, in Northern Aitkin county, directly south to a connection with its line at Mora. The purpose of the line, it is explained, is to shorten the haul on freight from the West designed for the Twin Cities.

Riding the goat is no joke in the Eagle lodge at Nashwauk, according to Adalor Racine of Grand Rapids, who has just brought suit against J. W. Lewis, the secretary, and fifteen others of that organization to recover damages to the amount of $2,500. He says that he was handled brutally when initiated.

The Canadian Northern railroad has filed notice that it will accept the franchise offered it by the city of Duluth. The road, under the franchise, must construct its line to Duluth from Virginia within three years. It pays the cost of street improvements and must maintain terminals.

Miss Jean Poirier, deputy labor commissioner, issued orders that no children under eighteen years old shall be employed about Duluth theaters in any capacity after 6 o'clock in the evening. This will affect a number of ushers and other employes.

Governor Eberhart has announced the appointment of M. M. Williams of Little Falls as a member of the board of regents of the state university to succeed the late S. M. Owen.

Anton Miesen, proprietor of Miesen's cafe, St. Paul, charged with selling liquor on Sunday, was acquitted by a jury in eighteen minutes.

Work has begun on the new $300,000 Y. W. C. A. building at St. Paul.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Michael Angelo Scavo, arrested two weeks ago at the state capitol while armed with a pistol and seeking an audience with Governor Eberhart, was discharged by Judge John Finehout in police court at St. Paul. Judge Finehout said in dismissing the case that there was not enough evidence to warrant a conviction for disorderly conduct, the charge against Scavo.

Fire broke out in the Metropolitan theater building at Minneapolis just twenty minutes after the fall of the curtain on the evening's performance. Had the blaze occurred a few moments earlier a panic could hardly have been averted, as the theater filled with smoke immediately.

Olaf G. Gansted, forty-eight years old, a machinist employed by the Parks Wagon company at St. Paul, committed suicide by hanging himself from a rafter in the toolhouse in the rear of the company's plant in St. Anthony Park. No motive for the deed is known.

Great Northern passenger train No. 5, running between the Twin Cities and Minot, N. D., was derailed four miles northwest of Fergus Falls. Only one passenger was hurt. Five trainmen received injuries, but all are expected to recover.

Mrs. Karon O. Aarus, aged fifty-six, hanged herself at her home near Fergus Falls. She and her husband went to Norway last year and as he did not wish to return she came back alone and had been melancholy since.

Four firemen and a street railway motorman were injured, two seriously, when a St. Paul street car crashed into a hose cart, demolishing the vehicle and hurling the firemen and motorman to the street.

Thomas Gorham of Burns, Anoka county, was fatally injured while cutting down a large tree, which struck him in the back and broke his leg above the ankle, his death occurring a few hours later.

Villani Samni, employed in the Adams mine at Eveleth, was instantly killed while working in the shaft. A timber fell down the opening, striking him on the head.

The jury which tried Accapio Fuccirillo of Virginia for killing Louis Grillo at Gilbert last December returned a verdict of murder in the second degree.

Bert Kubet and Bert Uhl, stockmen of Onamia, this state, were killed in a railroad wreck in Illinois.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

O. C. Bradrud of Spring Valley is dead at the age of seventy-seven years. He reached Fillmore county in the early fifties and settled on a homestead near Fountain. He was prominent in the formative period of those early days and represented that county in the house in the twelfth session of the legislature in 1870.

Joseph F. Lee, who conducted a shoemaker's shop on Bridge square at Minneapolis in the late fifties and who had lived in that city for more than fifty-five years, is dead. He was ninety-four years old.

C. S. Chapman, postmaster at Echo, is dead. He was one of the earliest settlers of Yellow Medicine county.

COUNTY OPTION MEN MEET

Convention Criticises Attitude of Governor Eberhart.

After repeating their criticism of Governor Eberhart for failing to take an open stand in favor of county option and after condemning the recent legislature and the dominant political parties for failing to enact county option and other temperance legislation it desired the county option convention delegates at St. Paul passed resolutions pledging themselves, individually and collectively, to use their utmost energies for the election of such delegates to party conventions as will aggressively support a county option plank in the state platforms and to support only such candidates for the legislature and state offices as are known to be in thorough sympathy with the county option idea.

The convention did not endorse any candidate for governor, but provided for the appointment of a committee of twenty-seven charged with the duty of arranging the campaign so that county option men may be nominated and elected throughout the state. If the party conventions fail to adopt the county option plank the committee is instructed to "take such other steps as will in its judgment best insure the realization of the legislative reform that is our supreme interest in this campaign."

The speech of Governor Eberhart, in which he told the convention delegates that he would take no part in the controversy growing out of county option until his party in convention assembled has decided what its attitude toward the question shall be, was the cause of much comment, most of it adverse. The governor also declared that he would not attempt to use his high position to influence the party. He assured the delegates that if a county option bill is presented to him he will sign it and enforce it.

RECENTLY ENDED HIS LIFE

Suicide Freed of Murder Charge by Grand Jury.

The grand jury at Alexandria has exculpated the late Annet Olson, held for murdering his brother-in-law, George Traar, last Christmas night.

Olson committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell in the jail at Alexandria recently.

The grand jury returned their report after the suicide. Their report fails to return an indictment against Herman Erickson, fellow prisoner of Olson's, charged jointly with the same crime. Erickson was accordingly released from custody and departed for his home.

The grand jury was assured, it is said, by the evidence presented that the two prisoners were justified in killing Traar in self-defense.

INDIAN CHIEFS BLOW OUT GAS

Two Minnesota Chippewas Asphyxiated at Washington.

Chief Bay-Bum-Mah-Ji-Wa-Skung, who signed the treaty of 1866 between the Chippewa Indians and the United States government and the second oldest chief of the tribe, and Chief Ay-Ni-Wuy-Way-Ausk of the same tribe, both from Minnesota, were found dead in a room at the Halladay House at Washington, a hotel patronized largely by Indians who visit the national capital to look after the interests of their tribes in congress.

Gas was flowing from an open jet and both of the windows and the door were closed. Neither of the two chiefs had ever slept in a room lighted with gas before and it is supposed that one of them blew out the gas when they retired.

Bandits Hold Up Street Car.

Bandits held up a Rice street "owl" car at St. Paul in a daring manner and relieved the conductor, Andrew Bristol, of $46. They did not molest Motorman Olaf Olson. After procuring the money the highwaymen backed out of the car while politely uttering, "Good morning, boys."

New Bishop of Winona.

Very Rev. Patrick R. Heffron, rector of the St. Paul seminary at St. Paul, has been confirmed as the new bishop of the Catholic diocese of Winona in succession to the late Bishop Cotter. The confirmation of his nomination by Archbishop Ireland has been received from Rome.

Killed by Falling House.

Ole Jensen, a housemover, was accidentally killed at Hibbing. He put his head and shoulders under the corner of a dwelling standing on jacks, when one of the jacks tipped over under the weight and let the building down on him, killing him almost at once.

Fall Is Fatal to Child.

Rose, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Doffing of Hampton, sustained a fall on the schoolhouse stone steps, the injuries received resulting in her death shortly after the accident.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1910 NUMBER 12

ADDRESS OF P. ENGELSTAD

President of Thief River Co-Operative Store Tells of the Business of Company.

Believes That Concern Will Be a Big Success In Near Future.

The following is the address of P. Engelstad delivered at the annual meeting held last week.

In as much as we have been in business for a short time, little better than a month, we have not consequently much of a report to make.

I will, however, submit to you a brief statement of the transactions of the board of directors, as well as the general prospect of the business as far as it has been going on since we had our organization meeting.

Upon suggestion of the president of the League, Mr. Van Horn, we engaged Mr. Charmichael, an expert invoicer, to represent the company taking the invoice of Mr. O. J. Schei's stock, and this representative of the League, assisted by a couple of stockholders of our company invoiced said stock as fairly, honestly and impartially as could be done by men, and after the invoice had been taken Mr. Carmichael expressed himself to the fact that it was one of the best, cleanest and most up-to-date stocks that he had ever gone through.

The stock, including fixtures and furniture, amounted to a little better than $32,000.

We engaged the best manager we could get for the least money and on the 1st of February the newly formed company took charge of the business.

Considering that the month of February is the dullest month of the year, the business has been good. It is evident for everybody who has been familiar with the conditions which have existed heretofore that quite a noticeable change has taken place since the business was turned over into the hands of the new company.

I am informed from reliable source that business showed a good increase. This Co-Operative store will bring a whole lot of trade to Thief River Falls which otherwise would not have come to this city and on the other hand will destroy a large per cent. of the catalog business. At this Co-operative store the merchant practically gets his goods at wholesale price, plus cost of distribution and whatever net profit made goes back to the one who helped to make it, in proportion to patronage. I am perfectly confident that this enterprise of ours will be just as much of a success as its twin sister, the co-operative creamery. I remember when this was first started there was opposition even from farmers and as such was the case then, it is quite natural that this co-operative store should meet the same fate. In spite of all opposition this co-operative spirit which comes to light here and there in one form or another is spreading rapidly all over the country, and I am confident that some day, not very far distant, stockholders of the Co-Operative Store with pride will point to the fact and express themselves accordingly: "I was among the first ones to start this enterprise; I was one of its pioneers."

P. ENGELSTAD.

Notice.

Garbage and Manure.

All garbage and manure must be removed to the dump grounds or otherwise disposed of in proper manner by April 15, 1910.

If at any time, before or after April 15, 1910, after ten days due notice of any nuisance existing on or adjacent to any lot or parcel of land, said nuisance be not removed or abated, the health officer may proceed according to Chapter 425, Section 2 of the Statutes of the State of Minnesota, which is as follows:

"Sec. 2. If the owner, occupant or agent shall fail or neglect to comply with the requirement of said notice, then said health officer shall proceed to have the nuisance, source of filth, cause of sickness, described in said notice, removed or abated from said lot or parcel of ground and report the cost thereof to the city clerk, or other like officer, and the cost of such removal or abatement shall be assessed and charged against the lot or parcel of ground on which the nuisance, source of filth or cause of sickness was located, and the city clerk, or other like officer, shall, at the time of certifying their taxes to the county auditor, certify the aforesaid costs, and the county auditor shall extend the same on the tax roll of the county against said lot or parcel of ground, and it shall be collected by the county treasurer and paid to the city, village or township, as other taxes are collected and paid".

Signed, Henry Grundy,
Health Officer.

CASE IS DECIDED

Case of Alex A. Sweaas vs. M. V. Evenson Decided by Supreme Court.

Verdict Set Aside and Judgment Ordered for the Defendant.

The supreme court last week decided the case of Alex A. Sweaas against M. V. Evenson. Sweaas, who was a candidate for county auditor two years ago, claims that Mr. Evenson and others circulated false reports regarding him and sued for damages, securing a judgment for $500. An appeal was taken from this decision and the supreme court reversed the decision of Judge Watts. The following is the syllabus and opinion in full:

During the contest for the removal of a county seat, defendant said of plaintiff, then a candidate for the office of auditor of the county that he had said to one of the contesting places and had "pledged himself to support them in the county seat matter if elected; do not vote for him;" and other similar statements: It is held:

To determine whether a given statement is defamatory or not it must be constructed in the ordinary and natural meaning of the words used without technical interpretation. If not defamafactory in such meaning it must then be constructed with reference to its special meaning, if in any such sense it was published. The words here spoken, in the sence in which they shown to have been actually understood did not charge a violation of Sec. 361 or of Sec. 4800 R. L. 1905 defining and punishing bribery at and before elections or of Sec. 4867 R. L. 1905 punishing conspiracy for the perversion or obstruction of public justice in the due administration of the laws. They were not actionable.

Reversed and judgement for defendant notwithstanding the verdict.

The complaint of plaintiff and respondent alleged: In this ccurse of a contest for the removal of the county seat from the city of Red Lake Falls to the city of Thief River Falls during which a spirit of bitter feeling and rivalry existed, it was incumbent upon the county auditor to perform certian duties by law prescribed in the performance of which he could and did exercise certain discreation; Plaintiff has been nominated for the office of auditor. Defendant was a leading and active member of the county seat committee of Thief River Falls which had charge of the proceedings leading to the removal of the county seat. Defendant maliciously spoke in the presence and hearing of others of the plaintiff these false words:

"Sweaas (meaning and intending this plaintiff) is unreliable for the Auditor's office (meaning and intending the office of county auditor of Red Lake County) as he (meaning plaitiff has sold out to Red Lake Falls (meaning and intending certain people in Red Lake Falls) and has pledged himself (meaning plaintiff) to support them (meaning certain people in Red Lake Falls) in the County seat matter (meaning the proceedings for the removal of the County seat) if elected. Do not vote for him (meaning plaintiff)."

The plaintiff also spoke certain other words of the same tenor which were similarly objectionable. On issues joined, the case was tried by a jury which awarded plaintiff $500. This appeal was taken from the court's denial of the defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial.

A number of errors have been assigned by defendant which in view here to be taken are not material. The gist of the case is whether the words spoken under the pleadings and proof were slanderous. Plaintiffs contention is that "If the slanderous words spoken as complained of meant anything at all, they ment that the plaintiff had agreed or promised and to certain persons and voters of Red Lake Falls, * * * that in their return for their votes for him at such election he would, if elected auditor, do some act or acts of value to them, * * * relative to the county seat removal fight. * * * If defendant conveyed such meaning, then he charged the plaintiff with an indictable crime, described in Sec. 361 of the Revised Laws of Minn. 1905 but the words complained of carry even a deeper meaning charging a conspiracy punishable under sub-division six, of Sec. 4867 of said R. L. and and also under Sec. 4800."

It is elementary that in order so determine whether a given statement is defamatory or not it must be constructed in the ordinary and natural meaning of the words used without technical interpretation. If not defamatory in such meaning, it must then be construed with reference to the special meaning if in any such sence it was understood by the persons to whom it was published.

Sec. 361 R. L. '05 punishes bribery before or at elections. Sec. 4800 also provides punishment for asking or receiving bribes. No bribery was charged by the words plaintiff was alleged to have used. The candidate according to the complaint promised that plaintiff would in return if elected favor Red Lake Falls so far as possible in preventing the removal of the county seat. In other words in the language of one of the witnesses upon whom plaintiff relies "what I believed was that he had made an arrangement with the Red Lake Falls people that they was to support him on election, and if he was elected he was going to favor them in their side of the county seat fight as far as he could". Such a declaration was natural to the Red Lake Falls candidate and cannot reasonably be construed into being the charge of corrupt bribery.

Sec. 4867 R. L. '05 defines conspiracy and its punishment. The sixth section provides interalia that a person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor who conspires to commit any act injurious to the public health, public morals, trade, or commerce, or for the perversion or obstruction of public [illegible] of the due administration of the laws. If it be conceded that to charge [illegible] with misdemeanor as distinguished from a crime [illegible] actionable as defamatory, we are at a loss to see how the language used made that charge. What was understood was in the language of one of the witnesses to which plaintiff refers us: "that Sweaas had made some promise or agreement with the people of Red Lake Falls in this county seat matter, and that we couldn't depend upon him for Thief River Falls to favor our side". This was the natural construction of the language. What defendant said was substantially so understood by another of plaintiff's witnesses who concluded that all plaintiff meant was this: "well he would be on the side of Red Lake Falls against the moving the county seat site". He did not understand that plaintiff had received any money from Red Lake Falls but simply "in the county seat scrap he would be on their side". Another witness said he understood that the words meant "that plaintiff was with Red Lake Falls in the county seat site and that he was going to do some crooked work * * * if he got the office". Inferentially plaintiff was to be connected with the crooked work. It would be an unnatural and strained construction of what plaintiff said to hold it to mean that this crooked work consisted of a perversion or obstruction of public justice of the due administration of the laws.

If follows that the words which defendant is charged to have used are not actionable in the light of the proof as to the meaning in which they were understood. Defendant is entitled to judgment notwithstanding the verdict and it is so ordered.

Reversed.

HaveYou a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swansey, N. H., writes: "For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr. Mann, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

RESULT IN HIGHLANDING

Correspondent of the News Tells About the Result of the Election Out There.

A. Hammersten Elected Supervisor in Opposition to Ellingson and Hunt.

Highlanding, Minn., March 11.—Judging from the returns, the Socialists of the town of Highlanding won a mighty victory at the annual meeting on Tuesday. The fight centered upon the choice of supervisor. A. Hammersten, said to be a Socialist, was a candidate for supervisor, and fearing that his election would cause a great disaster, W. G. Hunt and Andrew Ellingson got together, held a caucus at the store of the latter, and nominated Ben Kvaste in opposition to Hammersten. They called upon all Republicans and Democrats to unite against the common foe of society and give to Hammersten what he justly deserved, a crushing defeat. Now when all is said, Hammersten is not such a bad sort of a fellow, and his election is not going to cause any great upheaval in the town of Highlanding. He is not going to make Hunt divide up his printing office or Ellingson his store. [illegible] two capitalists are going to be protected in their property rights under the Hammersten regime. While Mr. Hammersten received 42 votes to 9 for Kvaste, that is not saying that Kvaste is not an excellent man. It was the support of Hunt and Ellingson that caused his defeat by this large majority.

The other officers elected were:

Notice of Cancellation of Land Contract.

To Carrie Hankey and George Diebel:

Take notice that you are in default, under and according to the terms, conditions, and provisions of that certain contract, dated the tenth day of June, A. D., 1907, whereby Thomas L. Stordalen of Carthage, South Dakota, agreed to convey unto you, upon full and timely performance by you of your part of the terms, conditions and provisions thereof, reference to which contract for more particularity is hereby made, of the following described real estate in the city of Thief River Falls, County of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: Lots fourteen [14], fifteen [15] and sixteen [16] of Block three [3], in Porter's Addition to Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat thereof: and that according to the terms, conditions, and provisions of said contract there became due and payable from you to said Thomas L. Stordalen on the 1st day of September, 1907, the sum of $200.00, and on the first day of each and every month thereafter to and including the first day of July, 1909, the further sums of fifty dollars each month aforesaid, in all, thirteen hundred dollars, with interest on each and all of said sums at six per cent per annum from the tenth day of June, 1907; and at the date of this notice said amount of $1300.00 and interest as aforesaid still remains overdue and unpaid, and such default as above specified still exists.

And whereas, said Thomas L. Stordalen has by good and sufficient deed sold and conveyed unto the undersigned, Martine Stordalen, all his right, title, and interest in and to said premises, subject to said contract, and has by assignment in writing duly executed, sold and assigned unto the said undersigned all his right, title and interest in and to said contract above described, and the debt secured thereby, and the said undersigned is now the owner of said premises and contract and his successor in interest therein, Now, therefor, You are hereby notified, that unless on or before thirty days after the service of this notice upon you, you pay to Martine Stordalen at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, or for her to Chas. E. Boughton, her attorney, at his office in city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, the sum of $1300.00 aforesaid with interest thereon at six per cent per annum since June 10th, 1907, to date of payment, and pay the cost of service of this notice upon you, and thus comply with the provisions of said contract on your part to be performed, said contract will be cancelled and terminated and all your right, title, and interest thereunder, and in and to the land and property covered thereby, forfeited and annulled. Said cancellation and termination of said contract to take effect May 9th, A. D., 1910.

How Ed. Wise Found the Wise Way

Ed. was Old Wise's brother.

Lived with him ever since he had typhoid—lost his grip after that sickness—always white, always weak, always thin. Just able to hobble round and live on his brother.

Wise's physician, calling on Mrs. Wise and the baby, noticed Uncle Ed's condition—went over his case right there and started him on DIGESTO.

Ed. first developed ambition—then flesh and strength.

Instead of a burden, he is now Old Wise's mainstay.

A SAVAGE WITCH.

His Life Was Saved by the Chief of the Quiah Tribe.

The author of "Heroes of Modern Crusades," the Rev. Edward Gilliat, M. A., at one time master of Harrow school, says in his book that he had years ago the privilege of meeting the king of the Quiah country, Tetti Agamasong, at Harrow. The Quiah king had been educated at St. Augustine's college, Canterbury, and was able to lecture to the Harrovians in good English. In his lecture he told a quaint story which brings one nearer to the weird lives of the Quiahs, a small agricultural and trading tribe of inoffensive characters on the west coast of Africa.

"In my country," said the king, "we have no prisons; therefore if a culprit is brought to me I must chop off something—an ear or two, a hand or a foot—and he goes home a sadder and a wiser man. Just before I left for England a chief came to my hut, bringing a prisoner.

"'What has he done, friend?' I asked.

"'He is a dangerous witch, O king. He can turn himself into an alligator.'

"'Pooh! Nonsense! I don't believe that old fashioned stuff.'

"'Oh, but we saw him do it down by the big river.'

"Indeed! Well, chief, tell me all about it. You saw him yourself?'

"'I did. We were hunting by the banks of the river with our rifles when all at once we saw a big alligator lying on a rock in the river. The witch man was lying asleep in a hammock some fifty yards away. Oh, the dangerous creature he is!

"'Well, king, do not laugh with your eyes like that, for I am speaking the truth. I put up my rifle to shoot the alligator; but, to our great fear, as soon as I fired this fellow rolled out of his hammock and fell on the ground and rubbed his back and swore he was hurt.

"'Now, O king, if this witch had not been inside the alligator how could he have been hurt when I fired?'

"Gentlemen," concluded the king, "I see you are laughing with your eyes, but it is very difficult to rule over a people untaught and given over to superstition.

"What did I do? Why, if I had left him free they would have killed him as soon as I had gone on my ship, so I saved his life by chopping off his left ear."

MODERN CHESS.

The Game Vastly Different From That of the Ninth Century.

Chess is but a game, a pastime, a relaxation, but it has at times absorbed the faculties of the intellectual in every clime. Perhaps the greatest eulogy on the game was the remark of Sir Walter Raleigh, "I do not wish to live longer than I can play chess." It is certain that those who do not play the game are quite unable to form any conception of the high intellectual delights experienced by the chess enthusiast.

The origin of chess has been sought in vain. The fact is the game has so changed, developed and improved down the course of centuries that in its present form it would not be recognized by its inventor, if there ever was one. The oldest chess problem on record is thought to be that contained in an ancient Persian manuscript attributed to Caliph Kalifen Mutasin Billah, who reigned in Bagdad A. D. 833 to 842. But the reader would have to learn the old rules before it was intelligible. For example, the queen could make a move of only one square at a time and that on a diagonal, but a queen promoted from a pawn was allowed to make a move of two squares diagonally. The bishop had no power over any square except the third from which it stood on its own diagonal line, but it was allowed to vault over any piece that happened to be between. In short, it was a totally different game. Chess in the precise form in which we know it and play it today is a comparatively modern game. —London Strand Magazine.

Amending a Proverb.

There are a lot of silly proverbs knocking about. Take, for instance, "If pigs had wings they would fly." Now, this is absurd if you like. Do you know what sized wings a pig weighing eighty pounds would require in order to fly? They would measure about thirty yards from tip to tip. A nice state of things to keep pigs in an aviary with wings of that size! The proverb would run much better:

If pigs could fly
Pork would be high.

—London Scraps.

The Right Way.

Little Willie liked ice cream, but he objected to turning the freezer. One day his mother was agreeably surprised to find him working at the crank as if his life depended on it.

"How did you get Willie to turn the ice cream freezer?" she said to her husband. "I offered him 2 cents to do it, and he wouldn't."

"You didn't go about it the right way, my dear," replied her husband. "I bet him a cent he couldn't turn it for half an hour!"

Pretty Ancient.

"What is the oldest form of literature?"

"I dunno, but I guess some of th' musical comedy jokes must reach back pretty nearly that far."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Adam's Kick.

Eve—What makes you look so cross?

Adam—I wish you wouldn't be so loud in your dresses. It isn't necessary for you to pick the most highly colored autumn leaves.—New York Press.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection. You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog D is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

It is announced that Halley's comet will be visible to the naked eye in about a month. There is no likelihood, however, that it will furnish ex-Alderman Alexander and others from the East Side with enough light to get along without street lights.

There is one thing that will not demand an advanced price this year says the Ada Herald, and that is binder twine. The Minnesota farmer will buy his twine, in these times of soaring prices, at a less cost than ever; thanks to the Minnesota prison twine plant.

The Minneapolis Journal says that Dan O'Neill, of Thief River Falls, is likely to get into the race for state senator from this district. If Senator Hanson becomes a candidate for re-election this will give every county in the district, with the exception of Clearwater, a candidate and Beltrami will have two.—Ada Herald.

Mr. O'Neill will not be a candidate for the senate, neither will anyone else from Thief River Falls. This city, however, being the largest in this senatorial district, will take an active interest in seeing that the best man wins.

Germantown.

Coal hauling on the Germantown ditch route came to a sudden stop last week caused by the spring weather. In the neighborhood 35 teams had been employed for about three weeks and about enough coal was distributed along the route to run the machine through next summer. We are now in the midst of the most ideal weather. The snow is all gone and things indicate early seeding time.

At the town election on the 8th Town officers were elected as follows:

Supervisor—Aumnd Johnson.
Treasurer—Martin Hovelsos.
Justice—T. C. Hovelsos.
Constable—John Clausen.
Road overseers, T. Evenby, Emil Hanson.

Lumber is now being hauled up from Thief River Falls for building a steeple to the Norwegian church. The building is expected to be completed during the spring.

The Germantown Co-operative Store Company was organized last week and added to a chain of stores organized by and operated under the direction of the Right Relationship League. The company starts out with a capital stock of $5,600, 56 shares of $100 each having been subscribed for. The new company has purchased the stock and rented the Vaughan Bros. & Co. store building and takes charge of the business this week. Miss Vaughan has been retained as manager for the present. We wish the Germantown Co-operative Store Co. success.

M. J. Berg, formerly of Germantown and now one of the leading farmers of Silverton was up here Saturday and took with him back a horse bought of H. Roller paying $200.

After the regular services in the Lutheran church last Sunday Rev. Bjornson performed the ceremony that united in marriage Miss Josephine Bendickson of this place and Chris. Nelson of the town of Adger. Both parties are well known in this section and have a host of friends with whom ye scribe joins in wishing the couple all possible future happiness.

A long felt want in the Germantown school house was supplied last week by the installation of a school bell.

J. H. Roller is patting in this week as one of the viewers on a county ditch west of the Thief River Falls.

And now Grand Plain, after lying dormant in county politics all these years is coming to the front with at least two candidates for the office of county commissioner to succeed John A. Sorum of Holt. Favorable mention is made of N. Bundhund and Louis Hamre and we do not know, but what one of the two may or ought to land the plum.

H. Brabender, representing the Northwestern Marble Works of Crookston, was out here last week taking orders for tombstones.

T. Gevard, who has spent the last three weeks here soliciting subscriptions for shares in the Co-operative store left last week for his home in Minneapolis.

The Germantown-Grygla mail route, which was discontinued on account of the flood last week is to be restored to its old course from next Monday, again affording daily mail service between Germantown and Grygla, via. Liner.

NEED OF THE BONDS

Facts Regarding Proposed Issue of Bonds for the Proposed New High School.

Special Election to Be Held on Saturday Evening April the Second.

A special meeting of the votes of Independent School District No. 18 is called for Saturday, April 2, for the purpose of voting bonds to the amount of $38,000 to construct a new and exclusive high school building to be located on the northwest corner of the present high school grounds. There is no question as to the need of this building, and at a meeting of citizens held at the high school last Thursday evening it was the unanimous opinion of all that the bonds should be voted. Owing to the inclement weather, this meeting was not as largely attended as it should have been, but Supt. Hay presented some very interesting figures, which are as follows:

In 1900 the assessed valuation of this school district was $161,000; tax rate 20 mills; number of pupils, 285; high school, 0.

In 1904—Assessed valuation, $310,000; tax rate 30 mills; pupils, 653; high school, 31.

In 1909—Assessed valuation, $788,000, tax rate, 21 mills; pupils, 1,030; high school, 155.

In 1904, out of 132 high schools in the state, Thief River Falls ranked 121; in 1909, out of 206 high schools in the state, we ranked No. 29. Only three cities in Northern Minnesota ranked higher than Thief River Falls, they being Fergus Falls, Moorhead and Crookston.

The following is the tax rate paid in the various cities in this section of the state supporting high schools for the year 1909: Thief River Falls, 20 mills; Crookston, 23 mills; Red Lake Falls, 32 mills; Warren, 30 mills; East Grand Forks, 54 mills; Argyle, 22 mills; Bagley, 25 mills; McIntosh, 29.5 mills; Fosston, 31 mills; Stephen, 22 mills; Fergus Falls, 25 mills; Cass Lake, 32 mills.

Arrested on Serious Charge.

A man, who gave the name of Lee Pawling, and a young girl, whose name we will not mention (the daughter of an old and respected family living near Gladstone, Mich.) were arrested at a local hotel Sunday evening by Chief of Police Lang. The man was fined $25 and costs and the young girl is being detained until her brother, who is an engineer on the Soo line, can arrive and take the wayward girl to her home. The two have been living in city about three months. Pawling has charge of the pumps and water tanks on the Soo line and makes his headquarters here. He has a wife and four children, the oldest one being only nine years old, living at Gladstone. If he was arrested under the state law, he would have to serve a term in the state prison.

Ditch Soon Completed.

A. M. Arpin's ditching machine started work on ditch No. 36 (known as the Knox ditch) last week and is now working night and day. This ditching machine was built at Beerbower's this winter and will be used to dig a number of ditches on the south side of the river this spring. The present ditch will be completed about the 15th of May and the farmers will have the benefit of it before they pay any taxes. This is considerable of a contrast with another ditch in that vicinity the contract for which was let to Lillo & Moran about a year ago. Lillo & Moran in submitting their bid were simply acting as the agents of John Duffy who has a stand-in with the county commissioners and can get an extension of time whenever he so desires. The farmers living on land benefitted by this ditch have paid one assessment and not a particle of work has been done upon it. It is needless to say that they are not feeling very good over the matter, and would like to see the job let to some ditch builder instead of a scalper.

Jimmie Has Ambitions.

James Glass, a full-blood(?) Chippewa Indian, as big and tall as Jeffries and Johnson, winner of every one of his ten fights, possessing a knockout punch in either hand and the endurance of a Longboat, with plenty of speed, issued a challenge to the world from Mahnomen, White Earth reservation, to meet the winner of the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

Glass is 20 years old, has spent his entire life in the open, is an athlete all over, and notwithstanding the pugilistic tradition that the red man knows nothing about and can never become a flat fighter, he has shown that he has ability as an exponent of the Queensberry rules and that it takes far better than a raw hand to worry him in the squared circle.

There have been all sorts of champions—Ohioans, Californians, Irish, Australians, English, and so on, and so why not an American Indian champion? Folks from up White Earth way say Glass is both big and fast and that he has progressed with every fight, so that in a year or so he might prove a Jeffries in copper.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Rushing Work.

The Soo road is rushing the work of grading the new line from Thief River Falls to Duluth in great shape, and expect to have the grading all completed inside of a few weeks. In order to induce the contractors to put extra men at work, bonuses are being offered to all who complete their contracts before their time is up, and in many instances double crews are at work. It is expected that the steel will all be laid and the road in running order early in the summer.

Alexander May Be a Candidate.

There is a rumor in circulation to the effect that Charles Alexander will be a candidate for the legislature from this district at the primaries in September. Mr. Alexander does not deny or affirm the rumor. He states that he is being urged to get into the game—not by the political "leaders" of Bemidji and Thief River Falls—but by the "peepul", and conditions may be such that he will enter the race. Mr. Alexander is acquainted with nearly every homesteader in Beltrami county and has a decidedly strong following in Red Lake county.

YOU MOTHERS WHO HAVE A REAL BOY. . . . . .

Here are real clothes. Not the fussy, fancy, impractical kind; but good, staunch, substantail garments with style and durability. . . . . . These are XTRAGOOD clothes. The real boy, with all his pranks, can't harm them. . . . . .

The trousers are lined throughout. A rip or a tear is a thing unheard of. Then there is a fullness that makes it impossible for the boy to stretch them out of shape. Style comes natural in clothes made like XTRAGOOD. The proportion and shape given the clothes by the tailors who make them remain a part of the garments to the end. Only one store in town sells XTRAGOOD. That's this store. The new spring styles are here now. Prices will attract you as much's the clothes. Both are right.

MONETARY LOSS NOT LARGE

Financial Standing of Minnesota Insurance Societies Not Impaired.

"The investigation being made by the officers and attorneys of fraternal insurance societies does not menace the financial standing of any of these organizations," said State Insurance Commissioner Hartigan. "I make this statement," he continued, "because erroneous impressions are circulating which may work harm where they should not.

"None of the societies has suffered financial loss as a result of policies being issued on fraudulent applications. The people insured are all, or practically all, alive. Very few death claims have been presented for payment. Those which have been paid amount in the aggregate to but a few thousand dollars—not sufficient to incommode the societies concerned, to say nothing of affecting their solvency.

"The societies have been able to protect themselves by placing a firm hand on the crooked work when it was first discovered and taking immediate steps to cancel fraudulent paper."

FILES DEED OF $10,000,000

Consumers' Power Company Proposes to Expand.

The Consumers' Power company, with headquarters in Stillwater, has filed for record with the register of deeds of Washington county a deed of trust to cover bond issues in the amount of $10,000,000. The county treasurer was paid a fee of $12,500 for such recording.

The company is capitalized at $10,000,000. It owns the gas, electric light and power plants of Stillwater, the electric power plant on Apple river, Wisconsin, twelve miles from Stillwater, which furnishes electricity for use in Stillwater, as well as for plants at White Bear and Hudson, Wis. It is also acquiring lighting plants at Faribault, Cannon Falls, Mankato and other cities.

OBJECTED TO GIRL'S SUITOR

Father Seriously Wounds Daughter and Kills Himself.

Robert Pfeiffer, a laborer living in the village of Judson, near Mankato, shot and seriously wounded his daughter Maude and then turned the revolver upon himself and sent two bullets into his breast, death resulting several hours later. The girl is expected to recover unless complications set in.

Julius Colt, a suitor of the Pfeiffer girl, had just called to see his sweetheart and when he left, the father, who objected to the young man's attentions to his daughter, drew a revolver and shot the girl, the bullet entering just above the right hip.

Pleads Guilty to Charge.

Alfred L. May, for many years St. Paul manager of the American Press Association, pleaded guilty in the Ramsey county district court before Judge George L. Bunn to a charge of grand larceny in the second degree in having appropriated $31.05 of the funds of the association to his own use. Shortly after his arrest, Jan. 29, last, May entered a plea of not guilty, which he withdrew.

Arbor Day in Minnesota.

In a proclamation issued a few days ago Governor Eberhart designated Friday, April 29, to be observed as "Arbor and Bird day." The governor cites the widespread awakening of interest in the reforestration in Minnesota as a proper warning that further devastation must be stopped and that the present time is opportune for retrieving the losses sustained by reckless slaughter of the state's timber.

Revenue Receipts Increase.

United States internal revenue receipts of the Minnesota district during February, 1910, amounted to $113,652, against $102,499 during February, 1909, showing a gain of $11,153. This gain is mainly due to an increase of the manufacture of beer, the receipts from which amounted to $90,274 in February, 1910, against $83,082 in February, 1909.

Prisoner Commits Suicide.

Antonio d'Agestino, the Italian held in the Clay county jail at Moorhead on a charge of shooting Antonio Sposito, a fellow countryman, at Dilworth three weeks ago, committed suicide, having swallowed a number of pins. He resorted to this means after an extra guard had been placed about him, the officers fearing that he would attempt his life.

Murder Charge Against Woman.

W. C. Lear, aged thirty-two, a bartender, who was shot at Minneapolis a few days ago by Mrs. Lena Dale in the Alberta hotel, is dead. Lear was shot by Mrs. Dale during a quarrel in a room of the hotel. The woman is under arrest with a charge of murder lodged against her. Lear died accusing her of the crime.

PINCHOT RATHER RETICENT

Refuses to Comment on Louis Hill's Statements.

Washington, March 15.—Gifford Pinchot refused to make any comment on the interview of Louis Hill, made public at Los Angeles, in which Mr. Pinchot was characterized as an "impracticable faddist" and his ideas on conservation referred to as "asinine."

"Let Mr. Hill talk if he gets any pleasure out of it," said Mr. Pinchot. "It probably amuses him and does not hurt our cause. Th[illegible] care to say about the P[illegible]

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Eighty-seven people were killed when the Great Northern passenger train was swept down a mountain by an avalanche at Wellington, Wash., according to a revised list given out by the railroad officials. Fifty-two bodies have been taken from the avalanche ruins and it is thought about sixty-five are still in the gulch. If so the railroad list of eighty-seven dead is too conservative by twenty.

Catching fire from some unknown cause shortly after she had arrived at Portland, Me., from New York the steamer Manhattan, owned by the Maine Steamship company, was totally destroyed. The loss is $150,000. One man of the crew perished.

A Canadian Pacific passenger train had a thrilling race with a gigantic snowslide just east of Field, B. C., on the western slope of the Rockies. The engineer opened the throttle and the train dashed down grade, escaping by only a few feet.

Five men were killed and seven more were probably fatally injured by the collapse of a brick wall left standing in the ruins of the fire which partly destroyed the manufacturing plant of M. Lanz & Sons at Pittsburg.

The Big Jumbo reservoir, belonging to the Julesburg (Colo.) irrigation district, went out suddenly, washed out two miles of Union Pacific tracks and did about $150,000 damage.

A sharp earthquake, in some parts of California the severest shock since the big one of 1906, was experienced throughout the central part of that state.

The breaking up of an ice gorge in Sage creek, in Fergus county, Mont., drowned the entire band of thousands of sheep belonging to Charles Beck.

Seven miners lost their lives in the No. 5 shaft of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal company near Wilkesbarre, Pa., in an explosion of gas.

An exploding oil heater in the home of Louis Wagner at Gloucester, Mass., caused a fire that suffocated three children as they slept.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company won its fight in the so called Portland gateway case by a decision of the supreme court of the United States. This controversy was over the attempt of the interstate commerce commission to require the Northern Pacific to join with other railroads in establishing a through passenger route and joint rates from the East to Puget sound territory via Portland, Ore.

The Standard Oil company has filed in the supreme court of the United States a brief in opposition to the attempt of the government to dissolve the corporation as violating the Sherman anti-trust law. The keynote of the defense is the so called preservation of the "rights of individual citizens of the United States."

At least $1,500,000 is involved in the fraternal insurance swindles which have been perpetrated in the Twin Cities during the last two years, according to John A. Hartigan, state insurance commissioner, and attorneys connected with the investigation which is now under way.

A bulldog owned by John Prowes of Manchester, Ia., saved the three-year-old son of Dave Malven from drowning. The child fell from a bridge into the swollen river. The dog leaped in, seized the child's arm in its mouth and struggled to the shore.

One million dollars is to be raised by the associated liquor interests as a campaign fund to fight the effort to vote the saloons out of Chicago on April 5.

Promoters of the Jeffries-Johnson fight have announced that seats would range from $10 in the bleachers to $100 at the ringside.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

LONG LEGAL BATTLE ENDED

State Awarded Valuable Indian Swamp Lands.

After a legal battle lasting six years, and in which two Minnesota senators, the late Governor Johnson, Attorney General Simpson and State Auditor Iverson fought the matter up to the highest courts, the auditor received word from Washington that 102,308.63 acres of Chippewa Indian swamp lands valued at from one to fifty million dollars belong to the state of Minnesota.

State Auditor Iverson received the document from the general land office at Washington announcing that the department of the interior has ruled that the lands are the state's property and the announcement caused great enthusiasm in the capitol.

The receipt of the document at this time followed the arrival in Washington of Attorney General Simpson, who gave the matter his special attention last week. The fight for these lands was commenced Oct. 21, 1903, when the claim of the state was presented to the department of the interior, and Dec. 3 of that year Secretary Hitchcock approved the claim. This ruling was vigorously resisted by attorneys for the Indians and the matter was carried up to the department of justice at Washington.

Attorney General Moody sustained the state in its contention in June, 1906, but the Indians' attorneys carried the matter into the supreme court of the District of Columbia and from there it was appealed to the United States court of appeals, where the state won again.

As a result of a conference of state officials with Secretary Garfield the latter agreed to disregard all previous surveys and have an examination of the disputed territory made to determine which were swamp lands. The general land office had several surveying parties in the field for about a year, with the result that the original claim of the state was sustained.

LONG CONTROVERSY ENDED

Decision Affecting Certain Lands in Minnesota.

A Washington dispatch says the supreme court of the United States has announced a decision in the long controversy over the title to certain land in Minnesota in favor of Peter Froyseth, a homesteader, and against the trustees of the Hastings and Dakota Railroad company.

Scarcity of unallotted land in the state of Minnesota was the foundation of this suit of ejectment, brought by Russell Sage as assignee in trust for the Hastings and Dakota Railway company against Froyseth, who likewise claimed the ownership of a quarter section of land in Chippewa county, Minn. Sage was succeeded as trustee by Edward C. Osborn and J. J. Slocum.

A decision was given by the Minnesota courts favorable to Froyseth. This was affirmed by the supreme court of the United States in an opinion announced by Justice Lurton.

SMALL GAIN IN "DRY" VOTE

Elections Held in Four Hundred Minnesota Towns.

Elections in about 400 Minnesota villages and townships indicate a small increase in the "dry" vote, although brewery men in St. Paul claimed to be in possession of reports which showed a slight gain for license.

The ballots played some queer antics at all corners of the state. Roseau, in Roseau county, suddenly turned "wet," after several years of the dry and dusty, while Hallock, in the same neighborhood, swung into the anti-license column.

Northfield became a storm center over the proposed amendment to the city charter, which passed, and which will give the citizens a right to vote on the license question next year. A number of students from Carleton and St. Olaf's college voted, notwithstanding the protests of liquor men at the polls.

HAD $11,000 ON HER PERSON

Aged Woman Carried Twenty Pounds of Money in Belts.

The story of the finding of $11,000 on the person of the late Mrs. Catherine Frevel, aged seventy-eight years, of St. Martin, Stearns county, after her death was confirmed when Herman Terhaar, cashier of the New Munich State bank, reached St. Cloud with the money in a satchel. Mr. Terhaar is named in the woman's will as executor of the estate. The money, which the woman had secreted about her person in three belts weighed just an even twenty pounds.

University Regents Named.

Pierce Butler of St. Paul and B. F. Nelson and C. A. Smith of Minneapolis have been reappointed members of the state university board of regents by Governor Eberhart. With these three appointments the board has its full membership.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The Soo road has purchased from the Cuyuna Iron Range company of Duluth the newly completed line of road known as the Cuyuna Range road in Northern Minnesota. The price paid was $500,000. The road is thirty-six miles long. It extends off the Plummer to Moose Lake line of the Soo, connects the towns of Lawler and Cuyuna and is expected to be a contributor of an ore tonnage of large proportions when the development of the range shall have proceeded farther.

The Roberts-Kingston Contracting company, which has the contract for stripping the Union mine of the Republic Iron and Steel company of Virginia, is assembling material and equipment and constructing camps. The contract calls for the removal of 1,000,000 cubic yards of dirt and it is expected that it will take at least three years to do the work. Between three and four hundred men will be employed.

It is estimated that railroads entering Minneapolis will spend nearly $10,000,000 this year improving their terminal facilities in the Mill City. Plans already announced and purchases of property being made indicate that the Mill City is to be provided with terminals adequate to handle its growing traffic.

A bill increasing the limit of cost of the postoffice building at Minneapolis from $500,000 to $550,000 was introduced in the house by Representative Nye. Mr. Nye is hopeful of having this item incorporated in the public building bill that will soon be reported to the house.

The county option campaign was launched in Mankato recently when speakers from abroad filled most of the pulpits of the Protestant churches in the forenoon and a great mass meeting was held at the opera house in the evening, attended by nearly 1,400 persons.

Governor Eberhart has received a complaint from citizens of the northern part of the state that the towns of Kelliher, International Falls and Virginia are running "wide open." Secretary Wheelock turned the communication over to the attorney general's office.

Duluth is to have a new steamship line, "to conduct transportation of freight on the Great Lakes and to foreign countries," according to articles of incorporation filed with the secretary of state by the Raleigh Steamship company of Duluth.

At the risk of being bitten by a dog that was apparently mad, Paul Shoby, of Rochester, eighteen years old, grappled with the animal and killed it to save several girl high school students from possible injury.

Polk county has allied itself with the other twenty-nine counties in Northern Minnesota and organized a county branch of the Northern Minnesota Development association.

The state normal school board has published a beautiful memorial to Governor Johnson of sixteen pages, artistically printed and bound.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Two bandits entered the fuel office of S. Brand at St. Paul and at the point of revolvers held up William S. Brand, the bookkeeper, after which they bound his arms behind his back with a rope, placed a gag in his mouth and took $10 from an open safe.

Kozi Yamagishi, a Japanese student at the state university, was struck by a door that blew from a pile of lumber at Minneapolis. The door struck him on the head. He was taken to the city hospital, but died in a few hours.

William R. McKeag, thirty-five years old, an engineer employed at the plant of the Zenith Furnace company at Duluth, fell off a ladder and sustained injuries to his head which caused his death.

R. F. De Coursey, a vendor of slot machines in St. Paul, was found dead from asphyxiation in his room. The gas in the room was turned on and Coroner Jones decided it was a plain case of suicide.

P. J. Vanderlick, aged thirty, of Inver Grove, a freight conductor on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway, was instantly killed under the wheels of an engine just below St. Paul

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Moses R. Abbott, an old soldier, living alone on his pension and cultivating a few acres of ground three miles west of Mankato, was missed by the neighbors for several days. His landlord went to investigate and found Abbott's dead body lying on the bed, partly dressed.

Frank Earl Crawford, for ten years editor of the St. Paul Daily News, is dead, aged forty-one. For twenty years Mr. Crawford had been prominently connected with newspaper work in the Northwest.

Mrs. Maria Stickney, 101 years old, is dead at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. Folgetts, near Spirit Lake, St. Louis county.

Susannah C. Purchase, a pioneer resident of St. Paul and Minneapolis, is dead at Spokane, Wash., aged seventy-one years.

William Campbell Gribben, aged seventy, pioneer lumberman of St. Paul, is dead.

CAUTION IN THE MINT.

They Almost Strain the Air to Save Particles of Gold.

It has been aptly said that no miser guards his treasure more religiously than Uncle Sam watches over the precious metals that pass through his mints. Then, too, the precautions against waste are almost innumerable.

Every evening in each of the mints of the United States the floors of the melting rooms are swept cleaner than a New England housewife's kitchen. The dust is carefully put aside, and about once in two months the soot scraped from every flue is transferred to the same precious dust heap. This is then burned, and from its ashes the government derives no inconsiderable income. The earthenware crucibles used in melting are employed no more than three times. They are crushed beneath heavy rollers, and in their porous sides are found flakes of the precious metal.

In the melting room when the casters raise their ladles from the melting pots a shower of sparks fly from the molten surface of the metal. For the most part they are bits of incandescent carbon, but clinging to the carbon is often a minute particle of metal. Lest such particles should escape, the ashes and clinkers below the furnaces are gathered up at night. This debris is ground into powder by means of a steam crusher and then is sold to a smelter, like ordinary ore, at a price warranted by the assayer.

The ladles that stir the precious metal, the big iron rods, the strainers and the dippers, all are tested in a most curious fashion. After considerable use they become covered with a thin layer of oxidized silver, closely resembling a brown rust. The implements are then laid in baths of a solution of sulphuric acid, which eats away the iron and steel and leaves the silver untouched.

Gradually the ladle, or whatever the implement is, will disappear, and in its place remains a hollow silver counterpart of the original, delicate as spun glass. These fragile casts reproduce the ladle with perfect accuracy in all its details, although their surfaces are perforated with innumerable little holes. Scarcely have they been molded, however, before they are cast into a crucible to become in time dollars, quarters and dimes.

In one corner of the melting room there is a large tank into which newly cast silver bars are dropped and left to cool. Infinitesimal flakes of silver scale off and rise to the surface of the water, which acquires the metallic luster of a stagnant pool. Here is silver that must not be lost, so beneath the pipe through which the tank is emptied is banked a thick layer of mud. As the water filters through it the mud retains the precious residuum. Four times a year this mud is removed, and each experiment discloses the fact that some $50 has been saved.—Baltimore American.

His Text.

The three-year-old son of a Methodist minister was with his mother at a gathering of ladies. At the proper time he was given a cooky. He ate it in short order and asked for another. The hostess said:

"I'll give you another if you will sing for us."

"Can't sing," was his reply, "but I know something I can say."

"That will do all right," the lady answered, expecting to hear "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," or some other nursery classic.

But the little fellow drew himself up in real Sunday school fashion and said his piece:

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

The lady gave him the cooky, and the whole company seemed to be very cheerful about it.—Harper's Magazine.

A Water Telescope.

Norwegian fishermen use a water telescope to ascertain the position of the herring shoals. This is the way to make the water telescope:

Procure a tube made of tin and funnel shaped about three and a half feet long and ten inches in diameter at the largest end. It should be wide enough at the top to take in the observer's eyes, and the inside should be painted black. At the bottom, or wide end, a clear, thick piece of glass must be inserted, with a little lead in the form of a ring to weight the tube. When the instrument is immersed in clear water it is astonishing how many fathoms down the observer can see.

The Sybarites.

The Sybarites were the inhabitants of the ancient city of Sybaris, in southern Italy, founded 720 B. C. They were so greatly addicted to voluptuousness and self indulgence that their name became a byword among the peoples of antiquity. The word "sybarite" is used at the present day to denote a person devoted to luxury and pleasure.

OPERATING IN BEMIDJI

Boot-Leggers Operating in Bemidji and Saloon Keepers Fear the Results.

Have Employed a Private Detective Secure Evidence Against Offenders.

Red Lake Indians have been securing whiskey in Bemidji and it is feared that an order will be issued in the near future closing up all of the saloons at that place. The following taken from the Bemidji Sentinel explains the matter:

The recent arrests of several saloon keepers for violation of the Indian treaty law, which prohibits any saloon keeper from either selling or giving away liquor to Indians or persons of Indian blood, has caused the saloon keepers of this city to open their eyes to the fact that if something is not soon done to apprehend the guilty parties, the government will close up their places of business. The recent disturbances were caused over the finding of liquor on some Indians and their squaws.

Last fall the saloon men of Bemidji signed an agreement whereby each bound himself not to sell nor in any way furnish liquor to Indians. Since that time one conviction has taken place for the violation of the law, and as a result the council revoked the license of Frank Gagnon. Since then things have been quiet, until last Friday when the Indian agents got busy and as a result four arrests were made, A. Burke, of the Star Theatre, Jens Hanson, Third street, Andy Lysaker, Minnesota avenue and Bluff Govereaux, Nymore. All appeared before Court Commissioner Slocum, and the charge against Andy Lysaker was dismissed; the other three were held to the federal court at Fergus Falls, at the April term. This sudden activity on the part of the government agents have awakened the wet goods dealers to the fact that if rigid measures are not taken the government will close every saloon in Bemidji, in fact the representatives of the Indian department have said so much. The saloon men are equally certain that the law is being lived up to, that it is not the local saloons that are violating the law, but that persons outside of the saloons are causing all the trouble. In fact it is stated on good authority that well founded suspicion is held against some who have been indulging in the boot legging business, bringing the liquor in from other places, or possibly buying it in town.

To put a stop to the possibility of anyone getting liquor in bulk, every saloon keeper in town has signed an agreement not to sell liquor of any kind in bottles and in the event anyone violates the agreement, he will forfeit his license.

To further show that they are in earnest and that they mean business, the saloon men have engaged a private detective, whose business it is to secure evidence against anyone, whether saloon keepers or boot-leggers, who violates the law or the agreement. This detective, or officer, is operating independent of the police department, in as much as the saloon men pay his salary, although none know who he is as he is appointed by one man who keeps the secret to himself. Of course when convictions take place the man's identity will naturally be known, when in all probability, another will be appointed in his place.

It would seem that the saloon men are as anxious as anyone else to see the law lived up to, and they will furnish every aid and assistance to the officers to apprehend whoever the guilty party be.

Getting Together.

A meeting was held in the city council rooms Monday afternoon, the supervisors of towns of Rocksbury and North and members of the city council being present. The city can spend ten per cent of the money received for liquor licenses upon roads leading into the city and this means that between $1,200 and $1,600 can be spent in this way. Only roads upon which farmers do some work, however will the city spend money upon. The meeting was a very harmonious one and it is to be hoped that considerable work will be done upon the roads this year.

Arrested on Monday.

As the representative of a committee of W. C. T. U. ladies, Mrs. Ben Christianson last Saturday swore to a complaint in Judge Bishop's office for the arrest of W. E. Rose, the alleged proprietor of a resort across the Great Northern track. The warrant was served on Monday by Chief of Police Lang and Rose was taken before Judge Bishop where he plead not guilty and asked for a jury trial. Judge Bishop set Saturday morning at 10 o'clock as the time of trial. The arrest is made for violating the city ordinance. Rose has deposited $200 with the court for his appearance.

W. G. GILLICK IS KILLED

Former Chief Train Dispatcher for the Soo Here Killed in Minneapolis.

Had Been Working in Charge of Switching Crew Since the Strike.

The people of Thief River Falls were shocked Sunday by the receipt of a telegram announcing that William G. Gillick, for three years and a half chief train dispatcher here for the Soo line, had been killed in the yards of that company at Minneapolis by being pinned between two freight cars. The accident happened at 5 o'clock Sunday morning and at 10 o'clock he died.

Mr. Gillick was promoted from the office of chief train dispatcher to that of trainmaster with headquarters at Glenwood last fall, but owing to the strike of the switchmen he was called to the Minneapolis yards and put in charge of the switching crew and worked nights. It was while performing these duties that he met his death.

Mr. Gillick was one of the most popular railroad men in the employ of the Soo, and made friends with all whom he came in contact. He was considered one of the best in the service of the Soo line, and undoubtedly would have been promoted to the office of division superintendent in the near future had he lived. He was about 35 years of age and besides a wife, leaves two small children who are at present residing at Glenwood.

The funeral services were held Tuesday forenoon at Minneapolis and the remains were taken to Glencoe, the former home of the deceased, for burial.

Here's the Reason.

My idea of the high cost of farm products is the educated farmer. Just before Pres. Roosevelt retired he appointed a committee to investigate the poor farmer. Well, the verdict was poor business qualities in said farmer. They advocated combination in buying and selling and ever since the farmer has been busy. His son has been studying at the agricultural college winters and helping "dad" in the summer, cutting out bad paying and installing better and more modern ideas, and pointing out to the elder one the benefit of 300 farmers' bulletins from the secretary of agriculture department, each and every one a mine of practical and proven knowledge pertaining to every phase connected with the farm.

Consequently Mr. Hayseed is an educated man from now on, and he will not produce one thing at a loss any more. The farmer can now produce as much on eighty acres and do all the work himself as he could five years ago on 160. He knows how to rotate and fertilize, and by the aid of improved machinery makes more money and does not have to pay the lion's share to the hired man.

It is all bosh about the trusts and combines. There is no more stuff in cold storage now than there was four, five or six years ago, when prices were low. It is the farmers that are to blame, and you can't blame them much for taking things easy now, for they have been imposed on for generations.

You can say "back to the farm" all you like, but there is no farm to go back to for the common herd. He has got to be educated, and by the time he learns all the tricks of the farm he is too old to work.

Ice Goes Out.

The ice in the Red Lake river went out this week, the date being the earliest heretofore known to white settlers. A number of years ago the ice went out on the 29th of March and several years it went in out the first week in April. The owners of steamboats and gasoline boats have commenced operating them and everything is busy at points up the river.

SOO TO BUY D. & S. S. LINE

Quite Likely Through Trains Will be Run Through Thief River Falls.

Route Between Vancouver and Montreal to Be Reduced a Number of Miles.

That the Canadian Pacific is soon to be running through trains from Vancouver to Montreal through Thief River Falls is quite evident. The Wheatline is to be graveled for fast traffic this summer, and when the new line from here to Duluth is completed and by the use of the Duluth & South Shore, a road owned by the Canadian Pacific, a through line is established between the two coast towns several hundred miles shorter than the present line. The following taken from the Minneapolis Tribune regarding the probable purchase of the Duluth & South Shore line by the Soo road explains the matter:

That Canadian Pacific influences are bringing pressure to bear upon Soo line officials to take over the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic railroad is a persistent rumor in railroad circles. The Shore line has been a burden to the Canadian Pacific, which has been forced to make up its deficits for several years, but it is advanced that with it a part of the Soo system it might be made a moneymaker. It would give the Soo a direct connection with Sault Ste. Marie from Duluth, Superior and Ashland, which its present lines give only by a wide detour.

Another advantage that is pointed out is that with the completion of the Thief River Falls-Duluth line of the Soo the distance from northern Minnesota and North Dakota points to the Soo, Toronto and the East would be cut down several hundred miles. It would make the road from Saskatchewan to the Soo almost an air line.

The Soo recently has shown a disposition to take the small ore-carrying roads under its wing.

Jumped from Cars Once too Often.

Crookston, Minn., March 18—Thursday evening, as the westbound passenger train on the Great Northern was pulling out of Erskine, Joseph G. Way, who had been spending the winter in the lumber camps near Bemidji, was trying to get aboard the smoking car when he missed his footing and swung under the wheels. One foot was crushed off just above the ankle and he would have been instantly killed had not a Frenchman jerked him from in front of the next trucks. Way was loaded on the baggage car and brought to this city where he now lies in a critical condition. Fellow passengers state that he had been drinking considerably and with other woodsmen had been getting off at nearly every station and climbing back on again as the train started to pull out, despite warnings from the train crew and others.

The maimed man has a wife and four children at Rugby, N. D., for which place he was bound when the accident occurred.

Two New Settlers.

The town of Rollis seems to be on a boom. C. E. Williams was in town Monday and Tuesday closing up a deal whereby he sold a section of land to two men from St. James, Watonwan county, Minnesota. The land sold comprises the four quarters heretofore owned by John Clark, Mrs. Marsh, Will Drew and G. A. Drew. The Clark, Marsh and Will Drew places were sold to Mr. J. J. Kelley and the G. A. Drew place to Alec Long.

Both men will move on their purchases at once. Mr. Kelley will bring eight horses and get as much land as possible under cultivation this spring.

Thus have two more men been wise enough to sell high priced land in Southern Minnesota and come up here and grasp the opportunities offered. And this is only a beginning. Eastern Marshall county is just coming into its own.—Middle River Pioneer.

Notice.

Garbage and Manure.

All garbage and manure must be removed to the dump grounds or otherwise disposed of in proper manner by April 15, 1910.

If at any time, before or after April 15, 1910, after ten days due notice of any nuisance existing on or adjacent to any lot or parcel of land, said nuisance be not removed or abated, the health officer may proceed according to Chapter 425, Section 2 of the Statutes of the State of Minnesota, which is as follows:

"Sec. 2. If the owner, occupant or agent shall fail or neglect to comply with the requirement of said notice, then said health officer shall proceed to have the nuisance, source of filth, cause of sickness, described in said notice, removed or abated from said lot or parcel of ground and report the cost thereof to the city clerk, or other like officer, and the cost of such removal or abatement shall be assessed and charged against the lot or parcel of ground on which the nuisance, source of filth or cause of sickness was located, and the city clerk, or other like officer, shall, at the time of certifying their taxes to the county auditor, certify the aforesaid costs, and the county auditor shall extend the same on the tax roll of the county against said lot or parcel of ground, and it shall be collected by the county treasurer and paid to the city, village or township, as other taxes are collected and paid".

Signed, Henry Grundy,
Health Officer.

LIFE OF A BOY SAVED

Young Son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Torstvet Came Near Drowning.

Fell in the Mill Race and Rescued by His Mother Just in Time.

The four-year-old son of A. J. Torstvet, the barber, fell in the mill race back of their home on Riverside avenue Tuesday morning and it is almost a miracle that he is not dead. Mrs. Torstvet missed the little boy, and went into the back yard to look for him and going down to the mill race she saw him lying in the bottom of the river. She at once jumped in, lifted the boy out of the water and carried him to the house. The little fellow was unconscious and apparently dead, but she and other women, who live in the neighborhood did not know what to do. Alderman Milton Forder, who was passing by, was attracted by the screams of the women and as soon as he learned the trouble he set at work trying to revive the life of the little fellow, which was accomplished after considerable work.

Had the flour mill been running, the current in the race would have been so strong that the young boy would have been carried down stream before he could have been rescued.

Case Is Settled.

While in Minneapolis last week, Attorney Halvorson made a settlement with the Soo line in the personal injury suit of Julius Loberg against this corporation. Loberg was formerly employed as helper in the yards here and last summer fell from the top of a box car and sustained an injured arm. He brought suit for $8,000 against the company and the settlement was for $2,000.

Recently interviewed, he says—"I have suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and have used several well known kidney medicines all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and often-times a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this I owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my fellow sufferers". Sold by All Druggists.

Testimony Taken.

Yesterday at Red Lake Falls testimony was taken in charges that have been made against County Commissioner Lindquist and County Auditor Letendrose. The testimony will be submitted to Gov. Eberhardt and it is to be hoped that before any great delay the matter will be settled.

F. G. Bonfils of Denver, who went to Khartum to meet Colonel Roosevelt, had an interview with the latter and presented him with a petition from the chambers of commerce of Kansas City and other Western cities, asking the former president to return to the United States by way of San Francisco. Mr. Roosevelt replied it would be impossible for him to accept the suggestion, owing to his engagements.

One of the greatest progressive movements in the history of of Minnesota was the State Conservation and Development congress at St. Paul. Among the prominent men who addressed the gatherings were Secretary of the Interior Ballinger, James J. Hill, Archbishop Ireland and Governor Eberhart. More than 1,000 delegates were in attendance and thousands of visitors made up the audiences.

Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, in an interview at Los Angeles summed up what he considers the weaknesses in the government's reclamation methods. He even went so far as to say that the service is filled with either incompetents or "crooks." He called some of Gifford Pinchot's ideas asinine. He said the government reclamation plants, in many instances, were junk piles.

St. Patrick was nobly remembered in Chicago, but the brunt of it fell upon President Taft. During the day he spoke to members of the Chicago Newspaper club, to a mass meeting, to members and guests of the Hamilton club and twice at functions provided by the Irish Fellowship club, which was his host for the day.

Thomas A. Forsyth, a wealthy resident of Boston, plans to give $2,000,000 for the care of the teeth of Boston school children, as a perpetual foundation by which every child in the city from birth to the age of sixteen years may receive the most expert dental services free of charge.

Colonel Roosevelt's European itinerary has been definitely determined upon with as much exactness of detail as it is possible to make in advance. The former president will arrive in Rome on April 3, in Paris April 21, in Berlin May 8 and in London on the following 15th or 17th.

The Masquers Dramatic Club.

At a meeting, called for that purpose, held at the Ole Torrison home last week a number of the young people of this city gathered and perfected a dramatic club, to be known as the Masquers. The purpose of this society is to promote the interest in amateur theatricals and the like, and is a good one. The club members at present are limited to fifteen, and at a meeting held last Tuesday evening the following officers were elected:

President—Emily Lakie.
Secretary—Willis Akre.
Treasurer—Will Provincher.

A number of plays have been sent for and preparations for the production of a play in the near future are under way.

Here Saturday Night.

Come and hear the Irish orator, James Connolly of Dublin and New York, editor of "Harp", who will address the people of Thief River Falls and vicinity Saturday, March 26th, at 8 p. m. in the M. M. Johnson building, Main Ave. His subjects will be: Socialism in Ireland and America, Socialism, Labor and Religion.

Each and every man and woman owes it to themselves to know how to intelligently discuss Socialism and not talk about what Socialism is not.

This comrade comes highly recommended from the press, where he has spoken.

Being a son of old Erin and consequently gifted with good humor, is well versed in the history and literature of his country, and in speaking draws from an abundant store of knowledge, gained both from great study and wide experience.

He also possesses the fighting qualities which comes from the long struggle the Irish have been waging against their oppressions.

Will add that the slogan of the Irish Socialist is this: "The Great Appear Great Because We Are On Our Knees; Let Us Rise."

The Young People's Society of the Synod church will be entertained by Mrs. M. Larson, Friday, April 5th. Everybody invited.

Selection of Good Grain for Planting By the Use of a Well Constructed Fanning Mill.

Individual Ear Test of Seed Corn.

There is an alarming condition in the corn states, south of Minnesota. The question of seed corn is disturbing the farmers. Continuous tests of Nebraska corn, made by the Commercial Club of Omaha, fail to show more than a thirty per cent test of germination. That is to say, the tests fail to show than more than 30 kernels of corn out of 100 germinate, when tested for their power of germination. Nebraska is looking elsewhere for seed that will grow, and the railroads are sending bulletins to their agents to warn the farmers in season for them to procure seed.

Fortunately Minnesota is better off, but whether she will have any seed to spare will depend upon the tests the Experiment station at St. Anthony Park is urging farmers to make, and will continue to urge them to do, until the planting season is over. Hence Minnesota farmers are in position to supply a large amount of seed to their southern brethren if their own tests develop as well as the corn tested for a few farmers at the station thus far made.

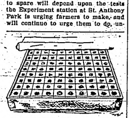

Fig. 1. An illustration of the testing box described herewith. Note the two-inch squares which should be numbered, also the method of rolling back the cover cloth which is seen on back part of box.

The Minnesota experiment station tests of individual ears, while not large in number, show many 90 to 100 per cent germination, and a good many tests show various percentages varying from 25 to 70. There are so many of these low tests that all the corn may justly be looked upon with suspicion until every farmer makes his own test and knows exactly what his seed will do. Farmers having 90 to 100 per cent germination seed will find a ready sale for their surplus.

The Minnesota experiment station recommends the following method of testing seed corn: Take a box 36 inches square, and from 4 to 6 inches deep. Fill it with sawdust, sand or dirt. Moisten it well. Take a piece of sheeting large enough to cover the top of the box. Mark it off into two-inch squares with a lead pencil and number the squares. This makes 324 squares, or spaces enough to test the seed ears needed for twenty acres. Next, get three or four six-inch boards. Divide them into 2¼ inch spaces by driving ten penny nails every 2¼ inches, and number the spaces. Select what you regard as the best ears. With a knife remove ten kernels, one from each of ten places on the ear, carefully avoiding the tip and butt kernels. Place these ten kernels from ear No. 1 on the square No. 1 in the box, and place the ear back on space No. 1 on the board; then treat ear No. 2 in the same manner. Treat all the ears in this manner. Cover the box with a damp cloth and a little more sawdust, or sand, or dirt, and set it away in a warm place, as in a living room, and keep moist, but not saturated. In 5 or 6 days examine for germination. Roll the upper cloth back carefully so as to not disturb the seeds. Watch the number of kernels starting and the vigor of growth. If ten kernels sprout in square No. 1 in the box, it means that the ear on Space No. 1 on the board will germinate 100 per cent. If you find in any square in the box only 8 kernels sprouting, you may know that only 80 per cent of the seed is germinating on the ear of the same number on the board. Such an ear is not good enough for seed, for no ear should be saved which germinates less than 90 per cent, unless better seed cannot be secured. In that case use the 80 per cent seed, but plant one more kernel to each hill than is the custom. Much better results will come from using 100 per cent seed. The temperature for testing should be between 60 and 80 degrees.

Fig. 2. Shows one method of keeping the ears separate while the testing is in progress. The ears could as well be forced on to the nails and the numbers placed at the foot of each nail. The figures under the ears are only suggestive of the way of numbering each.

If it is not possible to make a single ear test, test of the bulk should be made. For this testing two plates will suffice. Partly fill one plate with sand or dirt; count out 100 kernels just as they come. Stick these points downward in the sand. Moisten the sand thoroughly and turn the other plate over the whole. Set the "germinator" (the two plates) in a warm room and keep the sand or dirt moist. In five or six days the amount of germination can be noted. A low or weak germination now means a much lower or weaker one, or a total failure, at planting time. Observe closely the germinated seed when counting, and reject all seeds as not germinated which do not have both roots and stem, and a strong, vigorous growth. If seed tests well from this test it is not necessary to make the individual ear test, but if the bulk test shows a low germination, much good seed may be secured eliminated by the individual ear test. from the bulk if the poor ears are

Mr. F. W. Meyer, of St. James, writes to the department that where he planted seed testing 100 per cent, that is, seed from ears whose ten kernels sprouted, he had 100 per cent stand of corn, and where he planted seed testing 90 per cent he had a stand of only 92 per cent, a loss of eight per cent, which means four bushels on a fifty bushel yield. In 1908 Mr. Meyer tested 5,000 ears of corn and figuring his time worth 25 cents per hour, it cost him 15 cents per acre to thus test his seed.

If more details are desired the Division of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul, will cheerfully supply it on request.

CLEANING AND GRADING GRAIN.

(Minn. Bul. No. 115.)

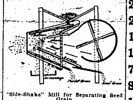
Selection of Seed.

Superior individuals may be selected from the bin of grain as well as from the herd of cattle. Individual kernels of grain vary as much in ability to produce good or poor offspring as do individual animals. The heavy, plump seeds were produced in most cases upon the strongest and most vigorous plants, and the light, shrunken seeds from the weaker, less vigorous plants. That "like produces like" is a well-known axiom in plant breeding. The influence of heredity is as strong in plant life as in animal life. Improvements can be effected only by eliminating the poorest and breeding from the strongest individuals. Hence there is as much reason for selecting good individual seeds of grain as for selecting good individual animals.

Yields From Heavy and Light Weight Seeds.

A plump, heavy kernel of grain will produce a stronger plant and nourish it better than will a shrunken, light kernel. This fact has been demonstrated beyond doubt by testing the yield from light and heavy weight seeds.

FANNING MILL SELECTION.



"Side-Shake" Mill for Separating Seed Grain.

Screen No. 1 should be just coarse enough to let the grain through. It is used simply to run off sticks and straw. Board No. 2 carries the grain backward in the mill, so as to let it drop through the blast at one place. The light kernels are blown past the end of screen No. 3, the heavier kernels fall on screen No. 3. Board No. 2 may be moved forward or backward to throw a large or small per cent of grain on screen No. 3, as desired. Screen No. 3 should be coarse enough to let the small kernels through on to Screen No. 4.

Screen No. 3 is adjustable as to slant and may be moved forward or backward to regulate the amount of grain it will catch. Screen No. 4 is fine enough to carry nearly all of the grain over into market grain. Any side shake mill may be fixed up in this way. Separation by weight can not be made with the end shake mills, but the large kernels can be separated from the small ones in any proportion desired, simply by using coarse or fine screens in the lower part of mill.

The Nebraska Experiment Station compared heavy and light weight seed of winter wheat for two years by sowing them side by side in the field, and the heavy seed averaged 4.6 bushels more per acre than did the light weight seed.

A similar experiment at the Minnesota Experiment Station with heavy and light weight oats (Bulletin No. 31) gave an increase of 9¼ bushels per acre in favor of the heavy seed and heavy wheat gave a yield 36 per cent greater than that of light wheat.

Principles of Separating Grain.

Being convinced of the value of good seed, the question now arises: How may a farmer select good seed in a practical manner? Every field or bin of grain has kernels in it which differ in producing power, some are good, some are poor. It is only the best than are wanted for seed. There are two principles by which grain can be separated in ordinary fanning mills, namely, by weight and by size of kernel.

Fanning Mills.

With the end shake fanning mill, grain can be well cleaned and the small seeds screened out, but there is no way to get the light, full sized seeds separated from the heavy seeds. For this purpose the side shake mills are preferable, as they are so arranged that the grain can be allowed to drop several inches thru a strong wind blast. This blast blows the lighter kernels over the end of the screen and the heavy kernels fall on the screen, which is coarse enough to let the small kernels thru. Thus, only the heavy and large kernels get into the seed grain while the smaller and lighter ones go into the market grain.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The NEWS this week publishes an article prepared by the State Experiment Station on the testing of seed corn and it should be carefully read by all farmers, who are raising corn. It is said that much of the seed corn this year does not have the power of germination and all should be tested before planting.

Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston launched Gov. Eberhart's candidacy at a recent banquet of the John Ericsson republican club in Minneapolis. With the candidacy of Kaiser for state treasurer on his hands, his own political aspirations, and this added responsibility the genial senator has mapped out a busy season for himself.—Roseau Region.

There is a peculiar situation at Osakis. At the recent election 260 voters were polled of which 130 were for license, 120 against and 10 not voting. Osakis was a dry town and the attorney general's office holds that it must remain dry as a majority of all the votes cast must be in favor of license before the saloons can start doing business there again.

The twin city papers always refer to Albert Kaiser as being the strongest candidate in the field for the office of state treasurer, and that he is going into the convention with the solid support of the northwest corner of the state. Circumstances are such, however, that, while Mr. Kaiser may receive the vote of the delegations from this section, due to local pride, it will be luke warm. His strength is due entirely to the support given to him by Senator A. D. Stephens, of Crookston, and Mr. Stephens, owing to his pronounced anti-county option views, is quite likely not going to manipulate matters in this section as of old. Beltrami county is about the only anti-county option county in this section of the state. Clearwater, which is the home of Kaiser, is strong for county option; Polk, the home of Senator Stephens, is for county option, but will probably send an anti-county option delegation, while the counties of Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Red Lake and Norman are almost sure to be for county option. In the southern part of the Ninth district, Otter Tail is sure to be for county option with Becker, Wilkin and Clay doubtful.

Great Northern to Get Busy.

The Minneapolis Journal of Tuesday published a long article regarding new railroads to be constructed in the Northwest this year. Regarding the Great Northern the Journal says:

"While official determination has not been announced, it is known that the Great Northern has in mind for this year a number of improvements and betterments of importance for the northern Minnesota field."

This might mean that the large number of ties now being piled up here by the Great Northern are to be used in making some improvement in the vicinity of Thief River Falls.

Can See Comet Now.

Those who have good spyglasses or an ordinary opera glass can get a glimpse of Halley's comet these evenings, according to advices from Washington, if conditions are favorable. These instructions have recently been given:

"The most favorable time to look for the comet is between 6:30 and 7:30 p. m., with the glass elevated somewhat above the point where the sun sets.

"The comet is at present in what the astronomers call the 'twilight region' and its brightness is therefore dimmed. It will be visible all through April and May, but at its maximum brilliancy on May 18. When the comet is nearest the earth, it will be only about 14,000,000 miles away".

PEOPLE FAVOR BONDS

A Large Majority Cast in Favor of Bonds at Election Held Tuesday.

Most of the Opposition on the East Side and Very Little on the West Side.

By a very decisive vote, the people of of Thief River Falls on Tuesday went upon record as being in favor of issuing the bonds of the city to the amount of $25,000 to complete the auditorium and make other improvements. There were not many who were expressing their opinion as to the outcome, and it was not easy to tell in advance of the voting what the result would be. Most of the opposition to the bonds was on the East Side and more than one half of the vote against the bonds in the entire city was polled over there. The following is the result:

	Against	For
First Ward	59	202
Second Ward	14	65
Third Ward	82	90
Total	155	357

The vote was quite large considering the fact that no great effort was made to get the voters to the polls. There had been a full discussion of the matter and most everyone had made up their minds the day before election how they were going to vote.

The voting of the bonds of the city means that the bonds for the proposed new high school will now carry without opposition.

School Notes.

The following set of questions in physics was used in the written test for the month of March: (1) Tell how to make an electromagnet. (2) Write the formula for resistance, and tell what each symbol represents. (3) Make drawings to show the series and parallel grouping of cells, and write the equations. (4) Make a drawing showing the essential parts and winding of a two-pole shunt wound dynamo. (5) A galvanometer whose resistance is 10,000 ohms has its binding posts joined by a shunt wire of 100 ohms. What is the combined resistance between the binding posts? What must be the resistance of a set of resistance coils carrying a current of 10 amperes and showing a fall of potential between its terminals of 150 volts?

The system of securing and caring for the text books in the local schools is as follows: The books are purchased from the school book companies at the state price, which is the same for all districts in the state. On arrival they are numbered and labeled with name of district and date of purchase. A record is maintained of all purchases, and the teachers are debited with all books which enter their rooms and are credited for same when they are returned to the library. The late given the pupils are also carefully booked. No name or mark of any kind is permitted to be placed in or on the text by a student, and to enforce this regulation the books are examined weekly by the teachers. Mending material is also supplied each instructor. It might be added that the text book library contains twelve sets of primers, the same of first readers and about as many sets for each of the succeeding grades, so that a generous supply is always on hand. Occasionally a leaf gets torn or lost and two children may use the same book temporarily, but this is the exception, as new books of the latest issue are constantly being purchased. It costs the district about 50 cents per year for each pupil in the Thief River schools under this free system of text books.

High school board examinations are being held throughout the state this week in the four common subjects and in higher algebra and solid geometry.

The Warren high school basket ball team defeated the locals last Friday evening by the narrow margin of two points The season closes next Tuesday evening when several finals will be played.

Every public enterprise is a prolific source of comment and criticism and it is well that this is so; but when idle chatter, half truths and even deliberate falsehood and slander are bandied from mouth to mouth by mischief making gossips, it is time that sober citizens called a halt. If you hear it about the schools and school workers—and they too receive a most generous measure of the busy talebearers' attention—it is a pretty safe guess that the exact opposite is the truth.

School closes Thursday for the usual Easter week of holidays. Good Friday

Despite rumors to the contrary but few of the present corps of teachers will fail to return next year.

HaveYou a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swansey, N. H., writes:—"For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr. Mann, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disapointments.

I want to recommend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be glad to reply to inquiries regarding my case." Peoples Drug Store.

The sudden opening up of spring work in North Dakota has resulted in something of a scarcity of farm help for a few days. The present season, if it continues as it has begun, is just about a month ahead of the ordinary season in this section. Naturally laborers from the east who make an annual migration for spring and summer work have not yet arrived and this has resulted in what appears to be only a temporary scarcity of labor.

ARVID ODMANN IS POPULAR

Large Marble Bust of the Swedish Singer Has Been Placed in the Foyer of the Royal Opera in Stockholm.

SWEDEN.

Arvid Odmann's bust in marble has made its appearance in the large foyer of the Royal Opera. The bust was presented to the Royal Opera by J. Rohss of Gothenburg. Perhaps there has been no Swedish opera singer who has been so popular as Arvid Odmann and every time that the name of old "Lonkan" is referred to it is generally applauded. Mr. Odmann still appears occasionally and when he does he proves that in spite of his advanced years that he is still equal to the occasion.

In the Salvation Army's temple there were 250 poor children who were served coffee and cakes on the evening of Feb. 15. Yes, and they received more than that. They received clothing, stockings, shoes, etc., and some of the very poorest ones received small sums of money to bring home to their parents. The work of the Salvation Army in behalf of the poor people of Stockholm has proven a great boon to a number of people.

Alfred Hanson, a veteran actor of the Swedish stage, celebrated his eightieth birthday the other day. Hanson made his debut on the Swedish stage in 1852 and was a long number of years connected with the Dramatic theater in Stockholm, where he won great popularity. He was for a few years located in Helsingfors, where he also made great success. Hanson is spending the last days of his life in Osthammar.

An international Swedenborg congress will in London, England, this year commemorate the 100th anniversary of Emanuel Swedenborg. The congress will meet under the auspices of the Swedish society, which was organized in the year 1810, thirty-eight years after Swedenborg's death. In the congress will participate not only English, Swedes and Americans, but representatives from all parts of the globe are expected to attend.

The well known country apostle, P. J. Roslo, will deliver a series of lectures in Kiel, Lybeck, Hamburg, Stettin, Berlin, Leipzig and other points in Germany. Roslo came in prominence some time ago through publishing a social-pedagogic work, which has been widely read in Sweden and which has also been translated into the German language.

Tor Hedberg, the dramatist and playwright, has been appointed chief of the Dramatic theater. All rumors to the effect that Ranft would come in for consideration are groundless. The selection of Hedberg seems to suit the theater-going public in Stockholm, judging from the many favorable comments that have appeared in all the Stockholm papers.

King Gustaf was able to be up and about a week ago Friday for the first time since he rallied from his attack of appendicitis. He was able to enjoy an auto trip through the principal streets of the city and from every side he was greeted with lively ovations. He is enjoying a good appetite and will soon be in good health again.

The building of the Dramatic theater has been an expensive venture. On the building itself there has already been expended not less than 6,655,548 crowns and it will be necessary to spend some more money still before the theater will be completed.

The police authorities are importing German bloodhounds to Norrland. They believe that they will be in better position to hunt criminals by means of the bloodhounds, as this part of the country is so sparsely settled.

NORWAY.

It has come to light through the leading newspapers of Christiania that the white slave traffic is being promoted in Trondhjem. It has been learned on good authority that both Norwegian and Swedish girls have been induced to emigrate to America by alleged Mormons. The immigrant commission has been informed of this obnoxious traffic and are doing everything in their power to put a stop to it. The Norwegian commission is co-operating with the immigration commission at all Swedish ports, and are also in co-operation with the immigration authorities in New York city. Not everything has been brought to light regarding this pernicious traffic, through which innocent Scandinavian girls are led to ruin. These agents have been working under the guise of religion, aiming to induce the women to believe that they will be given a good home and occupation in America, to which country most of them emigrate.

Hans Jaeger, the Norwegian author-anarchist, died recently in Christiania, aged fifty-five years. As is well known he caused much trouble during the latter part of the '80s through publishing a book entitled "Christiania Bohemians," which, after it had run through its first edition, was suppressed by the authorities. He was sent to prison, but managed to effect an escape and finally landed in Paris, where, ohwever, he was arrested three years later by Norwegian detectives. He returned with them to Christiania and served his full term in prison. Since then he has been leading a roving life, dividing his time between the capitals of Europe. In the meantime he has written a series of novels, which have been characterized for their erratic and reckless depictions of Utopian ideas. At all events, he was an extremely interesting and forceful writer, and there were many people who read his books.

King Haakon made a trip a short time ago up to the Lofoten Islands, where thousands of fishermen are at present engaged in garnering the season's catch. The yield this year is said to be a very large one, and the king has often expressed a desire to study the fishing industry at close range. A rather pleasing feature about it is that the king makes it a point to become personally acquainted with the fishermen and learn about their work and family interests. There are a number of poor fisher folk in Norway and last year the king made a donation to their insurance fund amounting to 2,000 crowns.

A million dollar electric iron and steel plant is about to be established in Hardanger by a syndicate which is headed by such noted mining engineers as Collet and Hartman, both of whom have been prominent in securing profitable British mining interests in Norway. In october next the syndicate contemplates using the water power of the Tyssefaldene, consisting of 4,400 horse-power, and will establish a power station in Mensvang, which will be erected at an expenditure of two million crowns. The annual product of steel which the syndicate shall be enabled to turn out will not be less than 6,500 tons.

A strict and careful examination of all imported meats, especially from Germany and America, is at present being conducted at all Norwegian ports. During the past two years so much spoiled meat arrived from foreign ports to Norway that the storthing appointed a committee to make rigid investigations at all ports. The result of this has been that a representative of the government will be found conducting an examination of all imported meats at each port.

Although six years have passed there has not as yet been rendered a satisfactory account of the funds which were collected for the Aalesund fire sufferers. A committee of investigation has been appointed and expert accountants have been engaged for the purpose of arriving at some satisfactory conclusion. It will be remembered that large sums of money were sent from America, England, Germany and Denmark.

Mrs. Sarah Bull, widow of the famous violinist, Ole Bull, has, together with her daughter, Mrs. Olear Bull Vaughan, subscribed a sum of 5,000 crowns for the well known Ole Bull Fund. This money will constitute a stipend for deserving actors and actresses, and also deserving musicians. The fund has already grown to be a considerable one and amounts at present to about 125,000 crowns.

Recent reports state that several hundred reindeer have come in from Swedish territory to the Norwegian side and more of them are arriving every day. This will cause new trouble for the boundary commission, and now comes the question of driving out the reindeer and securing a satisfactory indemnity from the Swedish government for the damage done.

According to Parisian papers, Bjornson is slowly improving and the chances are that he might rally, although his physicians hold out no immediate hopes for any permanent relief. His wife and son are constantly at his bedside.

Abel Lind, one of Norway's oldest men, died the other day at his home in Lefoten, aged 113 years. He was at the time of his death the oldest man in the country.

DENMARK.

Anna Larssen, the famous Copenhagen actress, who left the Danish stage about three years ago on account of religious scruples, will appear again next season at one of the Copenhagen theaters. She is an accomplished actress, and the theater-going public of the capital will be glad to know that she has consented to return to the stage.

Recent storms and floods caused damage in the western part of Jylland amounting to 750,000 crowns. Many families were rendered homeless, and subscriptions for their sustenance in the immediate future have been taken at all the large cities of Denmark.

SALE OF LIQUOR IN SWEDEN

Figures Show a Remarkable Consumption of Alcoholic Spirits— Sweden Has More Liquor Laws Than Other Countries.

SWEDEN.

Sweden has more liquor laws, regulations and ways of dealing with the sale of liquors than any other country, and at the same time it exceeds most nations in its number of inebriates among the working classes, while a sister kingdom, Denmark, has almost no laws or regulations upon the subject and very little drunkenness, as paradoxical as this condition may seem. A Swedish paper states that M. Andro, the able director of the Gothenburg "bolag," has pointed out the remarkable fact that whereas the consumption of alcoholic spirits in Sweden amounted to 4.5 liters per unit of population, in Norway to 2.69 and in Denmark to 10.87. The number of those arrested for drunkenness in the capital of Denmark amount to 7,797, or 20 per 1,000 inhabitants; in the capital of Sweden to 11,232, of 37 per 1,000, and in the capital of Norway to 17,083 or 75 per 1,000 inhabitants; and yet the population of Copenhagen formed 19 per cent of the whole population of Denmark, whereas that of Christiania forms 10 per cent of Norway's and that of Stockholm's merely 6 per cent of Sweden's. He explains this by referring to the different customs and the national character of the three countries. There are two kinds of licenses to sell spirits in Sweden. The first is called "on," where spirits are served with or without food, and must be drunk upon the premises. The second is styled "off," where all spirits are sold in bottles, but not in less quantities than one liter (a quart), and must not be opened in the shop. The first is a bar license and is used by the bars in the "bolags," the hotels, restaurants, and cafes allowed to sell liquor. The second is a retail license and is used by the shops selling spirits in bottles. There are many liquor wholesale houses in Sweden, but these need no licenses, and as for thousands of shops, hotels, cafes, etc., serving and selling beers, of course, there is no license required, as beer is a free article of commerce and thousands of shops sell it in connection with other goods. Besides all hotels, cafes, etc., which sell beer there are over 500 "off beer shops" in Gothenburg alone, with seventy-nine regular beer bars and also many "small beer" places, and beer is sold all over Sweden just as tea or coffee, no prohibiting law in any section affecting beer or wine.

A small pamphlet was recently issued in Sweden by one of the commercial clubs which discusses the matter of emigration to other countries. Among other things it gives four reasons as the leading causes of strong immigration from that country, and it is rather strange too that the public schools are blamed. The reasons given are the following: 1. That the curriculum of studies in the public schools is not sufficiently practical. 2. That the instruction is not thorough enough, too superficial. 3. That the courses contain hardly anything in national economics. 4. That the children are not made to realize that they have a country worthy of their zeal. We believe that there is another reason which the people of Sweden have learned, but not in their schools, and that is that their friends and relatives in other countries acquire dollars where those in the home country hardly acquire cents. We believe that as soon as people can make more money in Sweden they will be in a better position in every respect and then there will be a decided falling off so far as immigration is concerned. At any rate the immigration problem is worrying a good many of the leading men in Sweden and there is no telling where it will all end, if people continue to emigrate at the rate that they are doing at the present time.

Within a short time Sweden has lost two of her prominent men through death. One was one of twelve bishops of the state church of Sweden, namely Bishop O. N. T. Ahnfelt, of the diocese of Lindkoping. He died of lung trouble last month. He had not attained a very great age, being only fifty-five years old and bishop of the diocese only since 1907. He was ordained to the ministry in 1881, was professor of theology at the university in Lund many years, where he taught the various branches. He is said to have been a man of simple and pious habits, avoiding pomp and show as much as possible. He was firm in his convictions and had nothing in common with the modern higher criticism. The other prominent figure in Swedish circles who recently departed this life was John Borjesson of Stockholm, an artist of no mean reputation. He was known as a painter and sculptor. Among some of his works are "The Rolling Players," "The Sea Nymphs" and "The Fisher Boy at Capri," which were executed in Rome. Among some of his statuary are Karl Gustaf X in Malmo, Karl XI at Karlskrona, and Karl IX at Gothenburg. He attained an age of seventy-four years.

Dr. Sven Hedin has, on the recommendation of the American Geographical society, been awarded the Elisha Kent Kane gold medal from the University of Pennsylvania. This is the first time in its history that the Pennsylvania institution has honored a Swedish explorer.

NORWAY.

Captain Otto Sverdrup, the famous arctic explorer, is at present in the United States, having come to America principally for the purpose of consulting with business associates in New York and Minneapolis about a whaling venture in the arctic regions. The expedition will not be for scientific purposes, but principally to capture whales and walrus. Norwegian papers announce that Captain Sverdrup has a whaling vessel under construction at Halfsen's shipyards in Porsgrund, Norway, which will be ready before the summer. He planned originally to extend his cruise along the east coast of Greenland, but it is now said that he intends to work out from Alaska. Captain Sverdrup was the sailing master of the Fram, which carried Dr. Nansen on his famous drift from the New Siberian Islands to the new farthest north. After Dr. Nansen and his companions left the vessel, Sverdrup navigated successfully out of the drift ice and reached civilization about the same time as Nansen. Desiring to establish a name for himself, Captain Sverdrup later organized an expedition to the north. He explored and charted the northeast coast of Greenland, but made no attempt to reach the pole. From a scientific standpoint his venture was highly successful. In recent years Captain Sverdrup has been interested in founding a Norwegian colony in Cuba and has been engaged in various commercial enterprises.

The Scandinavian-American Line steamer United States, from Copenhagen, was grounded off Christiania, says a telegram from there dated March 15, but has not at any time been in any serious danger. The telegram says: We grounded in a dense fog. There was no panic. The life boats were put in readiness, but it was soon seen that there was no danger to be feared. On examination we found a large hole under the water line and the pumps were kept at work. When the fog cleared five steamers arrived and took off all the passengers, transferring them to Christiania. A liner was ordered from Copenhagen to take third-class passengers to New York, the first and second class passengers were sent to British ports to re-embark. The work of unloading the steamer progressed splendidly preparatory to making an attempt to refloat her.

The immense ship tonnage of Norway means a large import and export business. In 1906 Norway went to Great Britain for $23,917,377 worth of goods, and sent into that country goods to the value of $23,857,200, while she sent to America $1,474,300 worth of goods. From Australia the Norwegians bought only $25 worth of goods and they exported to that country goods valued at $959,777 for 1906.

The railway mileage of Norway, including 251 miles of private lines, is 1,605, while the length of telegraphs and telephones belonging to the state is over 10,000 miles. The mercantile marine is important and marvelous for a little nation of only 2,350,365 people, there being over 7,600 vessels, with a tonnage above 1,550,000.

The Aftenposten (Christiania) professes to believe that the United States desires to annex the Spitzbergen islands and devotes a lengthy article on the subject. Little has been heard regarding this in the United States and the chances are the rumor has no foundation whatsoever.

The emperor of Germany is popular in Aalesund, Norway. A statue will be raised in his honor in a conspicuous place in that city in the near future.

DENMARK.

With very few rich people and practically no pauperism, the people of Denmark seem to be contented and prosperous. Denmark last year exported to Great Britain alone butter to the value of the vast sum of $48,777,775, and bacon to the amount of $26,690,445, while eggs amounted to $7,750,000, which accounts for these dainty foods being plentiful in London, as well as popular. While Denmark is noted for its small holdings and for its many families who own their own homes, it is also a grain and live stock country, the grain yield of last year being over 100,000,000 bushels and the live stock numbering: horses, over 500,000; cattle, 2,000,000; sheep, $1,000,000, and pigs, $1,500,000. The mercantile marine numbers over 4,178 vessels and the tonnage exceeds 520,000. There are more than 1,879 miles of railway—mostly state railways—and 3,950 miles of telegraph lines.

A recent telegram from Copenhagen says: "Russia's establishment of secret police bureaus here and at Stockholm to watch Finnish politicians on their journeys abroad, is threatening trouble between the Danish and Swedish governments on one side and the St. Petersburg foreign office on the other. Neither the Danish nor the Swedish government's authorization was asked and the secret agents are being maintained without a word of explanation. The agents' interference with Finnish travelers in Denmark and Sweden has been so open as to cause embarrassment. Several have complained of the ransacking of their papers and overhauling their luggage on trains and boats in Danish and Swedish territory.

THREE MEN GO THROUGH ICE

Triple Drowning Occurs on the Embarrass River.

Three men were drowned in the Embarrass river, two of them in an endeavor to save the other.

August Swanson, Peter Hatland and Jacob Linsted of Biwabik were on their way to a camp to go fishing and when crossing the river Swanson broke through the ice. He was burdened with a pack sack. Hatland and Linsted hastened to assist him and they both went in.

Gust Johnson was the only spectator of the tragedy. He hurried to the river and, procuring a pole, tried to rescue the drowning men, but without success. Johnson came near losing his life also.

Swanson was the mine blacksmith at the Biwabik and is survived by a widow and three children. Hatland was thirty years old and single and Linsted was fifty years old and married. The bodies were recovered.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH

Father Almost Loses His Life in Trying to Save Them.

The home of Fred Anholm, situated near Finland, was destroyed by fire and two children aged seven and eight years, were cremated and Mr. Anholm was severely burned and had a narrow escape himself.

When Mr. Anholm was awakened by the fire the house was ablaze. He saved his wife and baby and then hurried into the blazing structure to save his other three children. He was gone so long that it was feared he had been overcome, but at last emerged with one of the children in his arms. He made a noble effort, and his clothing was on fire, and he was almost ready to drop from the effects of heat and smoke when he appeared bearing the child. It was too late to make another effort and the other two children were burned to death.

The fire is supposed to have caught from an overheated stove.

LEATHER WORKERS ON STRIKE

Twin City Unions Affected by the General Order.

The leather workers in the Twin Cities, numbering in all about 350 men, are on strike, as are the men belonging to the organization throughout the country.

The principal thing that has caused the trouble is the growing agitation throughout the labor world for an eight-hour day. At present the leather workers work fifty-nine hours a week, ten hours every day but Saturday and then nine. Besides a reduction in time the men are demanding a 15 per cent increase on piece work and the same wages for shorter hours.

WARD AMES, SR., IS DEAD

Duluth Man Was Member of Largest Grain Firm in World.

Ward Ames, Sr., senior member of the firm of the Ames-Brooks company, the largest firm of grain brokers in the world, died at his home in Duluth following an attack of typhoid fever.

Mr. Ames was one of the most prominent citizens of Duluth. He was active in church and philanthropic work. He organized the firm of Ames-Brooks of Duluth and Winnipeg and was also a member of the Ames-Barnes company of New York. He was one of the pioneer members in the Duluth board of trade.

FAST TRAIN IS WRECKED

Engineer Killed in Accident Near Rogers.

The Great Northern Winnipeg flyer No. 7, northbound, was derailed just west of Rogers. Engineer Conley of St. Paul was killed.

The flyer was proceeding about thirty miles an hour. The engine, mail, baggage, smoking car and diner left the track. The engine ignited the mail car, which, with the baggage car, turned over on the side. Passengers rallied to the assistance of the train crew and saved the mail and baggage.

FRAUD CASES ARE OUTLAWED

Prosecutor Refuses Warrants in Insurance Scandal.

Application for four warrants for fraternal insurance frauds was made to County Attorney Smith of Hennepin county by Attorneys Hall of St. Paul and Winthrop of Minneapolis. They were refused on the ground that all four cases were barred by the statute of limitations. The right of action expired last November.

Bede May Oppose Clapp.

J. Adam Bede, former congressman from the Eighth district, may be a candidate for election as United States senator to succeed Moses E. Clapp. Mr. Bede has returned from a two months' trip to the Pacific coast and has not had an opportunity to study the situation, but he said that he believes there is a chance for a solid Taft Republican to go to the senate from Minnesota.

Switchmen to Continue Fight.

The striking switchmen on Northwestern roads will continue their fight to a finish. This was the decision reached at a meeting held by the union leaders at St. Paul. The recommendation of the state board of arbitration to call the strike off was emphatically rejected.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

MANY NOTABLE MEN PRESENT

Conservation and Development Congress at St. Paul.

One of the greatest progressive movements in the history of the state was successfully inaugurated when Governor A. O. Eberhart formally called to order the first Minnesota Conservation and Agricultural Development congress in the Auditorium at St. Paul. When the governor arose he faced an audience composed of 1,500 delegates, representing every county and almost every township in the state of Minnesota.

When the governor called the meeting to order he introduced Archbishop Ireland as the presiding officer. The rest of the morning was taken up with Archbishop Ireland's address, the appointment of committees and transaction of the business of organization. The feature of the afternoon session was addresses by Governor Eberhart as president of the congress; Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, and Professor Albert Woods, dean of the State Agricultural college. A special session on "Farm Conservation Problems," with Senator S. D. Works presiding, was held at 4 o'clock and in the evening P. V. Collins presided while the speakers were Mrs. Margaret J. Blair, instructor in domestic science at the agricultural college; Max Toltz, consulting engineer of the Great Northern railroad; Professor Frederick E. Clements of the state university and George Otis Smith, director of the United States geological survey. Director Smith used a stereopticon in his address to illustrate the "People's Part in Conservation."

Second Day's Proceedings.

The second day of the congress was more largely attended than the first, while in the exhibit rooms scores of visitors inspected the displays. Not a small part of the crowd attended especially to hear James J. Hill, who has for years been preaching the doctrine of conservation, rotation of crops, scientific farming and economy in production and who has demonstrated the soundness of his theories by putting them into practical use at his farm.

President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific railroad was in the chair at the morning session and President Cyrus Northrop of the state university presided at the afternoon session. The general subject of the morning's session was "The Agricultural Development of the State of Minnesota." Professor E. V. Robinson of the University of Minnesota was the first speaker on "Minnesota's Farm and Soil Resources," and Mr. Hill followed him on "Minnesota's Agricultural Opportunities." The closing address of the morning session was by Professor A. E. Chamberlain, superintendent of the Farmers' Institute, Brookings, S. D., and Professor A. D. Wilson, holding the same position in Minnesota, spoke for this side of the state line in the afternoon.

At the special session of the congress at 4 o'clock in the afternoon "The Live Stock and Dairy Interests of Minnesota" was the general topic of a number of papers by various authorities on the subject. The evening session was devoted to "State Advertising and Settlement of Farm Lands."

The committee on permanent organization, in its report, recommended that the congress be made a permanent affair and the report was adopted, the present officers to retain their positions during the ensuing year.

In the Interest of Good Roads.

The third day's session of the conservation congress was notable for many things. The Minnesota Roadmakers' association was organized and in addition an all day good roads section was held, with meetings in the morning, afternoon and evening.

Women figured prominently in the day's session of the general section of the congress, the discussions relating to agricultural and industrial education, pure food, public health and sanitation. At a special session in the afternoon "Woman's Part in Conservation" was discussed by a number of women speakers.

Two speakers of national reputation participated in the day's programme, Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, and D. J. Crosby, specialist in agricultural education.

"Forestry and Mines" was the subject of the morning session of the fourth day of the congress, with W. O. McGonagle, president of the Duluth, Missabe and Northern railroad, in the chair. The 2 o'clock session was on "Drainage and Water Powers," the 4 o'clock session on "Better Farming in Minnesota" and in the evening Governor Eberhart presided over the closing session, the programme for which was miscellaneous, and included a special address by Mrs. Perry Starkweather, assistant state labor commissioner in charge of women and children, on "The Welfare of the Child."

The resolutions adopted by the congress are broad and cover practically every subject of importance touched during the convention.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

A new street railroad company for the Twin Cities, to be known as the Minneapolis and St. Paul Suburban Railroad company, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The object of the new company, according to the articles of incorporation, among other things, is "to operate as a common carrier of freight, express or passengers partly or wholly as an elevated railway system between the business centers of Minneapolis and St. Paul" and it is taken to mean that in the not far distant future an elevated service will be in operation between the cities.

That the manufacture of peat for fuel may be one of the big industries of this state was shown when the Peat Fuel Manufacturing company, with headquarters at Fertile, Polk county, filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $250,000. G. N. Bigelow of New Hampton, Ia., is president and all the incorporators are residents of Iowa.

According to the state dairy and food department an infallible test of the food value of a fish may be found in the eyes. If the eyes are dim and sunken, says Commissioner Andrew French, it is best to let the fish alone. In the past few days a number of fish have been destroyed in St. Paul and Minneapolis by the department and the crusade continues.

To promote interest in the raising of blooded cattle and swine in Minnesota the state fair board managers have raised the premium list $10,000, bringing the total list to nearly $60,000. The raise affects principally the cattle and swine, though largely dairy cattle, and is so fixed as to apply to Minnesota breeders.

Sixty-five of the 1,200 men at Fort Snelling have volunteered to submit to anti-typhoid inoculation and the treatment will be administered within the next ten days by Colonel W. D. Ballinger, in charge of the medical department at the post.

J. E. Rogers of Minneapolis has completed real estate transactions which will result in the erection in St. Paul of a vaudeville house, similar to the Unique in Minneapolis, ready to open Sept. 1. The total investment will be $350,000.

The next legislature will in all probability be called upon to make an appropriation for an administration building to be used in connection with the capitol for boards of various kinds which cannot find room in the present building.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

To have their place of business entered by burglars three nights in succession was too much for the patience of Gene Villas and Andrew Antonopulos, proprietors of the Greek tavern at Minneapolis, so, with Patrolman John Belair, they awaited the fourth visit and caught a man who at police headquarters gave the name of George Narouchor.

A homesteader named Palmquist of the Bear river country, north of the Mesaba range, is under arrest on a charge of attempting to kill his wife. They quarreled and it is alleged he shot her with a 32-caliber revolver, the bullet lodging in her hip.

Arthur Frances, a farmer living south of Granite Falls, was killed by a runaway team. He was addicted to drink and was under the influence of liquor when he left town for home. He was found dead with the wagon box lying across his neck.

Bert Anderson, twenty-one years old, living with his widowed mother and a sister on a farm six miles north of Anoka, became dispirited because of the illness of all three of the family. He went to the kitchen and killed himself by shooting.

Henry Tostenson, aged fifty-five years, a farmer living sixteen miles north of Montevideo, fell out of his wagon on his way home and was found dead by the roadside some hours later. A wife and eleven children survive.

Clarence, the ten-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Snow of St. Paul Park, suffered a broken neck when a high chair in which he was sitting fell to the floor. Death was instantaneous.

The body of Charles J. Green was found a short distance east of MacLeod. Several days previous Green started to walk home, a distance of seven miles, and was frozen to death.

Despondent over numerous disappointments Nellie Nelson of St. Paul ended her life by taking 100 corrosive sublimate tablets. Two are sufficient to cause death.

Take notice that you are in default, under and according to the terms, conditions, and provisions of that certain contract, dated the tenth day of June, A. D., 1907, whereby Thomas L. Stordalen of Carthage, South Dakota, agreed to convey unto you, upon full and timely performance by you of your part of the terms, conditions and provisions thereof, reference to which contract for more particularity is hereby made, of the following described real estate in the city of Thief River Falls, County of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: Lots fourteen [14], fifteen [15] and sixteen [16] of Block three [3], in Porter's Addition to Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat thereof; and that according to the terms, conditions, and provisions of said contract there became due and payable from you to said Thomas L. Stordalen on the 1st day of September, 1907, the sum of $200.00, and on the first day of each and every month thereafter to and including the first day of July, 1909, the further sums of fity dollars each month aforesaid, in all, thirteen hundred dollars, with interest on each and all of said sums at six per cent per annum from the tenth day of June, 1907; and at the date of this notice said amount of $1300.00 and interest as aforesaid still remains overdue and unpaid, and such default as above specified still exists.

And whereas said Thomas L. Stordalen has by good and sufficient deed sold and conveyed unto the undersigned, Martine Stordalen, all his right, title, and interest in and to said premises, subject to said contract, and has by assignment in writing duly executed, sold and assigned unto the said undersigned all his right, title and interest in and to said contract above described, and the debt secured thereby, and the said undersigned is now the owner of said premises and contract and his successor in interest therein. Now, therefor, You are hereby notified, that unless on or before thirty days after the service of this notice upon you, you pay to Martine Stordalen at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, or for her to Chas. E. Boughton, her attorney, at his office in city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, the sum of $1300.00 aforesaid with interest thereon at six per cent per annum since June 10th, 1907, to date of payment, and pay the cost of service of this notice upon you, and thus comply with the provisions of said contract on your part to be performed said contract will be cancelled and terminated and all your right, title, and interest thereunder, and in and to the land and property covered thereby, forfeited and annulled. THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

GIVES US POINTERS

Allen W. Clark, of Rollis, Writes an Interesting Letter to the News.

Says Thief River Falls Is Up and Coming and Has Faith in Our Future.

Fram, Minn., March 27, 1910.

Editor News:- Well, I'm home again after a red hot visit to the City. Of course I refer to Thief River. It is not as big a city now as it will be by a barrel full; and if I had a million, and wanted to get rich, I would buy all the land around it.

The train was late and when I struck the News office the paper was out and so were the boys. I went on to the Press office and found the editor right in the middle of one of his big editorials. He unwrapped enough of his mind to call the force to put me out—they were making up the forms.

After I come to, I found that the city had moved off a mile in every direction since I was there a year ago, and I struck out for the Antlers Club to find out where I was at. This, too, seemed to have moved out of town and I wound up at the Hotel Evelyn and interviewed the cook.

I never saw a town in which so much public spirit was running to waste as in Thief River. What you need is more weight on your safety valve and more concentration. Every man in it thinks his town is going to be a prodigy, but he is waiting for somebody else to start the boost.

I got through the night without anybody going through me, and in the morning went through the town, with the president of the council, Mr. Forder, on one side and the editor of a live-wire paper on the other.

The new Auditorium was the point we made for. And it was "shorly wuth seein'". The beautiful tiling looked too pretty to walk on. And the stage and auditorium! Who would expect, coming from the East, to find such a fine structure, remembering that dismal old den, the Market Hall, which answered St. Paul for so many years, in a town of the size of Thief River?

But nature is not only lavish in her soil blessings in Northern Minnesota. She has furnished it with live men who DO things. Forty thousand more for high school buildings, Mr. Forder tells me. Nothing small about that for a town which has now one of the biggest and best high schools that can be found in the state.

Yes, Thief River Falls has grown some since I landed there in the first rain storm the country had in 1900. It rained all the time from that day until winter, and snowed every day till spring. Muddy as it was, the town looked good to me even then, and I had a good notion to wait there till Frank Kratka opened his reservation, but I didn't, and I am not sorry, for we, too, have some country around Fram, and I think I'll put my million in land right around here, when Mr. Arpin gets it drained for us.

I was glad to see so live a man in the push as Mr. Forder is, and knowing him for more than 40 years, I don't look for any back-tracking in the future progress of a live town, which I trust will recover from the effects of my visit in time to take care of the biggest spring boom in its history. And Teddy right on us!

Respectfully,
A. W. Clark.

G. N. Lets Big Contract.

A contract for the construction of 225 miles of Great Northern railroad from Surrey, a point in North Dakota near Minot, to Fargo, has been let to the Guthrie company of St. Paul, and work upon the construction will be begun within a few days.

CASE WAS DISMISSED

Claimed by Plaintiff That Jury in Case of Rose Against State Was Unfair One.

Rose Has Been Again Arrested, This Time Under the State Law.

The case of the state against W. E. Rose, the alleged proprietor of a resort across the Great Northern track, which was set for trial on Saturday, was dismissed upon the request of Mrs. Ben Christianson, the complaining witness, upon the ground that the jury that had been selected to try the case was not one in sympathy with the prosection.

Immediately thereafter, however, a new warrant was sworn out for the arrest of Rose, Mrs. Julia Rollis, president of the local W. C. T. U., this time being the complaining witness. This warrant was issued for violating the state law, which is much more severe than the city ordinance. Judge Bishop set Wednesday, April 6, at ten o'clock as the date for the hearing. The bail was fixed at $1,000 and Rose deposited this amount in cash with the court for his appearance and was released. It is understood that the W. C. T. U. ladies, who are prosecuting the case, now claim to have secured some direct testimony, which will be introduced next Wednesday.

Owing to the fact that Judge Bishop has been accused of being prejudiced against Rose, he will not hear the testimony, but will ask Special Municipal Judge Richardson to preside.

The case is attracting a great deal of interest and there will surely be a large attendance at the trial.

GETTING TO THE FRONT

Local Men Organize a New Company to Engage in the Grain Trade.

Headquarters to Be in Thief River Falls and Business in the West.

As will be noticed by articles of incorporation published in another column, the Montana & Dakota Grain company is the name of a new corporation that will have headquarters in Thief River Falls and will be controlled by local capital. The incorporators are Louis Hanson, Math. Barzen, C. J. and D. N. Winton and M. J. Dunn, of Culbertson, Mont. The incorporators are largely the owners of the stock of the Hanson & Barzen Milling company, and the business of the two concerns will be closely related. A line of elevators now owned in Western North Dakota and Eastern Montana by the Hanson & Barzen company, are to be taken over by the new company and also a number of new elevators are to be built in that section. Much of the wheat purchased out there will be brought to this city and manufactured into flour here.

The Hanson & Barzen Milling company is one of the leading concerns of this section of the state and is ever pushing to the front. The stockholders are among the most loyal citizens of Thief River Falls and it is with much pride that the people here witness their success and achievements.

Look for the Comet.

Halley's comet can now be seen with the naked eye. On Sunday it passed from the evening to the morning sky and will remain in the morning sky for a period of about seven weeks, and during that time it will swing about and come rapidly toward the earth, and the earth will go rapidly toward it, so that its size and magnificence will rapidly increase.

It will certainly be seen in the morning sky very early in April, and the comet will develop rapidly and the excitement will rise correspondingly.

On the 18th of May the comet crosses back into the evening sky and will be about that time at its biggest and nearest to earth. It is about that time also that earth and moon are expected to pass through the comet's tail. In that period there will be ten days or so of wonderful evening views, after which the comet will rapidly retire into space and fade away from view.

Building a Big Tank.

Work was commenced the first of the week by A. M. Arpin of the construction of a 20,000 gallon gasoline tank in the Soo yards. The tank will be much larger than that of the Standard Oil company's here and will be used to store the gasoline used by the numerous ditching machines Mr. Arpin's company will have in operation in this section during the next few years. Mr. Arpin has made arrangements with a concern in Oklahoma to supply gasoline for his engines.

Had a Good Write-Up.

The Sunday Minneapolis Journal contained a two page story nicely illustrated regarding the ditching operations now under way in this section of the state. It is expected that the article will result in bringing thousands of new settlers to this section. As a matter of fact there is no section in the United States or Canada that is offering such opportunities to people in search of farm lands and homes as this section.

Work to Be Rushed.

All along the Thief River Falls division of the Soo line, construction work has been resumed and contractors have large crews on their contracts. While some of the grade will not be finished until Aug. 1, the Soo officials say that the entire Thief River Falls division will be graded and the steel will be laid in time to assist in hauling the Northern Minnesota and North Dakota wheat crop to Duluth and Superior.—Duluth Herald.

Watch For This Man.

Look out for the traveling agent who is working now in Northern Iowa and is likely to come into Minnesota. He is selling Fire Extinguishers to the farmers.

Fire extinguishers are very useful appliances on the farm. They are more needed on the farm than they are in town where there is a fire department available, but the methods of this sharper have nothing to do with the specific merits of fire extinguishers apparently. It is reported that his method is to leave a number of his extinguishers with a farmer, offering the farmer a commission if he can sell any to his neighbors. He presents the farmer with a paper purporting to be a receipt for the goods in charge, but later it turns out to be a note for $100 or more and the farmer has to pay it.

Of course it is the old game, worn threadbare, and the farmer who signs a piece of paper without reading it ought to pay for his experience. We simply call the matter to the attention of our readers, hoping that they will not sign without reading.

Miss Zaiser to Wed.

Friends in this city have received from Mrs. B. Zaiser invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Henrietta Bertha, to Mr. Charles L. Weiser. The wedding will occur at the home of the bride's mother in Merriam Park, Wednesday, April 6, and the young people will reside in Merriam Park. According to a report issued by Supt. of Schools Anderson there are 4,397 pupils enrolled in the schools of Red Lake county. Over one-fourth of this number are attending the schools of Thief River Falls. No wonder we need a new school building.

As will be noticed by an advertisement in another column, the local school district is calling for bids for the construction of the new high school building. The matter of voting the $38,000 of bonds is to be voted upon Saturday evening, and as there does not appear to be any opposition, the school board is advertising for the erection of the building in order to gain a week's time.

The English Grand Opera Singers and Symphony orchestra who gave a concert at the Lyceum theatre last week has been pronounced the best organization appearing in this city for some time, and was greeted by a good sized audience. Miss Rush, who sang passages from some of the grand operas, executed her difficult parts with remarkable ability, and was ably supported by her company. The selections by the Symphony orchestra are equally deserving of an abundance of praise, and especially were the selections by Miss Ange, violinist, and Mr. Kirschner, flutist, encored. The management of the Lyceum have secured Miss Jessie Marie Biggers, entertainer, as their next attraction, to appear on the evening of April 15.

To Initiate a Big Class.

The local Camp of Modern Woodmen of America held a smoke social at the lodge hall last Thursday night at which about 75 members and their friends participated. It was a most enjoyable occasion and it was long after midnight ere they departed. We understand that the local camp have voted on over 35 new applications and that they are making preparations for a class of one hundred new members which will be initiated into the mysteries of Woodcraft in the near future. All the surrounding camps will be asked to participate on the occasion and will no doubt be the biggest Woodmen day that Northwestern Minnesota has seen. As soon as complete arrangements have been made full details will be given.

Information Wanted.

Inquiries are being made here regarding the whereabouts of J. A. Hall, who left Lemmon, S. D., for Thief River Falls about three weeks ago to purchase horses. Nothing has been heard of him since and his family fear that he has met foul play, and would greatly appreciate any information. He is described as being rather slight, about six feet tall, with black mustache.

Bids Wanted.

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the clerk of the school board of Independent School District No. 18, Thief River Falls, Minnesota, up to 1 o'clock p. m., April 16, 1910, for the erection and completion of a high school building. Separate bids will be received on heating and plumbing, at same time and place, and all bids to be made out on bidder's blank.

Plans and specifications may be seen at Clerk's office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota; and at the office of Fremont D. Orff, Architect, 616 Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., after April 4th, 1910.

Contractors applying for plans, will leave a certified check for $25 on heating and plumbing, and $50 on general plans with the parties from whom they obtain plans as a guarantee that they will return plans at the time agreed upon, and that they will put in a bid to Clerk of school board with certified check as called for.

If this has been complied with the $25 and $50 checks will be returned on opening of bids and return of plans to office. Each bid of whatever kind it may be is to be accompanied by a certified check of 5 per cent of amount of bid as a guarantee of good faith in carrying out of contract. The right to reject any and all bids is reserved.

By order of the School Board, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

G. A. Penney,
Clerk.
Fremont D. Orff,
Architect.

The Women Workers of the Presbyterian Church will meet in the church parlors on Friday afternoon, April 1st at 2:30. Every member of the society is urged to be present as there is business of importance to be transacted.

There seems to be a taste in apple color differing with localities or countries, just as there is a difference in preference for eggs, white or brown in different cities. The Englishman prefers a yellow apple—the Newtown Pippin—while across the channel in France and Germany the blood red Spitzenburg is the favorite. Such preferences may be due to trivial and almost intangible causes, yet they constitute an important factor in the practical marketing of apples which are shipped from this country to Europe.

Notice.

Garbage and Manure.

All garbage and manure must be removed to the dump grounds or otherwise disposed of in proper manner by April 15, 1910.

If at any time, before or after April 15, 1910, after ten days due notice of any nuisance existing on or adjacent to any lot or parcel of land, said nuisance be not removed or abated, the health officer may proceed according to Chapter 425, Section 2 of the Statutes of the State of Minnesota, which is as follows:

"Sec. 2. If the owner, occupant or agent shall fail or neglect to comply with the requirement of said notice, then said health officer shall proceed to have the nuisance, source of filth, cause of sickness, described in said notice, removed or abated from said lot or parcel of ground and report the cost thereof to the city clerk, or other like officer, and the cost of such removal or abatement shall be assessed and charged against the lot or parcel of ground on which the nuisance, source of filth or cause of sickness was located, and the city clerk, or other like officer, shall, at the time of certifying their taxes to the county auditor, certify the aforesaid costs, and the county auditor shall extend the same on the tax roll of the county against said lot or parcel of ground, and it shall be collected by the county treasurer and paid to the city, village or township, as other taxes are collected and paid".

Health Officer.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Stanley Colburn, cashier of Colling's Uptown cafe at St. Paul, was held up by two men, who robbed the cash drawer of $300 and made their escape after shooting at the negro doortender of the place and firing seven shots at men on the street who tried to stop them. The holdup was pulled off while a number of after theater parties were in the place. The robbers were in full dress attire and wore no masks. Before the holdup they ate a big supper in the cafe and drank several bottles of wine.

The "beef trust" of the United States, embracing six great packing companies and twenty-one packers was indicted by a grand jury in Hudson county, N. J., charged with conspiracy in limiting the supply of meat and poultry. The indictment is drawn under the law of New Jersey, which provides upon conviction a maximum penalty of three years in the penitentiary or a fine of $1,000, or both.

Mrs. Alma Proctor Vaughn has been arrested at Kirksville, Mo., on a warrant charging her with the murder of her husband, Professor John T. Vaughn. She was released on $25,000 bail. Dr. J. R. Hull of Monroe City, Mo., the Proctor family physician, was arrested on a like charge and is now out on bail.

George Washington, an Indian, was killed and his wife is in a serious condition from drinking doped whisky. They reside on Fort Totten reservation in North Dakota. Three men, two of them halfbreeds named Dubois, are under arrest for the the crime.

Professor James E. Moore was painfully hurt, six students were slightly injured and most of the thirty-six members of the junior class in medicine at the Minnesota state university were bruised and cut when a portion of the wall left standing by the fire in Millard hall last Christmas eve weakened in the strong wind and crashed through the temporary roof over the third floor of the right wing into the classroom.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Laying bare the details of Pittsburg's civic disgrace, ordering indictments against thirty-one present and past councilmen and making a demand upon the directors of the city depositories to investigate their own boards and ascertain the names of bribe givers in connection with the ordinance designating their institutions as city depositories, formed the meat of two presentments made by the grand jury.

Eight weeks after it began its investigation of alleged violations of the Sherman anti-trust law the federal grand jury at Chicago returned indictments against the National Packing company and ten subsidiary concerns. Immediately upon the announcement of the indictments the goevrnment filed a suit seeking the dissolution of the National Packing company.

After holding the town of Northport, Wash., in panic for three hours, dynamiting the home of the girl with whom he was infatuated and killing the town marshal, who sought to arrest him, Martin Kloose ended his own life with a bullet when he abandoned hope of escaping.

Lying in a deserted railroad cut in Chautauqua park at Des Moines the dead bodies of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McDonald of Chicago, a bride and bridegrom of six weeks, were found. The authorities believe the husband killed his wife and then himself.

A murder and suicide occurred at Superior, Wis., when Dugal McIntosh, an engineer living at Proctor, Minn., shot Dorothy Brooks and then killed himself. The woman was the keeper of a resort and it is said McIntosh was infatuated with her.

Five women, probably the first of their sex to be indicted as violaters of an anti-trust law, are among the eighty-seven New York poultry dealers charged by the grand jury there with conspiring to restrict trade and boost prices.

Nine more men, conscience stricken over taking money for their votes, appeared before Judge Frazer at Pittsburg and, after telling all they knew of the councilmanic graft conspiracy, had sentences postponed.

A messenger boy who recently robbed the Carnegie Trust company of New York of between $20,000 and $30,000 and then eloped with a Jersey City girl has been captured at Los Angeles, Cal.

Three men were killed on a Baltimore and Ohio railroad train in Delaware following a fight between a colored porter and a drunken passenger.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The national political weathercock turned Democratward in Massachusetts when the Old Colony section, one of the Republican strongholds of the state, placed Eugene N. Foss of Boston in the congressional seat of the late William C. Lovering. Mr. Foss accomplished what was regarded as almost a political miracle, turning a Republican plurality of 14,250 into a Democratic victory of 5,840.

Prison sentences for the big packers may be the result of the federal grand jury investigation just completed at Chicago, even though they were not named in the indictment returned. These fines and sentences may be inflicted as punishment for the violation of the Grosscup injunction.

That the East as well as the West is against Speaker Cannon and the Aldrich-Payne tariff law is declared by the Chicago Tribune to be shown in the results of a poll made by the Tribune of the Republican editors of Eastern newspapers.

Capt. Bogardus again hits the Bull's Eye

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says —"I have suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and have used several well known kidney medicines all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and often-times a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this I owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my fellow sufferers". A WRONG THAT NEEDS RIGHTING

The health of Americans of the future would be vastly improved if their mothers—the army of immature girls now in school between the ages of twelve and eighteen—were to devote less time and energy to Latin, French, geometry, history and "themes" for the development of their intellects and a great deal more to home duties, work on the lawn and in the garden and to other exercise and recreation out of doors for the building up of healthy and strong physiques, upon which factor chiefly their mission as mothers and homemakers is to depend. We'll admit that this view will be considered a bit on the old fogy order by some, but it is nevertheless correct and one that will be given increased attention in the years that are just ahead. There are several things to be righted in the school system at present in vogue over the country. One of the chief of these is the turning of the usually pale faced, anemic invalids at graduation time into girls physically robust and able to take up the serious and responsible duties of life. The credit for the situation which exists is largely due to a system which makes the curricula of public schools conform to college requirements when probably less than 10 per cent of the pupils enrolled will ever go to college; partly due to the blindness of teachers wed to the system and stupidly ignorant of the fact that children at thirteen do not have the endurance of grown folks at thirty, and even more it is due to shortsighted parents who through foolish pride allow and sometimes encourage their daughters to overwork that they may stand at the head of their classes. Those collectively and individually responsible should get their heads together and evolve a more rational system that will make it possible for the girl—the finest and sweetest of God's creatures—to develop as he intended she should develop.

THE DAUGHTER IN THE HOME.

All too many mothers make the mistake of saving their daughters in every way and allowing them to do little or none of the work about the house, when this not only means increased labors for the mother, but is a shortsighted policy for the daughter and particularly for those who will in all probability later have the responsibility of a household on their hands. When daughters in the home reach the age of thirteen or fourteen they ought to take the job of washing the dishes, much of the sweeping and all of the dusting off their mothers' hands, besides being taught to do the plain sewing and mending caused by their own presence in the home. Many mothers would rather do all this work than show their daughters how, but when analyzed this attitude of the mothers is usually traceable to a lack of pains, patience and true regard for the daughters' welfare. The average girl is willing to help if taught how to do so and made to feel that the assistance that she does render is worth while.

IT PAYS.

The point is now and then raised whether it pays to sow clover with small grain, particularly oats, if one plans to plow stubble and clover under in the fall. The best opinion along this line is that it does pay, the benefit derivable from the clover turned under being quite largely proportionate to the thriftiness of the clover plants and the stand secured. Even if such a course is followed the benefit of the clover to the land rarely fails to pay for the seed. Where it is possible to allow the clover to possess the ground the following year, taking off a crop of hay in the early summer and plowing under the second growth in the fall, the benefits derived from the legume are greatly increased. This is due to the fact that the older and larger the root systems of the clover are the more extensive is the development of the nodules, which are the depositories of the nitrogen which is taken from the air. It pays to grow clover—pays for one year, but a good deal more for two.

THE SEED BED.

Next to securing good seed that will grow there is no other respect in which the tiller of the soil should exercise greater care than in the preparation of the seed bed. More farmers fall down here and lessen the capacity of their land to produce large crops to a larger extent than in any other single way. Valuable land should receive something better than this thirty cent care, which is likely practiced as generally as it is because the sinners along this line don't realize that for small grain to grow properly the bed in which it is planted must be loose enough to make possible a ready circulation of air and moisture from the surface down and from the subsoil to the surface.

Were the work that is incident to the earning of food, fuel and clothing and that involved in getting the same ready for consumption done away with everybody would have leisure and to spare, from the ditch digger and his wife up.

An experienced bee man calls attention to the interesting fact that bees always build their combs on the level and that this should be kept in mind when setting the hives and placing the supers. If these do not set level the combs will be built just so far out of true.

If cattle are compelled to remain out of doors in the wet and cold during the winter months in the daytime and at night are housed in a damp, nasty, poorly bedded place, the like of which can be found here and there, it is not surprising that they contract tuberculosis. We saw a herd not long since kept under just these conditions, and there did not seem to be a straight backed, full lunged, robust animal in the lot.

A very forceful testimony to the nutritive value of the western range grasses is the fact that during the winter months, when not snow covered, but gnawed close to the roots, it yet keeps the animals that browse on it in fair condition. Were these grasses no more nutritious than those which grow in the fat and well watered valleys of the eastern states cattle, horses and sheep would die of starvation in a few weeks.

The Colorado potato beetle, named because of the fact that it had its first home in the potato districts of that state, did but little damage in it native haunts for a number of years past until last season, when it proved a veritable scourge, in places moving in solid phalanxes and devastating many fields. While this beetle has spread in a comparatively few years over all of the central and eastern states, it strangely shows no inclination to move westward.

While the dry farming country of the west has opportunities for the man who understands the type of tillage he will have to follow and an adequate comprehension of the difficulties which will likely confront him, it is no place for any man to go who has not had brains, initiative and energy enough to succeed in the central and eastern states, where the rainfall is sufficient and where conditions are, on the whole, favorable to a successful and profitable tillage of the soil. Those who succeed in the west succeed by dint of energy and well directed effort.

An admonition that agricultural papers over the country should repeat monthly and that the would be settler on irrigated lands should keep steadfastly in mind all the time is that when land is bought in an irrigation district the terms of sale should give an absolute and unequivocal guarantee of water both in necessary quantity and at such times and seasons as it will be needed. While the soil in most all arid sections is sufficiently fertile and productive, it is worth little or nothing unless water can be got on to it. Whether the backers of this or that irrigation project are reliable and can deliver the goods in the matter of water when wanted can be quite accurately determined by inquiry cheaply made, not costing more than 2 cents, directed to the department of the interior at Washington.

An even more pathetic spectacle than any to be found in asylums for insane or feeble minded is the fellow, usually a man, who sponges off the women folk of his own tribe, who stuffs his stomach and keeps the seat of his pants patched while waiting for an inheritance, a windfall from some rich uncle or forbear. We have known of just such types who carried out this shiftless, unmanly, do-nothing policy for a period of years, acquiring habits meanwhile which caused what there was left of their patrimony to go through their fingers like water through a sieve. It is well for those who anticipate wealth of this type to realize that it requires quite as large a measure of industry and thrift to rightly handle it as to accumulate it at the start and that unless one develops such qualities inherited wealth of this type will prove but a mockery and a snare.

Effective aid could be rendered to a forest conservation policy in many states were laws passed which would exempt from taxation areas set to orchard and forest trees or would at least postpone the levying of the tax until such time as the timber was cut or the fruit trees came to bearing age. In a case of the former kind which we came across the other day the assessor called on the owner of a thrifty and promising timber lot and, under the laws operative in the state, assessed the growing timber at its full value. He had done the same the year previous and will doubtless follow the same policy in the future. The upshot of this will be that the owner will cut the immature timber down before the assessor comes around next year. There is a manifest injustice in such a course which discerning legislators ought to correct. Rather than be taxed out of existence by such a stupid and short sighted policy the taxation of timber lots ought to be so adjusted that encouragement would be given to the growing of them.

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.
You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

The Minneapolis Journal states that John Lind is being urged to run for congress in the Minneapolis district, and that if the Democrats have a majority in the next house, Mr Lind will be made speaker.

Minnesota leads all other states in the union in the manufacture of potato starch. Anoka county, which produces one-third of the total in this state, ranks above every other state in the union with the exception of Maine, in the production of potato starch.

Reports from Polk county are to the effect that a vigorous campaign is to be made there to defeat Senator A. D. Stephens, who is looked upon as the boss of the county and who is expecting to control the delegation to the Republican state convention in the interest of Albert Kaiser for state treasurer. Senator Stephens has quite a number of political enemies in Crookston and East Grand Forks, and it is said that they will unite with county optionists from the country districts and will be able to control the convention. Two years ago Senator Stephens was defeated as a delegate to the state convention, but this year he will make an extra effort and if he is defeated, it will require hard work upon the part of his opponents.

Germantown.

Germantown, Minn., Mar. 28, 1910.

The upper end of the 1910 crop of grass is beginning to make its appearance above ground and it is to be hoped that the growth may be kept-up from now on so as to give the cows that constitute the main essential for successful creamery operation, a fair opportunity to serve their owners to their full capacity, filling the farmers' hearts with appreciation of the thanks from the butter eating population, and their pockets with a due share of legal tender.

Ever since the passing of winter about a month ago, the best possible spring weather has prevailed and had it not been for the wet condition in which the ground froze last fall seeding would now have been well under way. As it is however, nothing will be done along that line for 3 or 4 days on account of the presence in the soil of a trifle more moisture than is desirable.

On account of unusual high water in the sloughs the roads have been in poor condition since the frost went out and the road officials are above the need of looking to other states for employment at present. Beside the local levy of road work to be done this summer a large amount of work is to be done by the county along the Grygla mail route.

Supt. of Schools L. M. Mithun passed thru here last Wednesday, returning from a week's tour of inspection in the schools east of here.

John C. Johnson, the Cloverleaf thresher and farmer, sold his horses and machinery at auction last week and will rest from farm labors the present season.

Mrs. J. H. Roller visited in and about Thief River Falls during last week.

The Farmers' Club meets next Sunday at the Habedank home.

Mrs. John Mortenson of Moylan township is reported very ill with consumption.

The Germantown Co-Operative Store company is doing an all-around satisfactory business, indicating a continuation of the established prestige of the place. Herman Ohm of Thief River Falls, who has been engaged as manager of the store, takes charge of the business this week. The store has been stocked up with a clean, fresh line of merchandise and the enterprise will undoubtedly be a hummer from the start. The hauling of goods for the store is to be let on contract, provided a satisfactory bid is received.

A petition is being circulated among the patrons of the local post office, asking the appointment of N. Bundlund, secretary of the Co-operative Co., as postmaster, to succeed Miss Sarah Vaughan, who resigned from the office.

John Clausen leaves here today for Dodson, Montana, where he expects to spend the summer, at work on an irrigation project.

Johann Dommer and family are moving out to North Dakota this week and on that occasion a farewell dance was given at their home Saturday evening. The Dommer farm has been rented by Messrs. Klappenbach and Klockmann.

The Grygla bank, it is announced, will be ready to commence business by April 1st. In view of the alleged bad condition of the roads out that way, these are glad tidings to the good people of Grygla and vicinity, who will never again be obliged to bear the expense and inconvenience of transporting their cash deposits to the Thief River Falls banks, forty miles away.

After all that has been said and written about the Germantown ditch these last years, there is no small amount of consolation now in knowing that the proceedings have reached the stage where nothing remains to be accomplished but the insignificant matter of removing the dirt, with which it has been filled so long.

The new Lincoln pennies are said to be entirely different in design from the old coin, and for all we know they may be; but the scarcity of them, however, is a noticeable point of resemblance.

Hjalmar Edseth, who has been farming up near Liner the last three years, moved out with his family last week, bound for Montana, where he intends to engage in blacksmithing.

A number of men from up north and east of here have pulled out lately, to help plant wheat in North Dakota.

The local creamery is still minus a buttermaker, and thus in a condition that cannot be allowed much longer. A meeting of the directors has been called for Saturday for the purpose of righting the wrong.

WHAT'S THE SOO DOING?

Two Parties of Surveyors Pass Through the City This Week.

Go West on the Wheatline But Will Not Give Out Any Information.

The Minneapolis Journal on Tuesday published a long article regarding railway construction in North Dakota during the coming year. The Journal is of the opinion that the Soo will build a line from Viking, through Grand Forks and to Courtney, N. D.

That there is something doing is very evident.—On Tuesday morning C. W. Kay in charge of a party of Soo surveyors arrived here on the Winnipeg flyer and left that same morning on the Wheatline for the west, and yesterday morning C. H. West, the chief locating engineer for the Soo line, arrived here with eight other surveyors and also left for the west over the Wheatline. Just what all of these surveyors are doing out in that section is hard to understand. The only information given out is to the effect that they are opening up gravel pits, to be used in graveling the Wheatline for fast traffic this summer.

In this connection it might be stated that the city of Grand Forks has brought powerful influence to bear upon the Soo to induce it to build the line from Viking to Courtney. At present Grand Forks' wholesale houses have absolutely no railway connections to the southwest, and business men there believe that if this line was built that Grand Forks would become a greater city than Fargo. If the line is built, it will certainly open up a large territory for Grand Forks, and incidentially a much larger territory for Thief River Falls.

Good Price for Land.

Charles Wentzel has sold his farm adjoining the city limits to J. S. Hilleboe for a consideration of $7500. As the farm 67½ acres including an out lot, the price paid per acre was $111. This is certainly a big price for land, even though the personal property is included in the purchase price. Yet the land is worth it and more too. Mr. Hilleboe, who is an old resident here and thoroughly familiar with land values, considers that he has gotten a bargain even at the price paid.

Mr. Wentzel is the first settler in Warren. He located on the quarter section, of which he has now sold the remnant, thirty six year ago. Part of the original farm is now included in the city limits of Warren, and another position has has been sold as a site for North Star College. Mr. and Mrs. Wentzel will leave soon for Twin Falls, Idaho, where their son, Benjamin, is located, and where they intend to make their future home.—Warren Sheaf.

Special School Election.

Notice is hereby given that a Special Election will be held in the Independent School District No. 18, Thief River Falls, Minnesota, Red Lake Co., on the 2nd day of April, 1910, in the school room of the Dobner Meehan Block, for the purpose of voting upon the proposition of issuing to the State of Minnesota, the bonds of said municipality in the aggregate sum of $38000.00, bearing interest at the rate of 4 per centum per annum, the proceeds thereof to be used for the purpose of erecting a High School Building and to be numbered to mature as set forth in the resolution, now on file in the office of the Clerk.

Polls will be open from 7 to 8 o'clock P. M.

Dated March 12, 1910.

BIG MILL STARTS UP

Will Run Night and Day From Now Until It Freezes Up.

The Suppy of Logs on Hand Larger Than at Previous Time.

The Thief River Falls Lumber company's big mill here was started up for the season yesterday. Supt. Crowe has had a crew of men at work most of the winter fixing the mill up in shipshape for the season's run, and it is anticipated that the cut this year will be larger than before.

The crew is practically the same as last year—and for many former years for that matter, as the lumber company's treatment towards its men has always been the most liberal, and it possesses not only the friendship of those in its employ but of the entire city.

The company has a larger supply of logs on hand this spring than ever before, and it will not be possible to saw them all up this year under the most favorable circumstances. This is due to the fact that last year in a number of streams the lumber company was unable to get out the log drives started owing to the lack of water.

Have You a Friend Afflicted With Asthma?

Frank S. Archibald, of West Swanzey, N. H., writes:—"For the past five years I have suffered with Asthma almost constantly. I was so nervous at times I could hardly remain in my school. This disease coupled with the nervous strain to which teachers are always subjected made life almost unbearable. During a visit to my home in Hinsdale, Mr. Mann, a local druggist, called my attention to your White Wine of Tar Syrup. At first I was skeptical as I had tried almost everything with no permanent help. Finally I took home a bottle and the cure it effected seems almost miraculous to me after my former repeated disappointments.

I want to recommend your remedy to everyone who has been afflicted as I was for five years and I shall be glad to reply to inquiries regarding my case." Peoples Drug Store.

Take notice that you are in default, under and according to the terms, conditions, and provisions of that certain contract, dated the tenth day of June, A. D., 1907, whereby Thomas L. Stordalen of Carthage, South Dakota, agreed to convey unto you, upon full and timely performance by you of your part of the terms, conditions and provisions thereof, reference to which contract for more particularity is hereby made, of the following described real estate in the city of Thief River Falls, County of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, to-wit: Lots fourteen [14], fifteen [15] and sixteen [16] of Block three [3], in Porter's Addition to Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the duly recorded plat thereof: and that according to the terms, conditions, and provisions of said contract there became due and payable from you to said Thomas L. Stordalen on the 1st day of September, 1907, the sum of $200.00, and on the first day of each and every month thereafter to and including the first day of July, 1909, the further sums of fifty dollars each month aforesaid, in all, thirteen hundred dollars, with interest on each and all of said sums at six per cent per annum from the tenth day of June, 1907: and at the date of this notice said amount of $1300.00 and interest as aforesaid still remains overdue and unpaid, and such default as above specified still exists.

And whereas, said Thomas L. Stordalen has by good and sufficient deed sold and conveyed unto the undersigned, Martine Stordalen, all his right, title, and interest in and to said premises, subject to said contract, and has by assignment in writing duly executed, sold and assigned unto the said undersigned all his right, title and interest in and to said contract above described, and the debt secured thereby, and the said undersigned is now the owner of said premises and contract and his successor in interest therein, Now, therefor, You are hereby notified, that unless on or before thirty days after the service of this notice upon you, you pay to Martine Stordalen at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, or for her to Chas. E. Boughton, her attorney, at his office in city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, the sum of $1300.00 aforesaid with interest thereon at six per cent per annum since June 10th, 1907, to date of payment, and pay the cost of service of this notice upon you, and thus comply with the provisions of said contract on your part to be performed, said contract will be cancelled and terminated and all your right, title, and interest thereunder, and in and to the land and property covered thereby, forfeited and annulled. Said cancellation and termination of said contract to take effect May 9th, A. D. 1910.

Dated March 17th, 1910.

Interesting News From Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

DAY OBSERVED AT STOCKHOLM

Fiftieth Anniversary of the First Appearance on the Stage of Kristina Nilsson — Gothenburg System for Regulating Liquor Traffic Said Not to Be Working Well in Norway. Figures Showing Financial Condition of Denmark.

SWEDEN.

On Feb. 28 last it was just fifty years ago since Kristina Nilsson, now the Countess Casa de Miranda, made her first debut on the stage. This occurred Feb. 28, 1860, in the De la Croix hall at Brunkebergs market, in Stockholm. There was on that occasion a large audience present, owing to the fact that it was announced that a young woman of unusual talent would appear. The debutante was at that time a poor girl from Smaland, who for about a year had been a protege of Madame Adelaide Leuhousen of Gothenburg, who, together with the talented accompanist, Franz Berwald, desired the public to get an opportunity to hear the young girl sing. And Kristina Nilsson did sing. She sang as she perhaps had never sang before or afterwards and soon fame came to beckon at her feet. The day was observed last month by a number of the diva's greatest admirers and the event was given considerable attention in the daily newspapers of the capital.

King Gustaf is at present at Cape Martin, where he will spend some time in order to secure a little recreation. Cape Martin is situated between Mentone and Monaco, on the shores of the Mediterranean, and is considered a great health resort. It will be remembered that it is not a long time ago since the king underwent an operation for appendicitis, which the doctors claim has really left him in a rather weak condition. The queen accompanied him and—it is a well-known fact that she prefers the climate in the South and would have gone there long ago if it had not been for the king's illness.

The Swedish Tourist society celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary day Feb. 25 at the Music academy in Stockholm. A large and very select audience was present. Professor Gunnar Anderson read an interesting paper entitled, "The Pleasures and Benefits of the Tourist Traffic." After the programme occurred a grand banquet at the Grand hotel, to which 200 guests had been invited. Socially it was considered one of the most important affairs of the season.

Director Ranft of the Royal Opera has recently paid a visit to Paris. While there he went to see "Chantecler," possibly with a view of securing the play for a Stockholm audience. Yet after considering everything he came to the conclusion that a Stockholm audience would not be very enthusiastic about such a play and that it would cost too much to reproduce it in Swedish. Anyway, Director Ranft did not seem much interested.

The much talked of ice palace in Stockholm will be a real thing next season if the plans of Architect Fleming materialize. It will be located on Drottning-gatan, near the Central baths, and will thus have a very central and favorable location.

Dr. Sven Hedin returned to Stockholm a few days ago from the southern part of Europe, where he has been delivering lectures. He will remain at home for the summer except for a brief visit to England.

Rumor states that the editor-in-chief of the "Dagens Nyheter," Otto von Zweigbergk, is about to resign and that his successor will be Dr. Ivan Bratt. The latter is a municipal ownership man.

A rolling skater rink on the North Side in Stockholm is attracting a great deal of attention. It is located on Norrlands street and thus far it has proven to be a moneymaker.

Theodore Roosevelt will visit Stockholm some time in May or June. That he will be accorded a most enthusiastic reception is needless to state.

Queen Wilhelmina's husband will visit the Swedish court some time in the month of May. He will also visit Christiania.

NORWAY.

In some districts in Norway, unlike Sweden, the sale of fermented beverages is prohibited and in these districts the conditions are simply alarming. Under the Gothenburg system, which was adopted in Norway, the fermented beverages are exempted from any restrictions and actually encouraged, but the law allows the local political units the power to prohibit beer and wine along with spirits. The "samlag" controls the sale of all spirits, while beer and wine are common articles of merchandise in the districts where even the mild beverages are prohibited and is giving general satisfaction, as it increases the revenue, reduces the quantity of spirits consumed and improves the quality. It also better regulates the public houses and, by controlling spirits, the "samlag" encourages the use of healthy beer, which is doing more for sobriety in all the Scandinavian kingdoms, according to the best authorities, than all the so called prohibition societies; for, as a matter of fact, prohibition only prevents the legal sale of standard beverages, while it opens the way for fraud, evasion of the law and affords an open door for all sorts of poisonous concoctions.

From Fredriksstad comes a tragic story regarding a poor mother, who had been left alone in the Strutens lighthouse. Her husband had gone away on a fishing expedition and she had been left with two infant children. Then came the terrible storm which raged far and wide on the west coast, causing destruction of life and property. Prior to becoming ill she hung out the flag of distress, but the winds tore it in shreds. A week afterwards a few fishermen happened by in their fishing smack and found that the mother was dead. At her side sat the two little ones, almost dead from famine. They were given some nourishment and at last reports it is believed that they will survive. The poor woman had died for want of food and medical attention.

Changes in the premier portfolio are rather frequent in Norway these days. It is at all events no easy job to tackle and the occupant always lays himself open to a lot of criticism more or less. When Gunnar Knudsen, who recently resigned, became premier he said that he would make Norway rich. It appears that he failed. Now comes the new premier, Wollert Konow, and says that he wants the Norwegians to work and learn to be thrifty and happy. Mr. Konow is himself a very hard worker and if his peope will follow his example they will certainly be happy. But when did the Norwegian people not work hard and who will allege that they are not a very happy people?

In all parts of Norway societies and individuals are doing all in their power to check the ravages caused by tuberculosis. Up in Honefos a good old couple, Mr. and Mrs. Schirmer, have donated 20,000 crowns for the purpose of erecting a sanitarium for consumptives in Ringerike. Others will be invited to contribute sums for this sanatarium and plans are already being made for commencing building operations.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, who has been hovering between life and death for several weeks, is now able to sit up in bed. This is even more than his physicians had hoped for and there is now a bare possibility that he might recover. Whether he will ever be strong enough to engage in any literary work again is doubtful.

A horrible accident occurred in Tromso the other day when a farmhouse in Bakkeby was totally destroyed by fire and a mother and two daughters perished in the flames. They were caught unawares and did not find time to save themselves. The cause of the fire is unknown.

G. A. Somerfelt, for many years chief of the Norwegian Naval academy, died at his home in Christiania a few days ago. He has always been prominent in court circles and was a highly respected man in the diplomatic circles. He was born in 1836.

The only woman who is engaged in the practice of law at present in Norway is Miss Elisa Sem. She is forty years old and has been practicing law in Christiania since 1904. She is a good lawyer and has all she can possibly attend to.

DENMARK.

The following table indicates the financial condition of the little kingdom for 1907, the latest statistics:

Revenue	$ 26,054,945
Expenditure	23,695,005
Total imports	166,677,770
Total exports	115,608,335
Public debt	71,647,720

The debt is the only poor showing. Yet it is small when compared with some more fortunate nations. Like the Dutch the Danes are adepts in colonial endeavor, yet while fortune seems to have given Holland the choice spots of fertility Denmark has found her allotment mostly in the cold and barren lands, since her West Indies islands, though fertile, are meager in acres. Greenland, Denmark's largest colony, has 34,000 square miles, yet it is cold and barren. The government has a monopoly of the trade and in fur, fish, etc., it is important. Then there is Iceland and the Faroe islands and St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix, in the West Indies.

Plans are now under way by the government to introduce the reindeer in Denmark. This attempt to acclimatize the reindeer will be watched with exceeding interest from all over the country. A great many people believe that it will be next thing to impossible to do it. The reindeer will scarcely thrive in so mild a climate. Besides he wants a mountainous country and any amount of real cold weather. Then there are the mountain grasses, which the reindeer will certainly not find in Denmark. Anyway it will be an interesting experiment.

Spring floods have already caused much damage in Denmark, especially in the vicinity of Aalborg, where much property is reported destroyed. Any number of bridges have been destroyed and country roads generally are in an impassable condition.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Disappointment in a love affair caused Mrs. Anna Olson, seventy years old, suffering and humiliation which she says is reasonably worth $5,000 and she asks the Minneapolis district court to grant her that amount in the suit she filed against Ole Osmundson, seventy-four years old.

A call for a meeting of the Republican state central committee has been issued by A. D. Brown, the chairman. The committee is to meet at the Merchants hotel in St. Paul at noon, April 2. The committee at that time will fix the time and place for the next Republican state convention.

Mayor M. B. Cullum of Duluth has given the dealers in liquor a great surprise by sending a notice to all of them, including the hotels, that they must cease the sale of liquor promptly at 11 o'clock every week night and sell none on Sundays.

The largest hog ever marketed in Fillmore county was brought to Preston by John Pfremmer, a farmer residing four miles northwest. The hog was four years old, weighed 915 pounds and Mr. Pfremmer received $10.05 per hundred.

Albert Polinsky of Duluth will not have to pay Joseph E. Fox $25,000 for the alleged alienation of Mrs. Fox's affections. The jury in the case returned a verdict in favor of Polinsky after being out only thirty minutes.

Word has been received in St. Paul that J. W. Olsen, former dean of the State Agricultural college and state superintendent of public instruction, was thrown from a horse in Mexico recently and severely injured.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Edward Graham of Grand Rapids is in a Duluth hospital suffering from a revolver shot inflicted by himself accidentally and in an unusual manner. He had been carrying the weapon in a belt and, taking the belt off, threw the gun on the floor. The weapon was discharged and the bullet entered his back. It is said that he cannot recover.

Thomas Croten of Duluth, a pattern maker for the Duluth, Missabe and Northern road, aged forty-five, accidentally shot himself in the knee with a heavy rifle while out hunting north of Duluth. Two companions were with him, and they did what they could for him, but Groten died from loss of blood.

A murder and suicide occurred at Superior when Dugal McIntosh, an engineer living at Proctor, this state, shot Dorothy Brooks and then killed himself. He was thirty-two and she was twenty-four years old. The woman was the keeper of a resort and it is said McIntosh was infatuated with her.

Leona Wielman, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wielman of Olmsted county, was burned to death during the temporary absence of the mother from the home. Leona was one of a pair of twins.

Seven passengers were injured, several of them seriously, when the westbound Northwestern train No. 23 ran into an open switch at the Kasota yards and collided with a string of loaded freight cars.

Hans O. Thori was burned to death in his store at Arendahl, Fillmore county. He was a single man and roomed in his store building, which, with all its contents, was entirely consumed.

The little village of Viola, Olmsted county, narrowly escaped a serious conflagration by the timely work of a bucket brigade of about 100 men. The damage done will total about $12,000.

While riding on a separator Arnold, the seven-year-old son of J. D. Schroeder, residing near Windom, fell and was almost instantly killed by the wheels passing over his body.

Falling head foremost into the intake tube leading to the wheel pit of the Washburn-Crosby "D" mill at Minneapolis J. Asterberg was sucked into the wheel pit and drowned.

George Brooks, hermit and recluse, an eccentric old man who lived alone on an island in Swan lake, eighteen miles west of St. Peter, lost his life by drowning.

Robert Boulton, living northwest of Marshall, was attacked by a vicious bull on his farm, and is laid up with serious injuries.

Thomas Lukkarin, a laborer, engaged at the waterworks extension at Duluth, was killed by a cavein.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

David Sanford, son of Judge Sanford, who died about two years ago, was found dead in bed at his home in St. Paul. Mr. Sanford, who was a prominent attorney, appeared in the best of health when he went to bed the previous night. The cause of his sudden death is given as heart disease.

Heartbroken because of the death of her husband Mrs. Sarah Gonyea, eighty five years old, a pioneer woman of Minneapolis, is dead. Her death follows that of her husband, Burnam Gonyea, who died two months ago.

Five minutes following inoculation with antitoxin as a diphtheria preventive Mrs. Guy E. Smith of Minneapolis died at the residence of a friend where she was making a call.

FLOUR RATES ARE REDUCED

Northwestern Millers Win Their Case Against Railroads.

The interstate commerce commission, sitting at Washington, has ordered the lake and rail rates on flour from Minneapolis to New York city and the Atlantic seaboard reduced from 23 cents per 100 pounds to 21½ cents, beginning May 10. This decides the famous case of the Northwestern millers against the twenty-nine rail and lake lines in favor of the millers. The new schedule of rates is ordered to be effective for two years from the date it goes into effect. The complainants were some forty millers, operating more than 100 flour mills in Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, with a daily capacity of about 125,000 barrels. The defendant carriers were all the railroad and water lines which carry flour from Minneapolis and Duluth to the Atlantic seaboard territory.

The millers complained that the rate of 23 cents was unreasonable and was a discrimination against Minneapolis and the Northwest in favor of the millers at Buffalo, as compared with the all rail rate east from Buffalo, as applied by the same carriers to the same points of destination.

BETWEEN THE TWIN CITIES

Senate Committee Favors Appropriation for Dam.

By a unanimous vote, on a motion made by Senator Nelson, the senate committee on commerce incorporated an amendment in the river and harbor bill authorizing the completion of the high dam in the Mississippi river between St. Paul and Minneapolis.

It is estimated that it will require $250,000 to complete work on the dam, which is now in progress of completion under act of a previous authorization. The sum of $150,000 has already been expended on the project. As a prerequisite to finishing work on the dam with a view to using it for power purposes it is prescribed that St. Paul and Minneapolis shall transfer certain flowage rights to the government. This is in accordance with recommendations made in the report of the board of army engineers, which made a report to congress on the subject.

GIVEN TO THE UNIVERSITY

Memorial Fund Raised by Friends of Late Governor Johnson.

The committee formed last October for the purpose of raising a Johnson memorial fund, which should be placed at the disposal of the widow of the late Governor John A. Johnson during her life and at her death to be turned over to the board of regents of the the state university for the purpose of founding a John A. Johnson scholarship, met with the board of regents at the university and reported that their work had been practically completed and that they had on hand a sum of $22,000 which would be available immediately for the above mentioned purpose.

FIERCE FIGHT WITH KNIVES

Two Minneapolis Polanders Fatally Stabbed.

Two Minneapolis Polanders are in the city hospital with knife wounds which will probably cause their death as the result of a fight. The trouble arose over a dispute about a girl and soon five Polanders were engaged in a fearful battle with knives.

Those who were cut are Joseph Karpis, who had his abdomen ripped open, and Tom Strom, who is cut about the throat and stomach. A third man, Mike Smolensky, tried to elude the police by going to bed, but was found by detectives. He was badly cut. Two others are missing.

JONES GETS THIRTY YEARS

Murderer of Pugilist Whitehead Pleads Guilty to Crime.

For the murder of Walter Whitehead, the negro pugilist, at Duluth, Ralph Jones will spend the next thirty years of his life in the Minnesota state prison at Stillwater.

Jones was allowed to plead guilty to the charge of murder in the third degree and he was at once sentenced to thirty years by Judge William A. Cant of the district court.

Suspender Buckle Saves Life.

A bullet fired with unerring aim would have resulted in the death of Louis Beaudette of St. Paul but for the fact that he wore a large buckle on the left strap of his suspenders directly over his heart. The bullet glanced off and Beaudette escaped the slightest injury. Matt Koffman, a former employe of Beaudette, is lodged at Central station charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Miner Commits Suicide.

Wallace Iilley, a miner, aged twenty-seven years, of Virginia, this state, committed suicide by cutting his throat on a train leaving Duluth for the north over the Missabe railroad. It is supposed he was insane, as he acted queerly since the death of his mother two months ago.

Murphy and Money Missing.

Captain Timothy Murphy, in charge of the Volunteers of America in St. Paul, has mysteriously disappeared and with him the receipts of the recent tag day, amounting to $1,250. A search for him is being made by the police.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

TO OPEN LEECH LAKE LANDS

Indian Commissioner Revokes Withdrawal Order.

Indian Commissioner Valentine has notified Senator Clapp and Representative Lindbergh that 30,000 acres of agricultural land in the Leech Lake Indian reservation about Cass lake and Deer lake, in this state, would be opened for homestead entry at once. Recently this land was withdrawn from entry for one year.

There is reserved from entry 105 specific allotments which have been made to Indians. The Indians will be asked to exchange these allotments for lands within the forest reservation.

The revocation of the withdrawal order was secured at a conference participated in by Senators Clapp and Representatives Lindbergh and Miller, Indian Commissioner Valentine, Chief Forester Henry Graves and Mr. Cox of the land office.

The Minnesota representatives called the attention of the officials to the resolution passed by the Minnesota conservation congress criticising the Indian office for delay in opening to settlement these cutover lands. The officials promptly revoked their order and notified the land office to receive homestead applications.

MINNESOTA WILL SUE ROAD

Great Northern System Accused of Tax Dodging.

Besides a shortage of $1,174,734.39 in the gross earnings reports of the Great Northern Railroad company for the year of 1908 the public examiner has reported to the attorney general that prior to July 1, 1907, the Great Northern allowed large arbitrary divisions of revenue to its subsidiary lines outside Minnesota and through this apportionment earnings reported for Minnesota diminished by several millions of dollars.

An action will be started by the attorney general to determine whether such allowances were legal. If the state wins the suit it will recover a sum exceeding $100,000 in taxes.

The taxes and penalty on the 1908 shortage amount to $41,569.55, which will be collected at once.

YOUTH KILLS YOUNG WOMAN

Tragedy at Minneapolis the Result of Carelessness.

Esther Eklund, sixteen years old, a chambermaid employed at the lodging house kept by C. F. Nelson at Minneapolis, was shot and instantly killed by Carl Olson, the fourteen-year-old son of the proprietor. The shooting was the result of carelessness on the part of the boy.

The maid was at work in a room on the second floor of the lodging house when young Olson, who had found a rifle in one of the lodgers' rooms, came into the apartment and, playfully pointing the weapon at the girl, pulled the trigger. There was an explosion and the girl dropped dead.

MILITIA RATE LAW UPHELD

Minnesota Roads Must Carry State Troops for One Cent a Mile.

Judge William Louis Kelly has filed a decision at St. Paul upholding the constitutionality of the law passed by the last legislature providing for the transportation of Minnesota national guard and naval reserve troops over the railroads of the state, under order, at the rate of 1 cent a mile. Judge Kelly orders that a peremptory writ of mandamus be issued, as asked by the state, compelling the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway company to carry the citizen soldiers over their lines in accordance with the provisions of the act.

Falls Under a Train.

Alexander Nelson, twenty-three years old, a resident of Red Wing, met instantaneous death under the wheels of a St. Paul freight train a few miles above the Lake City station. Nelson, with a companion, was riding on an oil tank when the car swayed around a curve and he lost his balance and fell under the train.

Many Fires at St. Paul.

In a period of a little more than fifteen hours the St. Paul fire department established a new record by responding to twenty-one alarms. The nearest approach to this record was July 4, 1871, when seventeen alarms were answered in a period of twenty four hours.

Hero Dies of His Injuries.

Fred Anhelm, the brave settler homesteading near Kalvida, St. Louis county, who tried to rescue his three children from his burning home recently, but succeeded in saving only one, is dead of his burns. Of his once happy family only his wife and baby survive him.

Sale of School and Other State Lands

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 299 of the General Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION
—OF—
"Montana & Dakota Grain Company."

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That we, the undersigned, do hereby associate ourselves together for the purpose of forming a corporation under and pursuant to the general laws of the State of Minnesota, and to that end do hereby adopt and subscribe the following articles of incorporation:—

Article I.

The name of this corporation shall be "Montana & Dakota Grain Company." The general nature of the business of this corporation shall be to manufacture, buy, sell, export, import, and generally deal in flour, feed and other products manufactured from grains or cereals; to erect, buy, sell, lease, or otherwise acquire and maintain and operate elevators for the storage of grains and cereals of every kind and description; to erect, buy, sell, lease, or otherwise acquire and maintain and operate ware houses and to do a general warehouse business and to buy, sell, and to generally deal in grains, cereals, seeds, fuel, salt, live stock and lumber. The principal office and place of transacting the business of this corporation shall be the city of Thief River Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Article II.

The time of the commencement of this corporation shall be the first day of July, 1910, and shall continue thereafter for a period of thirty years.

Article III.

The amount of capital stock of this corporation shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00) and shall be divided into Five Hundred (500) shares of a par value of One Hundred ($100.00) Dollars each, and shall be paid in at such times and in such amounts and in such manner as the board of directors shall determine and require.

Article IV.

The highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which this corporation shall be at any time subject shall be the amount of One Hundred Fifty Thousand ($150,000.00) Dollars.

Article V.

The names and places of residence of the persons forming this corporation are as follows:—

Math. Barzen, residence, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.
Louis Hanson, residence, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.
D. N. Winton, residence, Minneapolis, Minnesota.
C. J. Winton, residence, Minneapolis, Minnesota.
M. J. Dunn, residence, Culbertson, Montana.

Article VI.

The government of this corporation and the management of its affairs shall be vested in a board of five directors, all of whom shall be elected annually by and from the stockholders of this corporation, at the regular annual meeting thereof, which shall be held at the general office of this corporation, in the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the first Monday of July, of each year, and shall hold office for the term of one year and until their successors are elected and qualified.

The first board of directors shall be Math. Barzen, Louis Hanson, D. N. Winton, C. J. Winton and M. J. Dunn, and they shall hold office until the first annual meeting of the stockholders of this corporation, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

The officers of this corporation shall be a president, a vice-president, a secretary and a treasurer, all of whom shall be chosen annually by the board of directors from the stockholders for the term of one year immediately after the annual meeting of the stockholders each year, and such board of directors shall have such other officers or agents as the interests of this corporation shall from time to time demand.

The first officers of this corporation shall be Math Barzen, President; D. N. Winton, Vice-President; Louis Hanson, Secretary and M. J. Dunn, Treasurer, and they shall hold office until the first annual meeting of the board of directors, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1910 NUMBER 15

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

ATTENDANCE WILL BE BIG

Two Thousand Tickets Sold for the Big Union Ball Friday Evening.

Capacity of the New Auditorium to Be Taxed to the Limit.

The capacity of Thief River Falls' hotels, lodging houses and restaurants are to be taxed to the limit tomorrow evening, likewise the city's handsome new auditorium.

The big union benefit ball to be given by the four railroad organizations of this city—the Brotherhood of Locomotive engineers, Brotherhood of Firemen, Brotherhood of Conductors and Brotherhood of Trainmen—promises to be the biggest affair of its kind ever before attempted in the Northwest. In the neighborhood of two thousand tickets have been sold, and while all of those who purchased tickets will not be in attendance, it is expected that over half of them will be here—and then there are the women who will be admitted free. Every town on the Wheatline from Thief River Falls to Kenmare will have representatives here, and a large number will also attend from the main line. Supt. Michaels is so arranging it that all of the freight crews on the second, third and fourth divisions will head-in at Thief River Falls tomorrow or tomorrow evening and nearly every railroad man on the entire system will have an opportunity to attend the ball. There will also be a large delegation present from Glenwood, Mahnomen and other towns south of here.

The ladies of St. Bernards church will serve supper for the occasion in the Antlers Club rooms.

Let the Water Off.

In hundreds of cases where drainage is desirable it is not necessary to employ an engineer to lay out the the work, nor to use expensive systems of excavation. Much of this work can be done by the farmer himself after the exercise of a little thoughtfulness. When the snow melts in the spring, or after a heavy rain in summer—anytime when there is standing water on the field—let the farmer go over his land and determine if the water, at its height, seeks a natural runway. It is easy to see where water would escape if a few places are leveled down to a point below the water above them. Place stakes at these high places, and as soon as the ground will permit working, get busy with a team, plow and scraper and cut down these high places. When another rain comes see if the water flows off. If not, observe where the high places are and again go over them with team and scraper. Begin work at the lower end of the natural water course and work up toward the sloughs. There may be places where greater excavation may be required, and this can often be done with a spade at seasons of the year when there is a lull in other work. Open ditch work of this character for a few years will relieve many fields or wet and unproductive places now existing, and the farmer will scarcely realize the cost, while the expense of cultivating the entire field will be reduced and its productiveness increased.

Farmers Should Remember This.

Every Minnesota farmer is entitled to have his name placed on the Extension Division mailing list and to receive regularly the Farmers' Library. No one should be negligent about requesting that the Library be sent. He should provide means for preserving the library for future reference, for it will be full of useful hints and suggestions which will prove valuable at any season of the year.

Good Prices.

Either good cows are in demand or the patrons of the creameries of this section have so much money that they don't know what to with it all. At the auction sale held at Harold Oen's place last Saturday twenty cows were sold at prices ranging from $49 to $68.50. Other stock and farm machinery brought good prices and most of the buyers paid cash.

Sam Clark Has Left Minot.

Sam Clark, formerly of this city, has left Minot, N. D., where in company with Guy F. Humpherys he was part owner and publisher of the Minot Daily Reporter. Mr. Clark and his partner could not agree and their differences will be settled by the courts, a receiver for the paper having been appointed. Sam is at present at Great Falls, Montana, having accepted a position as city editor of one of the leading dailies of that place.

Purchased New Cars.

F. J. Stebbins and Dr. Penney returned last Saturday from their trip to Minneapolis. While absent they both purchased Ford Touring cars of the 1910 model. The cars are to be shipped from Minneapolis this week and are expected to arrive here in a few days.

Another Ditcher Coming.

A. M. Arpin received word last week that one of the ditching machines of the Northwestern Drainage Company had completed a large contract that the company had in Texas. The machine will at once be shipped to Thief River Falls and put at work here, as the company cannot build machines fast enough to take care of the enormous amount of work it has here.

Ice Out in the Lake.

The ice in the Red Lake went out this year in March. That is the earliest date ever known to white settlers, although once before it went out on the 2nd day of April, and has been known to stay firm until the 15th of May.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

List of Those Who Will Take the Census of Red Lake County.

Also Rules and Regulations That Will Govern the Census Takers.

Director Durand of the Bureau of the Census having approved the recommendations for census enumerator, Supervisor Meeker announces the following appointments:

Black River and Sanders; August N. K. Anderson, St. Hilaire.

Bray, Norden and Numedal; Martinus M. Rust, Thief River Falls.

Clover Leaf and Kratka; Torjus Hommestvedt Jr., Brunkeberg.

Deer Park, Goodridge and Highlanding; John T. Lattimore, Erie.

Emardville, Plummer village and Gervais; Anders J. Hemstad, Plummer.

Equality; Clarence D. Hall, Espelvet.

Garnes and Mayfield: Rev. Elias A. Mostue, Sunbeam.

Hickory, Reiner and Star; Eugene H. Besancon; Torgerson.

Lake Pleasant, Red Lake Falls, excluding Red Lake Falls city; James Hance, Red Lake Falls.

Lambert; Ole N. Skomedal, Lambert.

Louisville and Polk Center; Fred Richards, Red Lake Falls.

North, excluding Thief River Falls city, and Silverton; Joseph M. Theige, Thief River Falls.

Poplar River; Clyde Childs, Brooks.

Wards 1, 2, and 3, Red Lake Falls city; Ernest G. Buse, Red Lake Falls.

River Falls and St. Hilaire village; Nels a Nelson, St. Hilaire.

Rocksbury, exclusive of St. Hilaire; Frank T. Satre, St. Hilaire.

Smiley and Wyandotte; Oscar J. Peterson, Hazel.

Terrebonne; Joseph I. Cossette, Terrebonne.

Ward 1, Thief River Falls city; Ben Christianson, Thief River Falls.

Wards 2 and 3, Thief River Falls city; Lars Backe, Thief River Falls.

POINTS REGARDING THE CENSUS.

The census begins April 15 and must be completed in thirty days.

The enumerators will wear a badge inscribed "United States Census, 1910."

The law requires every adult person to furnish the prescribed information, but also provides that it shall be treated confidentially, so that no injury can come to any person from answering the questions.

The Census Bureau, prior to April 15, will distribute to every farm owner and tenant in this state a blank or schedule containing the Census questions relative to farm operations and equipment. This should be filled up, if possible, not later than the morning of April 15, but if any one has been unable to fill it up by that time, he should do it as soon afterwards as he can.

People who do not speak English or who do not understand the schedule completely should get help from others, if possible, in filling it up.

The president has issued a proclamation, calling on all citizens to co-operate with the Census and assuring them that it has nothing to do with taxation, army or jury service, compulsory school attendance, regulation of immigration, or enforcement of any law, and that no one can be injured by answering the inquiries.

It is of the utmost importance that the farm census of this state be complete and correct.

Therefore every farm owner and tenant should promptly, fully, and accurately fill up the "Advance Farm Schedule" and carefully preserve it for the enumerator when he calls.

Grygla Farmers to Have Store.

And now the farmers up at Grygla are going to organize a co-operative store. It is the intention of the new company to take over the general mercantile business of Newton & Fladeland and also the hardware business of Johnson Bros. The co-operative store sentiment seems to be strong in this section.

No Opposition to Bonds for Erection of a New High School Building.

Contract to Be Let on April 16, and Building to Be Completed This Fall.

Thief River Falls is to have a new high school building, this matter having been decided by the voters of this school district last Saturday evening in a very decisive manner. There was absolutely no opposition and the vote cast was a very light one, the total being 176. Of this number, 173 voted in favor of the bonds and only three against the issue.

The new high school is to cost in the neighborhood of $40,000 and will be modern in every respect. The contract for constructing the same will be let on Saturday, Apr. 16, at one o'clock and the building will be completed in time for the opening of school next fall.

Plans and specifications can be seen at the office of Dr. G. A. Penney, clerk of the district.

After Division.

According to the Grygla Eagle, Middle River is going to try to have Marshall county divided at the next election in order to become the county seat of the new county. The Grygla paper is opposed to the division on the grounds, we suppose, that that place would like to be the county seat of the new county. Marshall county will surely have to be divided at sometime in the near future, as it is too large a county at present.

THIS IS THE WEEK OF THE GRAND UNION BALL

Which formally opens our splendid new Armory and Auditorium, and will be the season's grandest event, and this, to a marked degree, will be due to the general appearance of the participants. This has been the topic of general discussion for more than one moon, and the evening of the splendor will find the fair damsels arrayed in gowns that could easily be worn at a king's court. The gentlemen should see to it that they are not outdone from the point of dress by the fairer sex. . . .

If you are arrayed in one of our latest style suits of KUPPENHEIMER CLOTHES you need have no fear of being surpassed as to style and a natural fit, as this is in the clothes and there to stay. CONTRACTS ARE LET

Three Big Ditching Contracts Let by County Auditor Last Saturday.

Land in Kratka, Highlanding and Star to Be Drained by These Ditches.

Nearly $50,000 worth of ditching contracts were let Tuesday by County Auditor Letandresse and Civil Engineer Martz. The ditches are all north of the Red Lake river east of Thief River Falls and will greatly benefit that section.

Ditch No. 39, which will drain lands in the town of Kratka, was let to Daniel Shaw and F. S. Doege, both of this city, at 10 70 cents per yard, their bid being the lowest. This ditch will cost about 13,000. Messrs. Shaw and Doege have purchased a ditching machine in Minneapolis which is to be delivered here about the 20th of this month, and they will complete this ditch this summer.

Ditch No. 41, which will drain lands mostly in the town of Highlanding was let to Charles Seedcliff, of Litchfield at 12.20 cents per yard. This job amounts to about $8,000.

Ditch No. 38 was let to Jerry Sherwood, of Litchfield at 11.50 cents per yard for main ditch and 12 cents per yard for branches. The job will amount to about $25,000. Highlanding and Star township lands are drained by this ditch.

The two last named are said to be in partnership with John Duffy, and will do the work with floaters, commencing at the upper end in all cases. They agree to have the work completed this fall, but it would appear that it would be almost impossible to haul out enough coal and other material this summer to do the work. It is to be hoped that they will live up to their contract, and if they fail to do this that the county auditor will take the work out of their hands. The ditch is what the people out there want and any delay will cause much inconvenience.

A. M. Arpin had in a bid to dig the last two ditches, his bid being about one-half cent higher per yard than that of Sherwood and Seedcliff. Mr. Arpin agreed to do the work this summer and was prepared to do it. The settlers out there were in hopes that he would secure the contract.

Words of Truth.

We the undersigned druggists of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan unite in saying that Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup has no superior as a throat and lung remedy. It has given entire satisfaction in this part of the country and is one of the best sellers:

FOOD FOR A YEAR

[illegible] .... 100 lbs.

This represents a fair ration for a man for a year.

But some people eat and eat and grow thinner. This means a defective digestion and unsuitable food. A large size bottle of equals in nourishing properties ten pounds of meat. Your physician can tell you how it does it.

PASS THE $10,000 MARK

Receipts of Local Postoffice for the Past Year Amount to Over $10,000.

City Will Now Be Entitled to Free Delivery of Mail After June First.

The gross receipts of the Thief River Falls postoffice for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910, passed the $10,000, and thus entitles the city to free delivery. This will be granted by the department June 1st if proper application is made.

The total receipts this past year from the sale of stamps, etc, amounts to $10,376.71; last year it was $9,009 49; in 1908 it was $8,652.43, and in 1907, $8,354 33.

The disbursements for the past year have been as follows:

Salaries	$4,677.60
Rent, light and heat	480 00
Special delivery	14.50
Miscellaneous	73.42
Total	$5 245.64

It will thus be seen that the excess of the receipts over the disbursements of the local office are $4,131.10.

The growth of the postal receipts only goes toward illustrating the growth of the city. Thief River Falls is ever forging to the front and will continue to do so.

Death of John Morgan's Mother.

The following, taken from the Ingersol (Ont.) Daily Chronical, refers to the death of the mother of John Morgan, of this city:

The late Mrs. David Morgan, whose death occurred on Friday was born in Tripperary, Ireland. She came to Canada in the year of 1847. She was married in London, Ont., in 1851.

The deceased was one of those who found in the domestic relationship her true sphere of life, and her career was marked by her devotion to the duties pertaining to that of the wife and mother, with results made visible in her family of sons and daughters, whose respectability and worth as citizens require no comment. Reaching the advanced age of 82 years she witnessed her offspring attain to manhood and womanhood and received as her reward at their hands in her declining years those tender offices of kindness and consideration which smoothed her pathway to her everlasting rest.

Besides the husband she is survived by three sons and three daughters. They are John of Thief River Falls, Minnesota; David in Chicago; Mrs. James Moore of North Bay Ont; Mrs. J. C. Middlemiss of Ingersoll and Edward and Mary at home.

The funeral took place this morning at the church of the Sacred Heart, thence to the R. C. Cemetry and was attended by many friends and relatives. Rev. Father Ford officiated.

James Wilson will be with us soon.

W. A. Schrieter was up from Red Lake Falls yesterday.

Mrs. Norman Jensen and daughter came over from Argyle Tuesday to spend a few days visiting with Mr. Jensen.

Olaf Hildahl, the Roseau banker was in the city the first of the week.

D. P. O'Neil and K. O. Gigstad last week finished the work of appraising the state land in Red Lake county.

The Ladies Aid of the United Lutheran church meets in the Seventh-day Advent church, April 13. All welcome.

County Commissioner John Sorum was in the city yesterday, being on route to his home at Holt from a trip to Warren. The county commissioners sold ditch bonds to the amount of $170,000 at their meeting this week, and this money will be used to complete the Germantown ditch.

Something new, the "James Wilson" coming soon. Watch for it.

Mrs. George Jarman left Sunday evening for Missouri to spend several weeks visiting friends.

For Sale Cheap—My residence on North LaBree avenue. Also a first class piano. O. J. Schol.

E. C. Reikow, of Duluth, was in the city the first of the week looking after some lands in this vicinity.

O. Jackobson was down to Crookston the first of the week attending to some business matters.

Andy Erickson sold his residence on the East Side this week to Conductor Nicholson.

Mrs. G. W. Hawes arrived in the city yesterday morning from Alexander to spend a few days with Mrs. Perl Mabey. This morning Mrs. Hawes and Mrs. Mabey left for Winnepeg to spend the day.

A. M. Arpin was up to Holt Tuesday.

The James Wilson, have you heard of it.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. James Martin Monday.

House Wanted—Anybody having a house for rent please leave word at this office.

Services next Sunday at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m., in the Baptist church. Everybody welcome. Nils Ek, Pastor.

Our Bargain Sale last Saturday in laces and embroideries was such a success that we have decided to continue this sale for the next 10 days. Langseth Merc. Co.

Wm. Mainerd arrived in the city Monday from Minneapolis and will be engaged as sawyer in the mill here this season, taking the place of John Hendricks, who will remain at his home in Wisconsin this season.

There will be services and confirmation at the I. O. O. F. hall next Sunday, April 10th at 10:30. A cordial invitation to all. H. Halverson, Pastor.

Alma Oftelie, the ten year old daughter of O. K. Oftelie, died Monday at her home on the East side of pneumonia. The funeral will be held today at 2 o'clock.

Mr. H. G. Maxwell, director of the local bands, has tendered his resignation as such, to take effect about May 1st. Mr. Maxwell states that the student enrollment at the School of Music have encreased to such an extent that it requires his undevided attention. No one as yet has been secured as Mr. Maxwell's successor.

Chief of Police Lang was down to Minneapolis last week and arrested Stanislous Morin upon the charge of non-support of his wife and six children. The complaining witness was Mrs. McGee, mother-in-law of Stanislous, and the trial was yesterday afternoon. Morin was his own lawyer and he gave his mother-in-law a severe cross examination. His wife testified in his behalf, but other relatives did not. Judge Bishop did not render any decision and will probably wait and see how Stanislous provides for his family in the future.

Miss Harriet Olson, Deputy Supreme Commander for the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World, was here last week for the interest of the order and found a splendid field for the work. She has secured a number of benefit members and has placed Mrs. J. A. Wagner, deputy solicitor to complete the work. Miss Olson will return some time next week to organize, and she expects to leave a large charter list of benefit members. The Ladies of the Maccabees is the largest fraternal beneficiary society exclusive for women. They have a reserve fund of $1,000,000 and that with the adequate rates being collected assures anyone that they will stand the test of time. A great deal of interest is being shown by the local ladies and the organization here bids fair to be a great success socially, and with the history and backing of the order the members' protection is safe.

Germantown.

At the M. Johnson home, on Wednesday March 30th, the Rev. H. Biornson officiating, occured the marriage of Miss Mathilda Jones, oldest daughter of Mrs. Martinus Johnson, to Henry Paulson, former buttermaker of the creamery and now located at Highlanding. The contracting parties are well and favorably known in this locality and enjoy the friendship of a wide circle from the inside of which ye correspondent joins in extending well-wishes and congratulations. The young couple left on Thursday for Highlanding to make their future home.

Selmer Bendickson went out to Montana last week with the intention of putting in the summer.

Mrs. D. Dau returned last week from Dalton, Nebraska, where she had been called by the sickness and death of a daughter.

Miss Ellen Watne closed a term of school in Dist. 135, up near Liner, last week and returned to her home near Stephen.

The creamery opened for business April 1st with Mr. Rhodegaard, formerly of the Thief River Falls creamery as buttermaker. The first cream of the season is being received today so we are unable as yet to state whether or not an additional cream vat will be necessary.

Charles Cook has been appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of constable.

Henry Dau returned yesterday from a three months' sojourn in Nebraska. He intends to leave again soon for North Dakota to take part in the seeding.

Mrs. Arne Blakkestad disposed of her quarter of land 4 miles northeast of here recently to Mr. Evenson of Thief River Falls.

Sunday school in the Union Chapel reopened last Sunday, after the usual winter vacation.

A number of citizens thruout the country have been troubled more or less lately with diverse constitution disorders for which we know no name; but we are inclined to suspect it of being a form of sea sickness.

Now is the time to prepare for the ordeal of facing the fire of questions from the census enumerator by studying up the data of our person and its affairs.

A Whole Family.

Rev. L. A. Dunlap, of Mount Vernon, Mo., says: "My children were afflicted with a cough resulting from measles, my wife with a cough that had prevented her from sleeping more or less for five years, and your White Wine of Tar Syrup has cured them all." For sale at Peoples Drug Store.

Frank Carlson was down from Holt the first of the week attending to some business matters.

This is going to be a lively week in Europe, but Africa will begin to slip back into obscurity.

The Republican state convention will be held in St. Paul on June 21. The county conventions will be held on June 20.

The cost of living at home has become so high that few people will not be able to afford to take a vacation during the coming summer.

J. C Sathre, who runs a business college at Crookston, it is said, may enter the senatorial race in this county. Others mentioned are Representatives Holten and Saugstad, former Representative Gunder Krostue, and, of course, our present Senator, Hon. A. D. Stephens. While the latter has not given out officially it is generally credited that he will again be a candidate for the position.—Fertile Journal.

With no Indian reservations or forest reserves to be thrown open to settlement, with no gigantic irrigation project, backed and advertised by government funds with no other inducements, in fact but its own good soil and climate, Minnesota is expected, during the spring and summer of the present year, to experience a period of farm growth and settlement such as can only be compared to the early days of the state.—Monticello, (Ia.) Times.

"If the farmer is not enjoying a hearty laugh right now it must be because the long period of denial has dulled his sense of humor. For something like a generation the funny papers have lampooned him and poked fun at his language and dress. The vaude-villians have done their worst; confidence men have sold him the Masonic Temple and Central Park, while the whole nation has snickered at his discomfiture. But his time has come to laugh and certainly he has earned it. His produce is selling at prices unheard of. His hens make the golden-egged goose appear like a mere pretender. The city folks who once sneered at his manner of life are selling all that they have and moving west to start life again on a few acres of high-priced land. And the confidence men who are waiting at those western stations will do things to the city folks that will even-up for all the gold bricks that were ever sold in this country. Our bonnet is off to the country gentleman of America. We hope his laughing time may be extended until he has squared with the world for all the fun it has had at his expense."—World's Events.

School Notes.

School opened Monday for the spring term of two months. Many new pupils entered the first day, 27 beginners of school age appearing in the primary rooms.

Miss Wold's enrollment in the first primary of the Central has reached 70. Half day sessions will begin in this room this week, as it is too crowded to seat the little people, not to mention giving them instruction. The greatest increase in enrollment appears to be in the Central school.

The death of Alma Ofelie last Monday morning was a shock to the teachers and pupils of the Knox, where but a few days ago she had been enrolled in the fifth grade. She was a bright lovable little girl, an industrious student and a favorite with all who knew her. The room which she attended was dismissed the day of the funeral out of respect to the memory of the deceased.

The plans for the proposed new high school building have arrived and justify the claims of the board of education that the completed school will prove to be among the best, if not the best high school building in northwestern Minnesota.

The class in advanced cooking is presenting a unique test of the ability of the pupils to prepare a light meal for ten persons with a limited sum of money, all the goods being purchased by the pupils and the meal entirely prepared by the girls in groups of two. The girls sell ten tickets at ten cents each to any persons who care to purchase them, and with the dollar proceeds they supply a meal or lunch as best they may. This enables them to study the purchase of goods as well as the preparation of the goods into something eatable.

The closing of the basketball season will take place at the rink on Thursday evening, when several games will be played by high school and city teams. A small deficiency exists in the treasury and the purpose of the contests is to make up this amount.

The senior class play is almost ready for presentation and the class is eagerly awaiting the completion of the auditorium, that they may entertain their friends with what they claim is the best senior play ever prepared by the high school.

The epidemic of measles which has been so prevalent for a month is showing signs of abating. At the present time some of the lower Knox rooms are half depopulated of their attendance, but in a few days it is expected to see the little people back in their accustomed places.

Stock Closed Out.

Sheriff Nelson was up to Highlanding last week and sold out the stock of goods belonging to Andrew Ellingson at sheriff's sale. Everything was sold and then not enough was sold to satisfy the judgements that have been secured against him. It is understood that Mr. Ellingson is going to secure other backlog and start up in business again in the near future.

EYES—Dr. Spofford will be at Hotel Evelyn, Thief River Falls, April 16-17.

First Game Next Sunday.

Now that the malencholy days have apparently come to stay the base-ball spirit has again taken the relentless hold on the local fans and great preparations are being made for the organization and maintainance of a base ball team this season. Of last year's team but three of the players (Nason, Christensen and Fossum) will participate in the games this season, but the full quota of players, except the battery, for which negotiations are being made, have been secured, and are Prof. Hess, Joe Flynn, Lambert and Johnson. The last mentioned are all new men here but are reported to have played on some strong teams.

Unless the present tropical conditions of the weather cease to exist, next Sunday will find the boys out for their first try out game, which is scheduled to be played with the traveling men.

The Salvation Army.

In connection with the last ad which Capt. Pitt had in the Thief River Falls papers regarding the sister wanting a position in this city, he wishes to say that there is another sister also wanting a position as clerk. And any merchant in Thief River Falls wanting a lady clerk, will they kindly notify Capt. C. Pitt of the Salvation Army. Now regarding this young lady, she's a woman that can be depended upon and she's also a christian. The captain expects to be away this week, but will be back Saturday evening, and when he comes back he will be pleased to see you on this subject. And during his absence, he has arranged with Mrs. M. Jacobson to conduct services every Wednesday evening in the Salvation Army hall.

Capt. C. Pitt,
(2t) Officer in Charge.

Watch for the Comet.

Sold by all druggists.

Let me figure upon your cement, cement blocks, cement sidewalks, sand and gravel. A. H. Fasel.

One Conductor Who Was Cured.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington Ky. Street Railway; It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. Sold by All Druggists.

WHEN YOU HAVE A CHANCE TO BOOST OUR CITY;
You Know You Have a Good Thing to Talk About.

Because it's a sure thing that our city has the very best prospects of being one of the Biggest, Best and most Wide-Awake cities in Northern Minnesota, (and you may include Hennepin and Ramsey counties), and all the people that have been here, whether working, visiting or prospecting are ready to give our city a good Boost.

The same about our Stein Bloch & Co. Line of Clothing, only you try it on and it will boost itself. They have that snap and Ginger taste to them that makes a man feel well dressed, and not what you would call "Foxy" with five or six dozen buttons on the coat sleeve and a couple short where you hook your suspenders, so when you boost our city boost the Stein Bloch Co. clothes at the same time, as you can feel satisfied that you have the inside track of the two best arguments in Northern Minnesota. Those three dredges are also a good thing for our city.

Bids Wanted.

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the clerk of the school board of Independent School District No. 18, Thief River Falls, Minnesota, up to 1 o'clock p. m., April 16, 1910, for the erection and completion of a high school building. Separate bids will be received on heating and plumbing, at same time and place, and all bids to be made out on bidder's blank.

Plans and specifications may be seen at Clerk's office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota; and at the office of Fremont D. Orff, Architect, 616 Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., after April 4th, 1910.

Contractors applying for plans, will leave a certified check for $25 on heating and plumbing, and $50 on general plans with the parties from whom they obtain plans as a guarantee that they will return plans at the time agreed upon, and that they will put in a bid to Clerk of school board with certified check as called for.

If this has been complied with the $25 and $50 checks will be returned on opening of bids and return of plans to office. Each bid of whatever kind it may be is to be accompanied by a certified check of 5 per cent of amount of bid as a guarantee of good faith in carrying out of contract. The right to reject any and all bids is reserved.

THE BROWN TAILED MOTH.

The brown tailed moth, a pest which was introduced into this country from Europe some years ago, bids fair to increase the area of its devastation in spite of vigorous measures that have been taken to keep it within a rather restricted area in the New England states. The Rural New Yorker, an agricultural paper that is always keenly alive to dangers of this kind which are a menace to the public welfare, has lately sounded a warning of a probable spread of the scourge to New York state from New Hampshire, where it has had a foothold for several years past. Unless the precautions taken to keep it in check are materially augmented the chances seem good that it will spread over an ever increasing territory. The adult type is a pretty moth about seven-eighths of an inch in length, with a brown tail about an eighth of an inch in length, from which it takes its name. The female lays her eggs in the last two or three weeks in July, depositing them on the underside of leaves, her choice being those of the pear and elm. The little caterpillars emerge in the course of about three weeks and immediately begin to eat the leaves, consuming the green portion and leaving but the leaf skeleton. In the fall the little worms, which have done slight damage thus far, make nests for themselves, which they fasten securely to the limbs of the trees in which they have been feeding. In the spring they get out and are at work as soon as the leaves start, eat voraciously and grow rapidly, soon attaining a length of an inch and a quarter. When the worms reach this size they will strip a tree of its leafage in short order unless prevented by spraying thoroughly with some arsenical compound. In sections where the worms have been worst they have been known to strip fruit and shade trees of all their leafage, and when this is done early in the season it means death to them. While this pest is one of the very worst which horticulturists have on their hands, it is a matter of congratulation that it does not spread to new territory as rapidly as some foes with which the orchardist has to deal. Serious enough is it, however, to call for the co-operation of federal, state and local authorities in the suppression of it.

SHOULD KNOW IT.

The adobe or "sticky" soil, as it is commonly called, found in several sections of the west, while very rich and well suited to the growing of apples, pears and some other fruits, is very difficult to handle and must be plowed at just the right time—a few days following a rain, when the "slacking" has advanced to the proper stage—to secure results that are at all satisfactory. Rather oddly, though, while continued hot and dry weather tends to form a hard crust a few inches beneath the surface, there seems to be no other soil which retains its subsoil moisture more completely or on which fruit trees will stand more protracted drought. When one buys a "sticky" ranch he should have in mind that it will either be necessary for him to have a solid macadam road leading to his place, if he is to reach it during the wet season, or to lay in a sufficient stock of supplies and provisions so that he will not have to leave his place for two or three months at a time. The only pointer that the prospective buyer of a "sticky" ranch needs is that he should be thoroughly acquainted with the antics of the soil during the rainy season, so that he will not be taken by surprise when the sticky time comes.

PROTECT THE ORCHARDS.

All through the northern states the snow lies deep in many sections. This means that the orchards are in especial danger of injury from rabbits whose other food supplies are made inaccessible by the heavy blanket of snow. And as the winter advances the hunger of these ever present pests increases, making the likelihood of damage by them the greater. If the trees have not been protected and the rabbits have begun their work of destruction, radical measures should be adopted. These should include wrapping of the trunks of all young trees as far up as the branches with old newspapers, the smearing of wounds already made with a strong resin soap, the use of traps, dogs, ferrets and guns in exterminating the offenders and, if worst come to worst, the scattering in the runways of pieces of apples on which powdered arsenic has been placed. Of course such poisoned baits should be covered with brush in case any of the farm animals have the run of the orchard. The trees should be inspected at frequent intervals so that the rabbits will not have made serious havoc before their depredations are discovered.

It is not always the loudest clacker at the street fair or circus that has the best sideshow nor the windiest advertiser that sends the best goods to his patrons. There is no vital connection between noise and quality of goods.

In setting young fruit trees of any kind care should be taken that the root system equals or exceeds that of the top. It seems hard to cut back a thrifty and promising top, but this is just what should be done if the tree is to make the best development.

There is probably no force, not excepting steam, that possesses the force exhibited in the expanding of freezing water. The results of this tremendous power are everywhere visible in nature and form a most interesting line of thought for those of an inquiring mind.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion among breeders of experience that continual breeding from immature sows tends to produce a type of hog lacking in vitality and sturdiness of frame and more subject than the offspring of mature sows to diseases. In the same way the first calf of young heifers is seldom taken as a producer of breeding types.

The laws in most states make the maintenance of the partition fence between two places a matter of joint responsibility as between the respective owners. The type of fence desired by one proprietor, provided it is within the scope of the definition of a legal fence, the other proprietor can be made to furnish through appeal to the trustees having these matters in charge.

White clover not only makes a most excellent pasture grass and source of food supply for bees at blossom time, but the superintendent of one western road—the O. R. and N.—is making tests of it with considerable success as a means of preventing the washing of its cuts along the Columbia river. The clover roots make a fibrous and compact mass, while there is sufficient moisture from soil and air to insure its vigorous growth.

On the basis of its value in increasing crop production fresh manure is rated as having a value of $2.25 per ton, and experiments which have been made show that it will lose one-third of its value if it is allowed to leach for three months. This is not a large loss on a single ton, but it means that 100 tons of such fertilizer would be worth $225 and that the loss referred to would be $75, enough to buy a manure spreader or give the boy eight weeks at an agricultural college.

While not much has been said about it, the fact remains that an increase of about 15 per cent was tacked on to the several cereals by the Payne tariff bill, which its makers contended reduced materially the duties on the necessaries of life. It is a well known fact that there was no demand on the part of the grain growers of the country for this increase; hence it was probably levied at the instigation of the speculators and millers to help themselves directly and which they could refer to as a compensation to the farmer for placing hides on the free list.

There is being conducted in the state of Wisconsin during the present months a cow contest, which aims to discover the champion butter producer of the state. The two animals having the highest records for the first month have shown a butter return ranging between sixty and eighty pounds. The dairyman who is interested in balanced rations will note with interest the bill of fare which the two cows have been receiving. The one showing the largest returns is given thirty-five pounds of corn silage, ten pounds of alfalfa, four pounds of wheat bran and four pounds of ground barley daily. The second cow is fed thirty-five pounds of corn silage, thirty pounds of mangels, eight pounds of timothy and clover hay, eight pounds of cornmeal and four pounds of gluten meal daily. It is not surprising that cows that get outside of such an amount of raw materials do business at milking time. In quite a real sense they are milk manufactories and are viewed as such by the men who own them.

If any readers of these notes sustained losses last season as a result of smut in their small grain the same difficulty may be headed off this season by treating the seed with a formalin solution. This fungicide is made by diluting a pint of 40 per cent formalin in about thirty gallons of water. The seed, which should be treated a few hours before using, should be spread about six inches deep on the barn or granary floor and the solution sprinkled over it evenly, care being taken not to put on so much that it will soak through to the floor beneath. When the sprinkling has been done the grain should be shoveled over and mixed thoroughly, so that all of the seed will be moistened with the solution. An inspection will show whether enough solution has been added the first time. If not, the seed may be given a second sprinkling. Machines costing $6 or $7 are on the market which have a tank containing the solution, through which the seed is passed and given thorough treatment. Such machine could treat seed for half a dozen or more farms and might well be owned jointly.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 299 of the General Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

Chapter 22 of the Revised Laws of Minnesota, 1905, entitled "Forestry and Fire Wardens," requires the Forestry Commissioner to prepare an abstract of the penal laws relating to forest and prairie fires and he may require any county board to cause at least three weeks published notice thereof to be given. The following is accordingly hereby published:

STATE OF MINNESOTA.
Office of Forestry Commissioner.
St. Paul, March 15, 1910

The law of Minnesota for preventing and suppressing forest and prairie fires, as amended by Chapter 182 Laws of 1909, makes town supervisors, town clerks, village presidents and mayors of cities fire wardens, and requires them to take precautions against such fires, report them promptly and prosecute offenders.

THE LAW FORBIDS:

Setting fires and not extinguishing it before it endangers the property of another;

Throwing or dropping burning substance into combustible material without extinguishing same;

Starting camp-fire without clearing ground within radius of ten feet;

Setting fire to brush or slashings in clearing land before piling same.

Setting fire to brush or slashings or other combustible material in a dry season, or allowing fire to be burning or smouldering in such season.

Those who cut timber or wood to sell must pile the slashings and burn the same as soon as practicable, and when it can be done without danger, and before the first of May.

Rangers may be appointed in a dry and dangerous season.

Railroad companies must keep their right of way clear of combustible material, extinguish fires that occur near their lines of road, also patrol their roads in dangerous weather. The master mechanic and locomotive engineer, as well as the company, are responsible for the efficiency of spark arresters.

The minimum penalty for violation of any of the provisions of this law is $50, the maximum penalty, $100 or three months imprisonment in jail.

FIVE HUNDRED REMAIN IDLE

Only Small Percentage of Striking Street Car Employes of Stockholm Taken Back — Norwegian Writer Tells an Interesting Bjornson Story. Commander Peary Expected to Address University of Copenhagen.

Only about 300 of the men employed by the Northern Street Railway company in Stockholm have been taken back to work. There are, therefore, about 500 former employes of the company who are without employment at present and indications are that they will not be taken back to work by the company. The Anti-Emigration society has been trying to do something for these men and their families and a few of them have been settled on small farms, which they will be given a chance to buy after a while if they succeed in making good. This is the first time that the Anti-Emigration society has been in a position to do any particular good for the workingmen and even in the aforementioned cases it is largely and purely an experiment.

It appears thus far no place for the stadium has been selected for the Olympian games, which are to be held in Stockholm in 1912. Of course there is plenty of time yet to make a selection, but it is too important a matter to drag along. The committee did select Idrottsparken for this purpose and for a time the question was supposed to have been definitely settled. Still this selection proved to be a mistake, for the Gymnastic Central institute advances the claim that the proprietors of Idrottsparken have already rented the grounds for other purposes. In the fall of 1907 the institute entered into an agreement with the proprietors to build a gymnastic institute on that ground for $67,000.

A significant phase of the campaign against tuberculosis in Sweden is the establishment by various industrial concerns of sanatoria for tuberculous workmen from their own factories. The Vulcan Match company, the Ljusne-Voxne Timber company, the Sandviken Hardware company, the Ericksson Telephone company and the Stora Kopparber company are among those who maintain such institutions, each accommodating from fifteen to thirty patients. At these sanatoria the workmen are received free and their families may be admitted for a small charge.

A London paper recently printed the unauthenticated report that Dowager Queen Sofia of Sweden would spend the remainder of her days in England. There is, of course, no foundation to this whatever. She will return to Stockholm during the latter part of May or in the early part of June and shortly after her arrival she will move to Ulriksdal, which is her favorite place for the summers.

Stockholm is busy preparing to give a proper reception to Colonel Roosevelt, who is expected to arrive some time in May. That Stockholm will be in gala attire is needless to state. The American ex-president will be given a rousing reception and one which he will not soon forget.

Princess Maria is at present sojourning in Rome. An Italian paper says that she is one of the most beautiful living princesses and that her beauty outranks that of the crown princess of Roumania.

There are not less than 180,000 women in Sweden who have the name of Maria. There is consequently a Maria day, which is annually proving a great boon to florists and confectionery stores.

Crown Princess Gustave Adolph of Sweden, formerly Princess Margaret of Connaught, gave birth to a daughter March 28. Other children are Gustave Adolph, born in 1906, and Sigvard, a year younger.

There are at present about 30,000 foreigners in Sweden. Among these the Germans are in the majority.

Commander Peary, discoverer of the North pole, will probably address the University of Copenhagen some time in May. The great American Arctic explorer is to come to Europe in the latter part of April and has been invited to deliver an address in Copenhagen. While he has not definitely accepted the invitation it is generally believed that he will come, if for no other purpose than to show up the fallacious statements made by Dr. Cook while he was over here to lecture and set forth his claims before the Geographical society. The learned university audience that will greet Commander Peary will, in fact, be the most critical and skeptical that he will address and there is no gainsaying the fact that his coming is awaited with ardent interest on the part of Danish explorers and scientists, all of whom are well versed in Arctic history and explorations. The University of Copenhagen has not and will not, we understand, ask that the Peary records be submitted to it for examination. It is felt that the fact that the action of the American Geographical society in passing favorably upon these records has put the fact that Peary actually did reach the pole beyond discussion.

Under legislation enacted in 1905 the Danish government pays three-fourths of the expenses of all poor persons who desire to be treated in tuberculosis sanatoria. When the hospitals under course of construction are completed Denmark will have one bed in tuberculosis hospitals or sanatoria for every 1,200 inhabitants, a fact which will mean that the length of treatment can be considerably extended. In the United States there is one bed for every 4,500 inhabitants.

A dispatch dated Copenhagen, March 29, says: "King Frederick declared today that the United States was the model for all nations. This expression was made to American Minister Egan, who, having recently returned to the Danish capital, was received in audience by his majesty. Mr. Egan brought a personal message to the king from President Taft. During a conversation of nearly an hour the Danish monarch exhibited an intelligent acquaintance with and deep sympathy in American affairs. During this audience Mrs. Egan and Miss Egan were received by the queen."

Prince and Princess Christian of Denmark have left Copenhagen for Cannes, where they are the guests of the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin at the Villa Wenden. Prince and Princess Christian will probably go to England early in June on a visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House and at Frogmore lodge, in which case they will be present at the Ascot races on the two royal days of the meeting.

Eric Gundmark, the Norwegian writer, tells an interesting Bjornson story, which well deserves to go the rounds. "One day Bjornson was traveling through Valders and was going to cross Filefield. His conveyance was a carriole with a boy, as usual, perched behind. The road was very dirty and the going very heavy, but as they went along they enjoyed a very lively conversation. Presently there was a long pause, during which Bjornson was immersed in thought. At length the boy said: 'What are you thinking of now, Bjornson?' 'Oh,' said Bjornson, 'I was thinking how that big wheel of the carriage reminds me of the wheel of time, which whirls great men away from each other. Now Ibsen is in Germany, Jonas Lie in Paris, Christopher Jansen in America and here I am sitting in this carriole.' The boy made no answer, but seemed very thoughtful. Soon they reached a flat stretch of road and Bjornson whipped up the horse. They traveled faster now, but both were silent. After a time Bjornson asked the boy: 'What are you thinking about, my boy?' 'Oh,' was the reply, 'I was only thinking of the big wheel of the carriole and how it throws one large piece of mud here and another there.'"

Captain Roald Amundsen, who has been making active preparations for a new North polar expedition, has suddenly encountered some unpleasant financial difficulties, which may curtail his plans, at least for the present. Many foreign firms who have promised to lend financial assistance are hesitating to do so on the ground that Peary's alleged discovery of the North pole has lessened the interest in future North polar expeditions. It also is barely possible that the storthing will refuse to make its appropriation of 20,000 crowns, which was originally promised from that body. The loss from the firms that promised to contribute is estimated by Amundsen to amount to more than 50,000 crowns. It is reported that Amundsen has not given up hope yet and that he is determined to make another dash for the pole. But if Peary did it Amundsen is a little late in the game.

When Colonel Roosevelt reaches Christiania he will be taken care of by United States Consul Pierce, who will take him about the capital and also be his host while he is in the city. A great deal of interest attaches to the coming of Colonel Roosevelt in the Norwegian capital and there will be more people in Christiania that week than during the late coronation week.

JUDGE THOMAS WILSON DEAD

Noted Minnesota Jurist Victim of Heart Failure.

Judge Thomas Wilson, who for the past eighteen years had been general counsel for the Omaha railroad, was found dead in the bathroom of his suite in a St. Paul hotel.

The well known jurist and attorney had been dead several hours when found, and, according to the coroner and Dr. Alexander J. Stone, a lifelong friend of the deceased, death was due to a ruptured blood vessel in the brain or heart failure, both conditions being discovered following an examination of the body.

Judge Wilson was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, May 6, 1827, and was therefore nearly eighty-three years old. He came to the United States in 1838, and in 1852 he was graduated from Allegheny college, Pennsylvania. Three years later he came to Minnesota and located in Winona, where he engaged in general law practice.

He was a member of the constitutional convention in 1857 and district judge in Winona from 1857 to 1864. The latter year he became an associate justice of the state supreme court and from January, 1865, to 1869 he was chief justice of that tribunal. In 1880 he was elected representative to the legislature and served one term, following which he held one term as senator from Winona county. In 1886 he was elected representative to congress from the First district, but, being a Democrat, he served only one term. In 1892 he was chosen general counsel for the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railroad and removed to St. Paul, and since then he has continued his residence here. Four years ago he was appointed a member of the board of regents of the state university.

WILLING TO RETURN MONEY

St. Paul Volunteer Captain Denies Criminal Liability.

Captain Tim Murphy of the St. Paul corps, Volunteers of America, accused of embezzling $1,250 of the funds of that organization, submitted to a long interview at the Ramsey county jail for the first time since the development of definite police evidence and, among other things, these are the results:

His defense on the charge of embezzling $1,250 from funds collected on tag day for the Working Girl's Christian home will be that he cannot be criminally prosecuted, as the money belonged as much to him as anyone, as agent. The county attorney's office denies this. He said he would be willing to work his fingers off to return every cent, whether he took it or not, for the cause.

Incidentally he denounced Adjutant J. H. Berry of Chicago and Adjutant O'Neal of Minneapolis and threatened to make the police detectives take water when he got out. He complained bitterly that he was not getting a square deal and said he doubted if there was any Christian spirit in St. Paul.

DULUTH'S LID FITS TIGHT

City at Head of Lakes Undergoing a Moral Cleaning.

Duluth now boasts of the tightest "lid" in the state and it has been brought about so quietly that few but old time "rounders" realize it. The state liquor laws are being enforced to the letter, even the fashionable cafes refusing to sell liquor after closing hours and on Sunday. "Blind pigs," which flourished in the Austrian and Italian boarding houses, are being raided almost daily and the police are not content to let the offenders off with a light fine, but are taking the cases before the grand jury. Immoral women are being herded into police court and either sent to jail or run out of town. The resorts, which were for years notorious, are closed down and on the whole the city is experiencing a moral cleaning such as it has not had before in its history.

IN TRYING TO SAVE BROTHER

Youth Drowned in Rapid River Near Spooner.

Emmanuel Hanson, seventeen years of age, the eldest son of Mrs. Betsy Hanson of Spooner, was drowned in the west branch of the Rapid river at that place while trying to save the life of his little brother and another little fellow.

Both young boys were playing on the banks of the river and fell in the water.

The oldest brother plunged into the river, and, in trying to save them, got under the ice and was lost from sight.

The two little fellows were rescued by Ole Hanson.

Would Be Poisoner Insane.

The final act in the Cedar Mills (Meeker county) candy poisoning case, which had baffled the authorities until Miss Lena Hackbarth confessed to the crime, was enacted in the probate court at Litchfield when Judge Harris declared her insane. It is thought she will be benefited by treatment at the Fergus Falls hospital, where she was taken.

Acquitted of White Slavery.

Charles Busher, the former resident of Hurley, Wis., who was tried at Duluth on a charge of bringing immoral women into the state, was acquitted by the jury. Blanche Walsh Costin was the principal witness for the state.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

AT ST. PAUL ON JUNE 21

Place and Date of Republican State Convention.

A Republican state convention of 1,075 delegates will meet in the St. Paul Auditorium at 11 a. m. June 21 to nominate a candidate for United States senator, four associate justices of the supreme court and candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, attorney general, railroad commissioner and clerk of the supreme court.

It took the Republican state committee but a little over an hour of actual work to settle all its business after a luncheon at the Merchants' hotel at St. Paul. The committee first selected June 23 as the date, but later reconsidered its decision and decided on June 21.

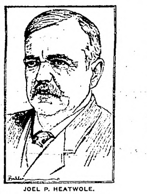
Senator Clapp's friends induced the committee to go a step further than ever before. Previous conventions have "endorsed" a candidate for the United States senate, or have "expressed a preference." The call this year will provide that the convention on June 21 "nominate" a candidate for senator. This, the senator's friends think, will make the Clapp endorsement more binding.

JOEL P. HEATWOLE IS DEAD

Well Known Editor of the Northfield News Expires Suddenly.

Joel P. Heatwole, the well known editor of the Northfield News, died suddenly at his residence in that city. In spite of the fact that Mr. Heatwole suffered with Brights disease and had been in poor health for some time his death was wholly unexpected.

Mr. Heatwole was born in Waterford Mills, Ind., Aug. 22, 1856. Attended public and private schools; worked on a farm; worked in printing shops; taught country and village schools; owned a newspaper in 1876; came to Minnesota in 1882; worked on the Enterprise, Glencoe, and Lake Superior News, Duluth; bought the Northfield News in 1884.



JOEL P. HEATWOLE.

He served three terms as president of the Minnesota Editorial association; delegate to state Republican convention in 1886; member state Republican committee and secretary; same positions in 1888; delegate at large to the national Republican convention in 1888; chairman state Republican committee in 1890; member state board of regents state university; defeated for congress in 1892; elected mayor of Northfield in 1894; elected to congress in 1894 by a plurality of 5,268, the district having nearly 9,000 Democratic and Populist majority in 1890; was re-elected in 1896 by a majority of over 6,000, and re-elected in 1898 and 1900, respectively, by increased majorities; member of the committee on foreign affairs for eight years; member of the sub-committee dealing with Cuban affairs; one of the three house conferees having under consideration the resolutions leading to the war with Spain; chairman of the committee on printing for four years; member, among others, of the committees on census, board of visitors to naval academy, Capitol celebration.

RESULT OF PETTY QUARREL

Young Minneapolis Clerk Killed by an Italian.

As the result of a petty quarrel on a Minneapolis street car, in which he stepped on the toes of some Italians who were standing in the aisle, August Johnson, a young clerk was shot and instantly killed just as the Italians left the car. Johnson was shot in the head and died instantly, falling over against the gates. A policeman on the car gave chase and after a squad of officers had been sent out twelve Italians were taken to the Central station and three are suspected of having been involved in the quarrel.

BURGLARS' OUTFIT

Young Boys Find a Complete Safe Blower's Outfit Out Near G. N. Stockyards.

Outfit Probably Left There Last Fall by a Party of Safe Blowers.

Young boys, the sons of Section Foreman Moran and Wm. Blake, found a bank burglars' outfit out near the stockyards of the Great Northern last week. From all appearances it is quite evident that the tools had not been used to blow up any safe, and just why will perhaps never be known. The outfit, which consisted of two rifles, shells, a bottle of nitroglycerine, dynamite caps, fuse, two bars of soap, putty knife, a butcher's knife, wire cutters, bread and sausage, had evidently been left there last fall.

The guns are of a peculiar make, and a kind not in use in this section. They were repeaters, each having fifteen shells. There is no name upon them to signify who is the manufacturer and the cartridges are of a peculiar shape and a size not sold by the local dealers. The cartridges also had no mark to designate the manufacturer and it is evident that they were manufactured in some foreign country. The guns were wrapped up in paper and the other articles were in suit cases.

As there was a full supply of everything it is evident that the robbers had made arrangements to blow some safe in this vicinity, but evidently were frightened out or for some other cause did not do the job.

To Leave Red Lake Falls.

Fred Borchers, while in the west two weeks ago, closed a business deal that means that he and his family are to leave Red Lake Falls. Mr. Borchers will locate in Missoula, Montana. He has purchased half a block of ground in a good location in that city upon which location he will erect sheds and establish a lumber yard. The opening of the reservation and other causes are inducing much building in the country tributary to Missoula and consequently in the city also and Mr. Borchers believes that there is an excellent opportunity in the lumber business there. He expects to close out his business interests here so as to be able to leave for the west the last of the month.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Peat Beds at Fertile.

The Peat Fuel Maufacturing Co., has filed a deed with Register of Deeds Thompson for 240 acres of peat bed land near Fertile, the consideration being $60,000.00. As stated the offices of the new company, which has just incorporated, will be in Minneapolis and the first annual meeting will be held there on May 2, The capitalization is $250,000 and work will be started at once on a big plant for briquetting the peat after it is dried by a part air, part steam process, and the product will be put on the market to compete with coal, the fibrous portion being separated and baled for use in cities as stable litter, being both a disinfectant and an absorbent. The product will be ready for the market early next fall.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the congregation of the Presbyterian church was held last Thursday evening. Reports showed the church to be in a flourishing condition financially. The following trustees were elected for the year: H. G. Dobner, P. N. Pannebaker and George L. Stearns.

Satisfied to Stay Here.

About twenty farmers from Roseau and vicinity returned from Canada this week where they went some time ago to look over the country. They saw many parts of western Canada and looked into conditions carefully, but all of them came to the conclusion that they could in no way improve themselves by locating there. They returned to Roseau more enthusastic for this country than ever.—Roseau Region.

Bound Over to Grand Jury.

The case of the state against W. E. Rose, charged with running a resort known as No. II across the Great Northern track was heard last Friday before Special Municipal Judge Richardson. While the testimony introduced was not very strong, in the minds of the people—and perhaps the judge—Rose was guilty and he was bound over to the October grand jury by Mr. Richardson, bail being fixed at $400. It is not at all likely that a jury will find Rose guilty.

A large number of W. C. T. U. ladies and other citizens were in attendance at the trial.

That's the Remedy.

The Farmer: The meat boycott; if persisted in, may result in reducing prices paid the farmers for fat stock, but none need think for a minute that it will reduce the packers, exorbitant profits. The Farmer suggests a better way of dealing with the meat trust, to-wit: Let congress invest the price of one big battleship in a packing house to be built at Chicago or Kansas City, put its management under civil service regulations, sell its product at a five per cent profit after paying top market prices for fat stock, said profit to be invested in branch packeries. We have a hunch that this course of procedure would result in the meat trust learning to make use of the only portion of the hog it has thus far been unable to utilize—that is the squeal.

Those who donned the "glad rags" and participated in the glorious festivities at the grand Union Ball, have been convinced that the clothes are an essential part of a person's enjoyment. If you are well dressed you need have no fear that you are losing part of your enjoyment because you are not as well dressed as the next one. Not only is this true socially, but a man's business abilities are generally judged by his general appearance. There are numerous brands of clothing, but none surpass the clothes manufactured by the House of Kuppenheimer

The peace of mind that a man gets by wearing Kuppenheimer Clothes is worth the whole price of the clothes. And when you add to this that Kuppenheimer workmanship and fabric makes a suit last almost twice as long, you no longer wonder why so many men wear them. This is the house of the celebrated WALK-OVER Shoe.

F. M. EDDY IN THE CITY

Man Who Formerly Represented This District in Congress Pays Us a Visit.

Sees a Big Change in Thief River Falls Since Here Last.

Hon. Frank M. Eddy, who for eight years represented this section in congress when it was part of the old Seventh district, spent a couple of days in the city last week, and visited with his many old friends here. In the old days, Mr. Eddy was perhaps the best vote-getting politician that ever ran for office in Minnesota, and he built up a personal political machine that was a great power to the Republican party. In those days the old Seventh district had a habit of giving a majority for Bryan of about 25,000, yet Mr. Edy always managed to get elected to congress. He always started his campaign early in the summer, and, as the district covered nearly one fourth of the state, it kept him busy until fall visiting the various countries. When the roads were bad he walked, and became personally acquainted with nearly every voter in his district.

Mr. Eddy is out of the political game now, so he states, and spends most of his time upon the lecture platform expousing the temperance cause. His present trip through the state, however, was for the purpose of writing an article for an eastern newspaper syndicate upon the congressional situation in this state. Regarding the situation in the Ninth, Mr. Eddy was of the opinion that Congressman Steenerson would again be nominated, but he thought that the election result would be close if Ole Sageng entered the field.

It has been ten years since Mr. Eddy has visited Thief River Falls and naturally he saw many changes. He visited the new auditorium and admitted that it was somewhat different from the hall which he used to speak in while here. "As I remember it," said Mr. Eddy, "planks on top of beer kegs were used instead of seats, and furnished accomodations for about one hundred voters. We always had a good time, even if our meetings did sometimes break up in a row."

Help the Census Enumerator.

Tomorrow the census of the United States begins. This important work comes once each ten years and as already known by every reader of this paper, farmers can do much to aid the census bureau in securing this valuable data. No phase of the census is of as much importance as that relating to the farm, because agriculture is, after all, the basis of national properity. In conscientiously carrying out the requirments of the census bureau his task is not an easy one. No class of citizens has higher intelligence than our farm folk; but many, even the best of us, will find the census blanks more or less complicated. Patience and pains must be taken in filling these out. It should be remembered that while the taking of this federal census is a command on the part of Uncle Sam, it is not employed to obtain information for other than general statistical and comparative purposes. The individual returns will not be published nor used in any way to disclose facts regarding any person or enterprise. Let us heartily co operate with the work of the census taker to thus make more valuable this record of the country's material progress.

Dance a Big Success.

The dance given by the four union railroad organizations in the new auditorium last Friday evening was largely attended, but it was impossible to say how many were present. All present had a most enjoyable time. Just how much the railroad boys made will not be known for a few weeks yet, as it will take that long before the returns from the sale of tickets are all in. The attendance from outside towns was large.

Surprising Facts About the Patent Medicine Business.

"The Fourth Estate" has been warning publishers about the risk in allowing credit to new medicine concerns. It is said that there have been only one or two of the thousands of new proprietary medicine houses have made any considerable money that have started the past twenty years and only a very few more that have met with even moderate success. It is the general impression that the business is immensely profitable while the facts are that there is a larger percentage of failures than in any other line. The new concerns usually start with lots of confidence in the merit of their goods and advertising but soon exhaust their capital leaving dealers who have stocked their medicines with unsalable goods on their shelves. It is the experience of many publishers that have accepted this new business that they have been compelled to charge off their bills to profit and loss. There are many old and reliable medicine houses that continue to do a good or increasing business from year to year but the new ones are finding it more and more difficult to become established.

Constitutional Amendments.

Six constitutional amendments will be submitted to the voters of the state at the general election next November. The voters will do well to study them up in order that they may vote intelligently. The amendments are as follows:

Changing the good roads provision so that the state can pay half instead of one third of the cost of state roads.

Repealing the requirement that the reports of the state treasurer be bound in the same volume as the session laws.

Permitting the state to conduct a hail and tornado insurance.

Providing a 1-15 mill tax for reforestation.

Permitting the legislature to make a reapportionment at any session following a census.

Permitting the legislature to exempt timber lands from taxation.

PART OF RED LAKE "DRY"

Special Agent Johnson Says That Only Beer Can Be Sold at Plummer.

Issues an Order This Week Closing Many Saloons in Northern Minnesota.

William E. Johnson, special agent of the government Indian service, this week issued a most sweeping order, closing up many saloons in Northern Minnesota.

Accompaning the order issued is an order prohibiting the sale of "spirituous liquors" in sections of Norman, Polk and Red Lake counties. The saloons in these districts will be allowed to sell beer and malt, but not whiskey.

The portion of Red Lake county affected is all that territory lying east of range 44 and south of township 152. This takes in the township of Gervais, Terrebonne, Emardville, Poplar River, Garnes, Lambert, and Equality. As Brooks has voted out the saloons, it does not affect this place. There are two saloons, however, at Plummer and one at Lambert in the territory prohibited, and while these places will be allowed to run, they will not be allowed to sell anything but beer and malt. The order goes into effect May 10.

Two More Ditches.

At the meeting of the county commissioners held last Saturday, two new ditches were established. Ditch No. 42 will drain lands in the town of Mayfield south of the Red Lake river and Ditch No. 43, known as the Brown ditch, will drain lands north of the Red Lake river in the towns of Hickory and Star.

IS ST. HILAIRE A VILLAGE

No Record That the Village Was Ever Incorporated Can Be Found.

Has Had a Village Form of Government for Over Thirty Years, However.

Is the village of St. Hilaire legally incorporated? That is a question that concerns the people down there. For over thirty years they have had a village form of government, but now they find themselves unable to prove it. Sometime ago this village voted bonds to the amount of $5,000 for the purpose of purchasing the water power there, and recently an attempt has been made to sell the bonds. The bonding company to which they were to be sold finds everything regular except that there is nothing to show that the village was ever incorporated. The records in the office of the secretary of state and the auditor's office in Crookston and Red Lake Falls have been searched, and it does not appear that the incorporation articles of the village have been filed. This in itself would be no serious matter, as it would be easy for the village to incorporate, but that would give the voters down there another chance to vote upon the license question, and the "drys" who have just recently voted out the saloons and elected a council in sympathy with this movement, do not want to take any chances, and consequently it is quite likely that the village will continue to be dry and get along with the form of government it has had for the past thirty years. The past actions of the village could be legalized by a special act of the legislature next winter.

Barley A Profitable Crop.

It would seem from a study in crop yields in Minnesota for the past ten years that barley is, all things considered, one of the most profitable grain crops grown in the United States. The following figures taken from the United States Department of Agriculture help to emphasize the fact. The average yields per acre of some of the grain crops in Minnesota are as follows: barley, 1255 pounds; oats 1058 pounds; wheat, 708 pounds; and flax, 594 pounds. The average market value per acre of these crops, based on an average farm price for ten years is Flax, $1027; barley, $1012 oats, $912; and wheat $877, which shows that excepting flax barley yields considerably more in money value per acre than does any other grain crops.

From the above it is seen that while barley yields less bushels per acre than oats, it yields 197 pounds per acre more than wheat, and more than twice as many pounds as flax.

Barley has the advantage over flax in being a good crop to clean land of weeds, and it may often be fed on the farm at a profit over market price.

From the standpoint of food value per acre, it is still farther ahead of other crops. Comparing these crops with bran at $20.00 per ton, the average yields per acre of food value are as follows: barley $13.25, oats, $9.91; wheat, $9.83, and flax $6.35.

The fact that barley requires a shorter growing period than the other grain crops gives to it many advantages. It may be seeded later, thus giving it a longer "seeding time." It may be harvested earlier, thus giving more time for harvest, and longer time for fall pasturing of the stubble fields if one has seeded rape or clover with the barley. It is not well to pasture newly seeded clover in the fall if it is to be left for a crop the following year. Barley grows so thick on the ground and so quickly that few weeds can grow on it, and the land may be treated to destroy weeds either before seeding barley or after harvesting it. Barley seeded early in the spring on fall plowed land or on disced corn stubble is one of the best nurse crops with which to seed clover or thimothy.

Barley should receive a fair trial on most farms of the Northwest, especially where corn is still a bit uncertain. It costs on the average, 65c per cwt. to raise corn.—A. D. Wilson.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep can not be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southers, Eau Claire, Wis., says:—"For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney Pills as I know they have cured me." Sold by All Druggists.

Comet to Appear Tomorrow.

Washington April 12.—Friday, April 15, at 4:30 a. m., will be the earliest time at which it will be worth while trying to see Haleys's comet. This information was furnished by one of the astronomers at the Georgetown university observatory.

During April and the early part of May the comet will be visible in the east before sunrise, a few degrees north of east. By May 17 it will be to nearly in line with the sun to be seen in the morning, but from then on will appear in the weste in the evening as soon as it gets dark enough.

On may 20 it will set two hours after the sun, with the interval growing longer each night.

Salvation Army.

There will be a very special service conducted by Mrs. J. H. Jacobson next week on Wednesday evening April 20th at 8 o'clock. The service is just for mothers and ladies not under 14 years of year, and Sister Jacobson is quite anxious, that all mothers and ladies shall be present at this service. There will be a free will offering taken on this occasion and I am sure you will be well paid to attend this service. The subject will be, Sin. Now please don,t forget this, and come along and bring a lady friend with you.

Yours to serve,
Capt. C. Pitt.

Bids Wanted.

Sealed bids will be received by the committee of the German Lutheran congregation for the erection of a church. All bids must be in by Thursday, April 28th at 6 p. m., when they will be opened. Every bid must be accompanied by a certified check amounting to 5 per cent of the contract work as a guarantee of good faith. Plans, and specifications can be seen with Rev. F. J. Seitz, 2t. The Building Committee.

Bids Wanted.

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the clerk of the school board of Independent School District No. 18, Thief River Falls, Minnesota, up to 1 o'clock p. m., April 16, 1910, for the erection and completion of a high school building. Separate bids will be received on heating and plumbing, at same time and place, and all bids to be made out on bidder's blank.

Plans and specifications may be seen at Clerk's office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota; and at the office of Fremont D. Orff, Architect, 616 Lumber Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., after April 4th, 1910.

Contractors applying for plans, will leave a certified check for $25 on heating and plumbing, and $50 on general plans with the parties from whom they obtain plans as a guarantee that they will return plans at the time agreed upon, and that they will put in a bid to Clerk of school board with certified check as called for.

If this has been complied with the $25 and $50 checks will be returned on opening of bids and return of plans to office. Each bid of whatever kind it may be is to be accompanied by a certified check of 5 per cent of amount of bid as a guarantee of good faith in carrying out of contract. The right to reject any and all bids is reserved.

By order of the School Board, Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

New Name for Plummer.

Division Superintendant Michaels, of the Soo Line stopped off here Friday for a short talk with some of the local business men, in regard to the changing the name of the town as there are two other towns on the Soo Line by the name of Plummer and this fact is continually causing confusion in the matter of freight, etc.

While the idea did not strike the business men very favorably on account of advertising, stationery, and the trouble and confusion it would cause for some time to come it seems that the railroad has the arbitrary right to change the name of a station whenever they so desire tho the people have the say in regard to the postoffice.—Plummer Pioneer.

School Notes.

The lower grade teachers are planting seeds of various sorts in order to have material for practical nature study work. Miss Haslipe's little people will soon have tomato and cabbage plants for sale, the proceeds of which will be used for the purchase of pictures for the room.

The two girls in the high school cooking classes who in turn daily prepare a meal or lunch, the material for which is secured from the sale of ten tickets at ten cents each, are meeting with excellent success. This special effort does not interfere with the regular daily work of the class, but is additional to all other duties. The lunches are served after dismissal at 4 o'clock.

Miss Wold's room of 70 first primary pupils was reorganized on Monday so as to permit of half day sessions. This makes longer hours and more work for the teacher, but the interests of the children are better cared for.

The school grounds are receiving their usual spring cleaning up. They are among the neatest kept properties in the city as the they ought to be.

Miss Stubbings of the domestic science department is ill at her room with an attack of the measles.

April 29th has been designated by the state superintendent as arbor and bird day. It is not a legal holiday and suitable exercises will be held in the several rooms in observance of the event.

The normal students are teaching nature study work this week for the first period in the morning in the lower grade rooms. Many of these young ladies have already proved themselves capable of performing very creditable work as teachers.

Norwegians to Celebrate.

The 17th of May, Norway's Independence Day, will be celebrated in Thief River Falls this year in an appropriate manner. The exercises are to take place in the new auditorium and will be under the auspices of the Sons of Norway. Speakers from abroad of national reputation will be present and a program appropriate for the occasion will be rendered.

Fred Sibley Killed.

The entire community were shocked Monday night when the news flashed over the wire that Fred Sibley, of Island Lake, had met his death while riding on the pilot of the engine of a logging train, near Whitefish lake, at about nine o'clock in the evening, when that train had struck some cars standing on the main track. The shock was so severe as the wreck the engine, throwing it over on its side. The engineer was not injured, but the fireman received some minor scratches. Mr. Sibley was pinned between the pilot and the cars, and when help arrived he was dead. No one seems to know how the cars came to be on the main track.

Mr. Sibley was one of the best known men in our country, having been elected several times to the office of county commissioner. The funeral services were held in Bemidji, Thursday afternoon, at the city hall, under the auspices of the Masonic lodge, of which he was a member. Rev. Chas. E. White, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, officiated.—Bemidji Sentinel.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Railroads in Minnesota must pay their proportionate share of assessments for municipal improvements, according to the decision handed down by Judge William Louis Kelly of the Ramsey county district court in the cases of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern roads against the city of St. Paul on account of the St. Anthony Park and the Arch street main sewer systems.

There is little prospect for Minnesota to secure the $495,000 claimed to be due from the federal government on account of government land transactions. The bill providing for payment of over $8,000,000 to twenty-six states on this account has been before congress for a number of years, but there is little hope of its passage.

In the opinion of Attorney General Simpson members of the national guard of Minnesota must pay personal property tax just like other folks. The practice of permitting $200 exemption has been of long standing and the ruling of the attorney general follows a request made upon him by the state tax commission.

Glanders has disappeared entirely from the lumber camps of Northern Minnesota, as far as Dr. S. H. Ward of the state live stock sanitary board can see. He has returned from an inspection trip covering nineteen camps and about 700 horses. Not a single case of glanders was found.

The indications are that John Peterson, for three terms collector of internal revenue for the district of Minnesota, is not to be reappointed. W. W. Rich, custodian of public buildings at St. Paul and campaign manager for Senator Clapp, is being boomed as successor to Mr. Peterson.

Arrangements have been made at Winona for the incorporation of a company with a capital of $200,000 for the manufacture of gas traction engines. Winona business men have subscribed the required capital stock.

Owners of dams and others who lost heavily in the washout of the Fergus Falls electric light dam last September have decided to bring suits against the city for damages.

The fourteenth annual convention and exposition of the Minnesota Retail Hardware association was held at the Auditorium at St. Paul last week.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The epidemic of measles which is now prevalent in St. Paul and which has been the cause of considerable comment is said by physicians to be very mild in its nature. It is estimated that there are perhaps 600 cases at the present time and there are many more which have recovered within the past two months and yet of this whole number there has been only one fatality.

Max Tracy, twenty years old, employed in a Winona medical plant lighted a match to ascertain the depth of alcohol in a barrel. A terrific explosion followed. The top of the barrel was blown through the roof and the young man's face was so badly burned he may lose his eyesight.

George Duehring, fireman on engine No. 190, that was double-heading Omaha passenger train No. 42 north on the Elmore branch, was instantly killed and Engineer Richard Temple was slightly injured when their engine left the track near Garden City and tipped over.

Mrs. D. J. Bassett of Minneapolis is dead at Brookline, Mass., as a result of injuries which she sustained at a fire which destroyed her daughter's home. When the house was burning Mrs. Bassett jumped from a second story window and received serious injuries.

Antonio D. Agostino had a hearing at Moorhead on the charge of murdering Antonio Suosito at Dilworth and was held for the district court. It was shown at the hearing the crime was committed in a fit of jealousy.

Louis Furtcher, who has a wife and eight children at Stillwater, this state, was instantly killed by logs rolling upon him at a saw mill at Hayward, Wis.

Less than 200 years ago the watchmen of London town, carrying horn lanthorns and halberds, dressed in long coats and knee breeches, walked up and down the cobbled streets of the world's largest city chanting the following verse:

A light there, maids! Hang out your light
And see your horns be clear and bright,
That so your candle clear may shine,
Continuing from six to nine,
That honest men that walk along
May see to pass safe without wrong.

It is beyond our comprehension and imagination in these days of flaming arc lamps and brilliantly lighted streets to picture the streets of London in the lawless age when only a candle with a cotton wick was hung out here and there on dark nights. It was an age of lanthorns, of flambeaux and linkboys, when every one made his will and prepared for death when he ventured out at night.

It is so written that it was a common practice in that city for a company of a hundred or more to make nightly invasions upon houses of the wealthy to kill and rob, and it is recorded "that when night was come no man durst venture to walk in the streets."—Springfield Union.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

The Dialogue That Took Place After the Dance Ended.

A well known and popular Los Angeles physician upon the occasion of a recent visit to a professional friend at Fresno (the physician in charge of the state institution for the deaf and dumb) was invited to attend one of the periodical "hops" given the inmates. All the unfortunates and a goodly sprinkling of guests were present.

Before the function had progressed very far the Fresno physician approached his Los Angeles medical friend with, "Get busy, doctor!" The doctor got busy. Although tipping the scales at 210, he is an easy and graceful dancer and much enjoys the exercise. Approaching a young lady of singular sweetness and beauty, he indicated his desire to dance with her. She proved to be as witching with her feet as with her eyes, and our Los Angeles friend, in contempt of all convention, danced two or three numbers with her.

At the close of the last one a gentleman approached his charming partner and asked for the next dance. "I should be delighted to favor you, my friedn," said she in a voice no less sweet than her face, "but I've promised to dance the next number with this dummy here!"

Each had taken the other for an inmate!—Los Angeles Times.

Bees are diminutive creatures, but collectively they are a very considerable factor in the business and commerce of the country. Late statistics show that the honey and wax industry of the United States has an annual value of $25,000,000, while it is estimated that the capital invested in the business totals $100,000,000. The number of those who keep bees and produce honey for market in any quantity is placed at 275,000, while the number of those who keep a hive or two to supply sweets for the family is very large. These are the tangible assets of the bee business. Another service bees render doubtless far in excess of the value of the honey they produce is that of the fertilizing of many varieties of fruit blossoms, vegetables, certain clovers and alfalfa.

In spite of the statement so often made that there will be a serious overproduction of apples if the planting of new orchards continues at the present rate there seems to be slight ground for apprehension in view of the statistics of apple production for the past fourteen years. This cry of overproduction was raised as long ago as the fifties and sixties, but the dire prophecy has never materialized. In spite of the rapid increase of population there has been a marked decrease in apple production during the past fourteen years, doubtless largely due to inroads of insects and fungous pests, exhausted soils, unfavorable climatic conditions and general carelessness and neglect. To those who have thought on the matter the following figures will be significant. There may be an overproduction of apples some time, but this doesn't look like it:

Year.	Barrels.
1896	69,070,000
1897	41,536,000
1898	28,570,000
1899	58,460,000

Notice of Termination of Contract

WHEREAS, on the 30th day of December 1903 Ezra C. Eshelby and Ada Eshelby, his wife, as parties of the first part, made and executed a contract in writing wherein and whereby as parties of the first part they agree to convey to Marcus Gunderson as party of the second part, certain Real Estate lying and being in the County of Red Lake, and the state of Minnesota, described as follows: To-wit: Lots 18 and 20 in townsite of Fairfield, according to the recorded plat thereof and

WHEREAS, Said party of the second part by the terms of said contract agreed to pay as purchase price of the said premises the sum of two hundred and 50-100 dollars and interest on all deferred payments at the rate of seven per cent per annum and

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of the sum of two hundred sixty-five and no 10-100 dollars principal and interest now past due and owing on said contract.

NOW, THEREFORE: Notice is hereby given that the amount due and delinquent under said contract is the sum of Two hundred sixty five and no-100 Dollars and that the same may be paid at the office of Daniel Shaw, at Thief River Falls, in said county of Red Lake at any time within thirty days after the service of this notice: and

Notice, is further given that unless said sum is paid within the time aforesaid together with the costs of serving of this notice said contract will terminate and expire and be foreclosed on the first day of June, 1910.

Dated this 19th day of March, 1910.

Chapter 22 of the Revised of Laws Minnesota, 1905, entitled "Forestry and Fire Wardens," requires the Forestry Commissioner to prepare an abstract of the penal laws relating to forest and prairie fires and he may require any county board to cause at least three weeks published notice thereof to be given. The following is accordingly hereby published:

STATE OF MINNESOTA.
Office of Forestry Commissioner.
St. Paul, March 15, 1910.

The law of Minnesota for preventing and suppressing forest and prairie fires, as amended by Chapter 182 Laws of 1909, makes town supervisors, town clerks, village presidents and mayors of cities fire wardens, and requires them to take precautions against such fires, report them promptly and prosecute offenders.

THE LAW FORBIDS:

Setting fires and not extinguishing it before it endangers the property of another;

Throwing or dropping burning substance into combustible material without extinguishing same;

Starting camp-fire without clearing ground within radius of ten feet;

Setting fire to brush or slashings in clearing land before piling same;

Setting fire to brush or slashings or other combustible material in a dry season, or allowing fire to be burning or smouldering in such season.

Those who cut timber or wood to sell must pile the slashings and burn the same as soon as practicable, and when it can be done without danger, and before the first of May.

Rangers may be appointed in a dry and dangerous season.

Railroad companies must keep their right of ways clear of combustible material, extinguish fires that occur near their lines of road, also patrol their roads in dangerous weather. The master mechanic and locomotive engineer, as well as the company, are responsible for the efficiency of spark arresters.

The minimum penalty for violation of any of the provisions of this law is $50, the maximum penalty, $100 or three months imprisonment in jail.

C. C. ANDREWS,
apr. 7-21. Forestry Commissioner.

Its brakes out of commission a St. Louis street car dashed a quarter of a mile down a steep incline on Park avenue at full speed. One man was killed outright, seventeen persons were injured, seven of them seriously, and two carriages were demolished, while the car was completely wrecked.

Fire and suffering trailed the most intense cold wave of the season through Montana, Washington and British Columbia, causing $1,000,000 in losses by flames and great sacrifices of stock on the ranges.

By a fire of incendiary origin in a New York tenement fifteen persons were burned or injured and two will probably die. Many thrilling rescues were made by the firemen.

Three men and one woman are dead and one man is badly injured as the result of disastrous avalanches near Adair, Mont.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 299 of the General Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

SAMUEL G. IVERSON,
State Auditor.

The Socialists of Milwaukee won a very big victory last week and are in full control of the government of that city. This is an opportunity the Socialists have long wanted and upon the government that they give the tenth largest city in the United States during the next two years will largely depend the success of the movement in the United States. Victor L. Berger, one of the ablest Socialists in America, is one of the aldermen and he will probably be the leader of that body.

It is rumored that Senator Hanson, of Ada, will again be a candidate to succeed himself as senator from this district. Norman county will undoubtedly stand practically solid for Mr. Hanson if he makes up his mind to enter the race. —Twin Valley Times.

As we understand it, Senator Hanson has no desire personally to become a candidate, and if he enters the contest it must be at the urgent solicitation of the voters. For four years he has represented this district in the state senate and he has always stood for what was just and right. He should be encouraged to again make the run.

REDUCTION OF THE STATE TAX LEVY.

Once more the state tax levy for general purposes has fallen so low in spite of liberal appropriations by the legislature, as to suggest the arrival of a time when it may be dispensed with entirely. State expenditures have not diminished by any means; but the revenue from special taxes has so far increased as to reduce the necessity of raising money by general tax.

This increase grows generally out of the prosperity of the state, though a special addition to it is made this year by the payment of held-up taxes by certain railroads under the recent decision of the supreme court of he United States. The net result is the probable reduction of the tax levy for general purposes to one half of a mill.

Time was when states with large resources of special revenue looked forward to a time when they could do without the general property tax, removing the temptation for counties to juggle their assessments and opening the door to the academic blessing of local option in taxation. Yet it is observed in practice that states like New York and Ohio, which have approached most closely to abolition of the general property tax, shrink from the leap of giving it up entirely. The fact that special revenues increase in times of prosperity warns that they will fall off in times of depression, when a general tax may be required to meet public necessities that cannot be carried over. The ideal method seems to be to keep a small state tax levy like a small standing army as a nucleus for expansion in time of need.

In this we could postpone the disappearance of the general state levy by consolidating the special levies with it and making annual appropriation from the general fund for soldier's relief, roads and bridges, university and prison expansion.—Minneapolis Tribune.

SENATOR VEST'S EULOGY OF THE DOG.

Frequenters of the old police court in Washington remember the clippings of Senator Vest's eulogy of the dog which was pasted on the walls there. The speech was made by the senator while serving as attorney in the prosecution of a man who had wantonly shot the dog of a neighbor. The plaintiff had sued for $20, but after hearing senator Vest the jury returned a verdict for $500.

The speech, which will stand as a tribute to man's best friend, is as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son and daughter, that he has reared with loving care, may become ungrateful. Those who are nearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him when he may need it most. Man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of illconsidered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees and do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The absolutely unselfish friend a man may have in this selfish world, the one that never proves ungrateful or trecherous is the dog.

"Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground when the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince.

"When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast into the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard him against dangers, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes and death takes his master in its embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his gravestone will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death."

The animal kingdom affords no other example of such loyalty. The cat tribe has no such qualities. As Senator Vest said, man himself shows no such devotion to his fellow man as does the dog to his master. The tribute of his faithfulness is worthy of repetition and presenting before the new generation."

The Wise's Kept No Maid

This was economical and satisfying to Mrs. Wise. Things seemed right only when she did them.

It worked fine—everybody satisfied. Busy hands are happiest;—but the strain told—physically first, then mentally. One day she gave out—had to quit—"All run down" she said.

The facts were—complete physical exhaustion and ragged nerves, due to never-ending monotonous tasks.

The Wise's doctor said "DIGESTO"—a wine glass three times a day.

That did it.

The doctor made good, DIGESTO made good and both made Mrs. Wise good, and equal to her tasks with energy to spare.

Moral: Don't wait—take DIGESTO now. A perfect liquid food and body builder.

There is no cough medicine so popular as Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to cure coughs, colds, croup and bronchitis. Sold by all druggists.

Foley's Kidney Remedy will cure any case of kidney and bladder trouble not beyond the reach of medicine. No medicine can do more. Sold by All Druggists.

Allen W. Clark, of Rollis, spent Sunday in the city. Mr. Clark is taking a great interest in drainage matters and doing more to boom his home country than any other dozen men. He states that from correspondence that he is receiving he is of the opinion that there will be a large influx of settlers into this section this summer.

ATTRACTIVE HOMES

GOOD PAINT PUTS THE "FINISHING TOUCH" ON YOUR HOME.

Good Paint serves the house in the same way clothing serves our bodies. It makes our homes attractive, cheerful, wholesome; it protects them from wind and weather.

Good Paint, Blood's Paint, lends an air of refinement, adds an artistic charm to our homes while affording them every protection Good Paint can. It does this at a smaller yearly cost than other paints. The way it is made makes it wear longer and look better. That's the chief reason why we sell and recommend it.

Game Warden Cooke is enforcing the game and fish laws without fear or favor. Last week he made a run into eastern Marshall county and at Thief Lake caught one Fred Johnson in the act of fishing with nets. He paid fine and costs.—Roseau Region.

The way to get a good, fast walking team is to not over-load and not trot them. Two 1,200 pound horses, on a 14 or 16 inch plow are over-loaded. They are loaded too heavily to walk three miles an hour. Three horses on the same plow will make work lighter and reduce the cost of plowing.

Soil that produced a crop of scabby potatoes should be used for some other crop for several years because the scab spores live over in the soil and will attack subsequent potato crops for five or six years after ward. For potatoes select, if possible, a northern slope, since the crop will suffer less on such slope during hot, dry weather.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Armed with bench warrants issued by the supreme court of the District of Columbia special agents of the department of justice simultaneously raided brokers' offices in New York, Philadelphia, Jersey City, Baltimore, Cincinnati and St. Louis. This, the United States government's first attack upon stock gambling, has been thoroughly prepared with great secrecy. Its scope practically covers the United States from the Missouri river to the Atlantic. The three concerns involved maintain more than 250 branch offices located from New England to Oklahoma.

The government has brought suit at Cheyenne, Wyo., to recover several hundred acres of coal and ore lands in the Elk mountain district, Carbon county, Wyo. The lands are alleged to have been fraudulently entered upon by the Northwestern Land and Iron company and the Denver, Laramie and Northwestern Railroad company. Officers of the defendant companies are said to have valued the coal and iron lands at $5,000,000.

A bomb explosion in the basement of a New York tenement shook the structure to the foundations, shattered every pane of glass in the building and caused such a panic throughout the block that it was necessary to call out the police reserves. The Black Hand is blamed for the outrage.

After murdering his friend, Benjamin Wahl, with whom he made his home, Wolfgang Kress is believed to have burned the Porter camp near Phillips, Wis., and then committed suicide. The charred remains of the men were found in the ruins.

Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance company, a witness at the legislative investigation in New York state, swore that in 1906 William H. Buckley, the Albany legislative agent, offered to sell him six votes at $500 each.

Experts have finished the examination of the Stark county, N. D., alleged warrant forgeries and find the amount alleged forged by former Auditor J. S. White, while in office from the spring of 1903 to last fall, to be $40,000.

Fifteen former Pittsburg selectmen were named in the grand jury's latest report as having received bribes of from $250 to $500. The indictments make a total of ninety-one in three reports by the grand jury within two weeks.

Peter Cordone, a Sicilian, was murdered in the St. Louis headquarters of the Mafia for informing on the Black Hand operations of some of its members.

THE DEATH RECORD.

David Josiah Brewer, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, is dead at Washington as the result of a stroke of paralysis. Justice Brewer was seventy-three years old. The end came altogether unexpectedly. Although he had not been feeling well for the past few days the aged jurist was about and apparently in the best of health and spirits.

President Taft sent to the convention of Republican editors at Springfield, O., a telegram in which he expressed the hope that the editorial association would stand by the Republican congress and the administration in its attitude toward the tariff and other legislation.

The city council of Chicago has decided, at least for the present, that it would be inexpedient to attempt to regulate the length of women's hatpins by law.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

J. C. Mabray and thirteen of his associates, on trial in the United States district court at Council Bluffs, Ia., charged with illegal use of the mails in connection with an extensive swindle, were found guilty by the jury, the fifteenth defendant securing a disagreement. With the conviction of these defendants the government believes it has broken up the most monumental swindling combination which has ever operated. Statistics have been gathered which show the receipts of the combination since its organization about ten years ago to have exceeded $5,000,000.

The police of Houston, Tex., have been called upon to endeavor to solve one of the most puzzling murders in the history of that city, following the discovery of five dead bodies piled in a heap in the home of Gus Schultze.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Ellen M. Steele died at Duluth at the age of eighty-four. She was a well known woman of that city, the mother of the late S. H. Moer of New York, a former district judge of Duluth and prominent as a free silver advocate in 1896.

J. W. Jaggar, who had lived in the state for more than forty years, died suddenly at his home in St. Paul from heart failure. He was sixty-nine years of age.

William J. Lux, one of the early pioneers of Minnesota, is dead at St. Paul, aged eighty years.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Minneapolis and St. Paul capitalists have put through a deal involving $7,000,000, by which they are to come into possession of 800,000 acres of land in Oregon. The land is that of the Willamette Valley and Cascade Mountain Railroad company and is now owned by the French banking house, Lazard Freres. It comprises 150,000 acres of timber land, estimated to contain 5,000,000,000 feet of lumber, the remainder being agricultural land.

Retail lumbermen of Minneapolis have organized and incorporated the Building Material exchange and all firms in the retail lumber business have joined the association. A secretary will be chosen to maintain a central office where lists of the different lumber products in the market and other data may be found.

Cordenia A. Severance of St. Paul, associate counsel in the government's case against the Standard Oil company and the Harriman merger cases, has been appointed a member of the delegation to represent the United States at the eighth international railway conference to be held at Berne, Switzerland, next July.

A plank pledging the Republican party to a reapportionment of the legislative districts of the state will be asked of the next state convention by the delegates from Northern Minnesota. The delegates from about thirty counties of that part of the state are united to demand this one thing, it is understood.

The first number of the Minnesota Farmers' Library, a monthly paper devoted to the extension of agriculture in Minnesota and published by the University of Minnesota department of agriculture, appeared last week. The paper is free and is sent to the home of any farmer who wants it.

The saloon keepers of Perham, in the eastern part of Otter Tail county, have voluntarily applied the "lid." At a recent meeting they decided that they were entitled to a little rest as well as other people and that they would hereafter close their places of business at 11 p. m. and on Sundays.

Lake Como, at Hokah, for years regarded as one of the most beautiful summer resorts in Southern Minnesota, will not be rebuilt. A flood two years ago carried out the dam which formed the lake.

Hutchinson's Co-Operative Creamery association has been awarded the contract to furnish 54,000 pounds of butter for the United States government, to be used in the navy.

The police have almost completed their first census of Minneapolis dogdom. From the records so far produced it is estimated that there are about 7,000 dogs in the city.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

John Bayavitch, a Montenegrin laborer, aged twenty-three years, employed on the new steel bridge which the Interstate Transfer company, a steel corporation subsidiary, is building across the St. Louis river near New Duluth, was blown off the structure and drowned before his companions could rescue him.

Seventy-nine cases and seventeen kegs of beer seized in a blind pig at Pelican Rapids were condemned by the district court at Fergus Falls and emptied into the street in front of the county jail in the latter city. The empty bottles were then sold at auction.

A miner named James Calzzo of Eveleth slipped at the Adams mine and was fatally injured in an unusual manner. He was working in a raise when a body of ore fell, struck his pick when poised and drove the point through his abdomen.

All records for the number of fires in St. Paul in any one month were broken during March, when, according to Chief Strapp's figures, 151 blazes were extinguished. In April, 1908, there were 150 fires.

Two masked bandits held up a Groveland car at the end of the line at St. Paul, took $26 in cash and a pay check for $15 from Conductor R. O. German, leisurely left the car and disappeared.

John Nelson of Minneapolis, seventy-five years old, committed suicide by hanging. He had been despondent for several days.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

While participating in a debate before the Swedish Literary society at Willmar Hon. A. F. Nordin, after outlining his argument, sat down and suddenly pitched forward, striking his head against the sharp corner of a desk. When picked up it was found that life was extinct. Mr. Nordin was born in Sweden about sixty-five years ago, coming to America in 1854. He had lived in Willmar for more than thirty-five years, being prominent in the life of the community and well known in state politics, being assistant secretary of state at one time.

As the result of being overcome by gas more than a year and a half ago Mrs. Henry L. Moss, eighty-nine years old, one of the foremost pioneers of St. Paul and a resident of that city for more than forty years, is dead.

Michael Mealey, aged seventy-six, founder of the Mealey dry goods store at St. Paul, is dead.

NEW RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR

M. Naryschkin to Represent Czar's Government at Stockholm—Ibsen Museum to Be Created at Grimstad, Norway—Johanne Schorring, One of Denmark's Most Prominent Woman Writers, Is Dead, Aged Seventy-four.

SWEDEN.

The Russian ambassador in Stuttgart, M. Naryschkin, married to a stepdaughter of former Premier Witte, has been designated as Russia's new ambassador to Sweden. Originally it was the intention to appoint the minister to Morocco M. Botkin. This gentleman is, however, married to an American, and owing to the fact that it was desirable in Swedish court circles that the wife of the Russian ambassador should be a Russian M. Botkin was not given the position.

Dr. Sven Hedin, in his "Transhimalaya," speaks with high respect of the German Moravian missionaries in those regions as men of uncommonly great knowledge and most admirable devotion to their work. Professor Meinhof of Hamburg, an authority in Oriental languages, has warm words of praise for their achievements in language studies, which made it possible for German and British scholars to discover a new—but very old—Indo-Germanic language in Central Asia.

An exchange says that the prison managers of Sweden have figured it out that prohibition of the liquor traffic would reduce the expenses of the prisons of the country by more than $300,000 a year. But they are afraid that if the liquor traffic would be prohibited the people would get into the habit of using other stimulants, a contention which would probably hold true if placed to a test.

A Russian newspaper states that Count Leo Tolstoi has been invited to attend the international peace congress, which will meet in Stockholm next August. Tolstoi has declared that if his health will possibly allow it he will be certain to accept the invitation. The distinguished author has long cherished a desire to visit Sweden, where he has hundreds of friends and admirers.

Owing to the increasing tourist traffic the railway department has made arrangements to run three express tourist trains a week from Stockholm to the extreme north during the warm season. These trains will undoubtedly be much patronized during the coming season and tourists and globe trotters generally will be pleased to learn of the new schedule.

Professor Svante Arrhenius' lecture on "Mars" at the Academy of Sciences was listened to with undivided attention by a large and learned audience. The lecturer dwelt in length on the canals of the planet and showed by means of illustrations why he considered it possible that the planet is inhabited.

September 29 of this year Sweden will commemorate the 350th anniversary of Gustaf Wasa's death. The royal house of Sweden will celebrate its centennial and Feb. 28 two centuries elapsed since the bloody battle took place with the Danes at Helsingborg.

King Gustaf arrived at Karlsruhe March 16. At the station to meet him and his party were the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Baden, Dowager Duchess Louise, Prince Hohenlohe-Langenburg, the Prussian ambassador, and a number of other high dignitaries.

The great cross of the Order of Dannebrog has been awarded Governor Gustaf Tornerhjelm. Mr. Tornerhjelm has been in official life for a great many years and is a much respected citizen.

The Arnberg agricultural prize has been awarded Dr. N. Wohlin, who is a teacher of agriculture at the Stockholm high school.

NORWAY.

It is proposed to create an Ibsen museum at Grimstad, Norway, which will probably become the Mecca of Ibsen's as Stratford-on-Avon attracts admirers of Shakespeare. This little town is chosen because it was there that Ibsen first began his literary activity—he lived there from 1844 to 1850—and his first play, "Catalina," was written there. Among Ibsen's various works in prose are several little references to the little town. He seems to dwell with peculiar fondness on his Grimstad memories and, according to what his friends say, often in later years, when he had come to fame and honor he longed for the little town on the fiord. The old building in which Ibsen worked several years is still standing and a comparatively small sum is needed to restore it exactly as it was at the time and to keep it as a monument to the great man. Mr. Karl O. Knutson, who lives at Grimstad, has been chosen treasurer of the committee.

Christiania newspaper reports state that there will be a serious attempt made to change the name of Christiania to Oslo in 1914. While it may be true that there are many enthusiasts who are in favor of this change in name it is equally true that there are more who are opposed to it and that for business reasons, if from no other cause. Changing the name of a city as old as Christiania and known for centuries under that name would not be an easy proposition. It seems that King Christian IV. of Denmark and Norway named it after himself in 1624, at which time the base of the town was somewhat shifted, as it was rebuilt after a big fire. Most Norwegians will agree that it will not be an easy matter to change the name of their capital and metropolis at this stage of the game.

Every movement of Colonel Roosevelt is being watched by all classes in Norway with the keenest interest and his coming to the capital city is awaited with feverish enthusiasm. The Norwegian people are perhaps the most democratic in the world and it is therefore little wonder that they are so exceedingly interested in seeing and hearing America's greatest living statesman.

There has been an increase in the price on shoes in all the cities and villages of the country and the other day the shoe dealers in Christiania raised the price on shoes 10 per cent. Hides and leather are high and the retailers claimed that they were in a position where they could not make the two ends meet unless they raised the price.

Theodore Klaveness' book entitled "The Norwegian America," which has been selling at 5 crowns, can now be secured for only 2 crowns. The book has not been popular on the American side of the Atlantic and has aroused a great deal of criticism in the Norwegian-American press.

Emperor William enjoyed a three days' cruise along the Norwegian coast with a party of eighty scientists and financiers last month. The emperor is expected to make his annual summer visit to Norway this coming season.

Nicolay Halvorsen, one of the star performers at the National theater in Christiania, celebrated his fiftieth anniversary March 10.

DENMARK.

Johanne Schorring, one of Denmark's most prominent woman writers, died a few days ago, aged seventy-four years. She was a minister's daughter from Vest Jylland and was married to Justice Schorring, whom she survived. Her literary career dates back to 1874, when she published her first book entitled "Stories and Sketches." Then followed in rapid succession a number of stories and romances, which gained for her a splendid income and thousands of admirers. Among her novels that attracted most attention were "The Daughter of the Sea," "Rich Days," "From Spring to Autumn," "Esther's Home" and a number of other charming novels which have been read far and wide, both in Denmark and Norway.

A telegram from Copenhagen states that Prince Erick, a son of Prince Waldemar, is going to receive a practical agricultural training, in other words, learn to be a practical farmer. Another son of Prince Waldemar is to accept a position with the East Asiatic company and learn to become a practical business man. It is stated that prior to her death their mother, the Princess Marie, expressed it as her earnest wish that her sons be given a practical training and the father has already arranged to carry out her wishes. These young men of royal blood will fall heir to a considerable fortune, but they are also going to learn how to carve their own way through life.

Commodore Hovgaard, a member of the Nordenskiold Vega expedition and an explorer with a notable record, died not long ago in Copenhagen. It will be remembered that Commodore Hovgaard figured very prominently in the recent reception to Dr. Cook in Copenhagen and he was one of the first to express his willingness to credit the claims of the bogus explorer. He afterwards declared Cook to be an imposter and there was no limit to his disappointment. His funeral was held March 20.

O. Th. Petersen, a jeweler, who suddenly disappeared from Copenhagen, taking diamonds with him valued at 3,500 crowns, is believed to have gone to America, where an effort will be made to find him. He leaves a wife and several children and had, besides stealing the diamonds, appropriated a lot of other valuable jewelry.

Dr. Birck, who represents the Fourth district in Copenhagen in the folketing, has been appointed professor of national economy at the University of Copenhagen. Mr. Birck has for a number of years been an instructor in the same subject at the university. He will, however, complete his term in the legislative assembly.

An attempt will be made to secure Colonel Roosevelt for a lecture in the Danish capital. They are practically assured of a brief visit from the distinguished American, but Copenhagen people want to hear him speak also.

Gifford Pinchot arrived in Copenhagen the other day and quietly registered at one of the fashionable hotels of the city. Outside of the American minister there were very few people who knew who he was.

MARION S. NORELIUS.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

A true bill charging Max G. Leslie, collector of delinquent taxes in Allegheny county, Pa., with bribery was returned by the grand jury at Pittsburg and at the same time a sweeping presentment was handed down with general charges that many of the 125 witnesses which the grand jury has had before it during the graft investigation thus far have willfully withheld knowledge of graft secrets and that a certain few have practically been guilty of perjury.

A sermon on martyrdom, in which Frank Skala, a Pittsburg editor and prominent mission worker, had declared himself willing to lay down his life for the Christian cause, was followed by his assassination in a highly sensational manner and the shooting down also of a fellow church leader, John Gay. The slayer was Jan Radowitch, a character known for his shiftless habits, slovenliness and radical opinion. Gay's wounds are not serious.

The climax in the Pittsburg graft exposures came with the presentment by the grand jury of a long report in which is recommended the indictment of Frank N. Hoffstot, president of the Pressed Steel Car company and one of the most prominent business men in the country. Hoffstot, who is prominently connected with several Pittsburg banks, is accused of bribery in connection with the selection of city depositories.

Four desperadoes armed with rifles held off a crowd of thirty aroused guests of a neighboring hotel in Lane, S. D., while they applied the match to the fuse of two more powerful blasts against the obstinate vault door of the Citizens' State bank. The robbers completely demolished the front of the bank building, but failed to open the vault.

The First National bank at Randolph, Neb., was dynamited and robbed of $10,000 in gold and currency by three masked men. Town Marshal Carroll was held up on the street and bound and gagged and thrown in a back room. Seven explosions, requiring forty-five minutes, wrecked the vault.

The graft indictments at Pittsburg may be quashed as the result of allegations made by attorneys for the defense that Foreman Harrison Nesbit of the grand jury, formerly a national bank examiner, is not a qualified elector and not qualified to sit on a jury in Pennsylvania.

Three bandits who robbed the Bank of Coal City, Ill., of $6,000 were pursued by a posse and shot. Five men were concerned in the robbery, the two who escaped carrying away the plunder.

Burglars robbed the Security State bank at Seaforth, Minn., nearly demolishing the building with nitroglycerin and escaping with $2,600.

Three masked men held up a Seattle street car, robbed twenty of the fifty passengers on board and escaped.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The Indiana Republican state convention adopted a platform that ignores the Payne-Aldrich tariff law and declares for only a protective tariff "that covers the difference of cost of production here and abroad." When Senator Beveridge, in his speech as temporary chairman, declared his antagonism to the tariff law passed at the preceding session of congress his periods were marked by storms of applause from the delegates and the crowded galleries.

FOUL PLAY IS SUSPECTED

Police Believe Minneapolis Man Was Murdered.

Was Gustave Pfeifer, a wealthy Minneapolis bachelor, hurled to his death in the Mississippi river on March 17 by a robber who lured him from his home on pretense of a business engagement?

Since the finding of Pfeifer's body near the St. Paul Boom company's rafts the above question has been given the Mill City police to answer, and detectives are working on the case.

Pfeifer was a brother to Mrs. Gustave Stein of St. Paul, who believes that he met with foul play. Her suspicions and those of the police are strengthened by the fact that Pfeifer's pockets were inside out when his body was taken from the river.

A post mortem examination by Coroner D. C. Jones failed to reveal any marks of violence on the body and he reported that Pfeifer's death was caused by drowning. But, in the event that he was overpowered, robbed and thrown from a bridge, it is likely that slight wounds would be invisible, according to Coroner Jones.

EARLY SPRING THE CAUSE

Many Minnesota Logging Contractors Face Bankruptcy.

Thousands of dollars' worth of timber lies rotting in the woods along the north shore of Lake Superior and dozens of small logging contractors are facing bankruptcy as a result of the sudden breaking up of winter.

The first Booth line boat to reach Duluth from north shore points brought back scores of woodsmen and half a dozen logging outfits, in charge of some very blue logging contractors.

At the end of February the loggers were just completing their cut, and were planning to get the ties, posts and logs down to the shore of the lake for shipment to Duluth. Then came the thaw and the result was that almost their entire winter's work went for naught. The logs are left high and dry in the woods.

MAY AFFECT DEMURRAGE LAW

Supreme Court Decision Likely to Invalidate Minnesota Statute.

What little there was left of the Minnesota reciprocal demurrage law after the recent decisions of the state supreme court is apparently taken away by the decision of the United States supreme court declaring the Arkansas reciprocal demurrage law unconstitutional. Members of the state railroad commission discussed the matter and they were of the opinion that if the Arkansas law was unconstitutional the Minnesota law would have little chance in the federal courts, because the Arkansas law was much the more lenient of the two. In Arkansas five days were allowed in which the company must furnish a car when asked for it, while in Minnesota only two days were allowed at terminals and three days at way stations.

REPUBLICANS OF MINNESOTA

May Send Delegation to Greet Roosevelt on His Return.

Republicans all over the state have become much interested in the published statement that Theodore Roosevelt desires that the reception to be tendered him on his arrival in this country be made a national and not a local affair.

It is considered probable that if further advices as to the wishes of Mr. Roosevelt warrant it the governor may designate a Minnesota delegation to be in New York on the date the former president is expected to arrive.

This proposition is still in the tentative stage, but whether it is carried out or not it is certain that St. Paul will be well represented on that occasion.

KELLOGG OUT OF CONTEST

Expected to Abandon Candidacy for Minnesota Senatorship.

While Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul has made no formal announcement in this connection his friends in the congressional delegation at Washington say that he has finally decided not to become a candidate for the United States senate.

In conversation with friends there Mr. Kellogg expressed the opinion that the political situation in the state is so involved that he does not care to be responsible for further trouble by precipitating a contest for the senate.

Protest Against Lee Statue.

Resolutions protesting against the placing of a statue of General Robert E. Lee in the statuary hall at the national capital by congress were adopted by the German American Veteran association of St. Paul, which met in the old capitol. The resolutions were passed unanimously and vigorously condemn the Southern leader. They will be forwarded immediately to Senators Nelson and Clapp and Representative Stevens.

Found Dead Underneath Buggy.

Andrew Carlstrom, a farmer fifty years of age, residing not far from Moorhead, was found dead with his buggy turned upside down on his prostrate form. Near the body were the man's two horses lying in a ditch on their backs, unable to get out. The neck of the victim was broken, evidently caused by his being thrown out of the buggy.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

WRECK THE BANK BUILDING

Robbers Secure $2,600 in Cash at Seaforth.

Burglars robbed the Security State bank at Seaforth, nearly demolishing the building with nitroglycerin and escaping with $2,600.

The first intimation of the burglars' presence was when a heavy explosion occurred. Portions of the front part of the bank building fell outward and the side wall, separating the bank from an adjoining store, was caved in.

Emil Stanek and Will Stanek, brothers, sleeping in a hardware store across the street from the bank, aroused by the explosion, arose and lighted a lantern, preparatory to an investigation.

The instant the light showed in the store a fusillade of shots crashed through the store window. They extinguished the light and waited until the robbers had gone, being unable in the darkness to locate weapons with which to return the robbers' fire.

BAD FIRE IN PRISON CITY

Property Valued at Sixty Thousand Dollars Destroyed.

For several hours the city of Stillwater seemed due to destruction by fire which started, it is supposed, from a locomotive spark dropping on the roof of a large warehouse, the property of the Northwest Thresher company. The total loss will amount to $60,000.

The high wind fanned the increasing flames and carried embers and blazing fagots close to the state prison, destroying three dwellings.

Company K of the Minnesota national guard, located at Stillwater, was called out lest the prison become ignited and the prisoners liberated.

Lifting the flaming debris over the bluff which overlooks the prison the high wind carried firebrands into the residence district, where they set fire to three houses and a barn. The buildings were entirely destroyed. Five other buildings were damaged, but hundreds were saved by the presence of mind of women and children, who soaked carpets and bed clothing in water and spread them on the porches and roofs to quench incipient blazes.

Finding its department unable to cope with the fire assistance was asked of St. Paul and apparatus from that city was rushed to the aid of Stillwater on a special train via the Omaha road.

ROBERTS COMPANY BANKRUPT

Federal Jury Passes on Status of Minneapolis Concern.

In the opinion of a federal petit jury at Minneapolis the T. M. Roberts Co-Operative Supply company of that city is bankrupt.

After a trial lasting four days the jury returned a verdict to that effect and Judge Willard issued the order adjudging the concern bankrupt.

On application of about 125 creditors, with claims of $40,000, O. C. Merriman, Jr., referee in bankruptcy, appointed D. C. Warden the receiver, with a bond of $100,000.

Under the order of the court the receiver is authorized to continue the business until the appointment of a trustee, or further order of the court. The business of the company will be operated as usual, except possibly to give time to take an inventory.

KILLED BY BLOW ON THE JAW

Duluth Man Meets Death in a Fist Fight.

Matt Krznaizs, a Duluth saloon keeper, was killed in the Oregon restaurant in that city and three men are under arrest suspected of the killing.

Krznaizs went into the restaurant, which is run by Chinamen, and ordered a meal, and after eating it he had some words with the girl cashier over the price. It is said that he became angry and tried to strike the girl with a ketchup bottle. A number of men in the restaurant, patrons of the place, interfered, and one of them struck Krznaizs a blow on the jaw that crumpled him up and he died from the effects of it.

Wamin Anich and John Anich and Joe Sameris are under arrest.

Boom McEwen for Governor.

A banquet was given at the Lenox hotel at Duluth at which W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner, was the guest of honor of Duluth friends. Some of the speakers mentioned him for governor and these allusions were warmly applauded. There were 125 present.

University Regent Named.

Charles L. Sommers of St. Paul has been placed on the university board of regents by Governor Eberhart to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Thomas Wilson. Judge Wilson was appointed in 1906, so that Mr. Sommers has two more years to serve of the present term.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The Rochester asylum for the insane was given a character of strict respectability by the state board of control in a report made to Governor Eberhart. The charges made by the state board of visitors, headed by J. T. Schain, on Jan. 22, are not substantiated. It was found that isolated cases of abuse have occurred, but the board decided that in every such case the guilty nurse was discharged.

Joseph U. Barnes, charged with grand larceny in the second degree, was acquitted by a jury in district court at Minneapolis. Mr. Barnes was charged with borrowing money from the company of which he was president, contrary to state law. At a previous trial he was convicted, but the supreme court granted him a new trial.

Employers in the Twin Cities and elsewhere in the state will soon be asked to pay their employes in cash instead of by checks, where this is not already done. The state labor commissioner has been making an investigation of the two systems and believes that the cash payment system is much better for the men.

As the result of fraud discovered in the Zion and Hertzel councils of the Knights and Ladies of Security in Minneapolis these councils are to be suspended. Bona fide members of both will either be taken into Disraeli and Minnesota councils, both of which are in good standing, or will be organized into a new council.

The Great Northern railroad has paid the disputed tax on its 1906 gross earnings, being the difference between 3 and 4 per cent on the earnings of its main line. The tax on the 1905 balance was paid a few days ago and the disputed portion of the 1907 and 1908 taxes is expected by State Auditor Iverson in a few days.

Nearly forty men and women who represent themselves as sculptors and who live in places far removed, in the United States and in Europe, have applied for the work of executing the statue of the late Governor John A. Johnson that is to stand in the state capitol grounds.

With potatoes selling from 15 to 25 cents a bushel, and the demand light at that, farmers of Minnesota have probably lost thousands of dollars this year. Many withheld their product from the market last fall and now find the spring market glutted.

There is rejoicing among laboring men employed by the big clay working industries of Red Wing because the pay of common labor has been increased to $2 a day. The increase, which amounts to 25 cents a day, came voluntarily.

Mrs. Jules Durage of Duluth is one of the four heirs surviving Ezra Richards, an aged recluse, who died recently in Binghampton, N. Y., leaving a fortune thought to be $100,000 or more.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

His foot caught in a "frog" in the Minnesota Transfer yards near St. Paul J. F. Stuard, a switchman, saw death approach when an engine, running at a good speed, bore down upon him. Powerless to do anything he was struck before the engineer could set the brakes. Stuard, his body mangled, but still conscious, was rushed to Cobb hospital, where he died on the operating table an hour later.

Fred O. Sibley, a merchant of Island Lake and prominent in Beltrami county, was killed at the Whitefish spur in a wreck on the Wilton and Northern railroad, in which the engine was demolished. No one else was injured, the engineer and fireman saving themselves by jumping.

Barbe Bergeren, the five-year-old daughter of Matt Bergeren of the Elba mine location, is dead as the result of burns. She was playing near a bonfire and a strong wind was blowing. The wind caused her to fall into the fire and she was fatally burned before help arrived.

Miss Lampa Kumala of Aurora, this state, died in a Duluth hospital as a result of blood poisoning, which resulted from a seemingly insignificant wound on the wrist. The injury was merely a scratch which the woman received while washing dishes.

The postoffice at Clara City was entered by robbers, who took the safe, which was a small one, in a wheelbarrow to the outskirts of the town and blew it open. They secured $35 in cash.

William Allen, aged twenty-six, was instantly killed by a charge from a shotgun in the hands of his brother David, aged twenty, at their home in Minneapolis. The shooting was accidental.

While working for John Colbrath in a camp near Brookston, St. Louis county, Alex Anderson was killed by a falling tree, which crushed his life out instantly.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Patrick F. Devitt, who, with D. C. Shepard, laid the first railroad tracks west of St. Paul, is dead in that city at the age of eighty-four. Death was due to old age.

Charles L. Pfeffer, an old resident of Dassel and a prominent Mason, dropped dead of heart failure while on his way to work. He was about sixty years old.

A SMALL GAME.

A word of caution may be of help to some who contemplate shipping household goods to western states, particularly those bordering on the Pacific. This has reference to including in shipment of "household goods" only those things which are classed as such in the freight schedules, and what these are may be ascertained from the agent at the point of shipment. To illustrate: Not long since a gentleman who had engaged a through car to the coast after loading his goods thought he would put in two or three tons of baled hay. At the last division point before the car arrived at its destination the car was inspected and additional charges exacted which increased the freight bill more than $100. Thus instead of being a source of profit the small amount of hay shipped cost close to $40 a ton to transport. The lesson was a costly one, but it was well learned. To the average patron of transportation companies this looks like straining at a gnat and taking advantage of trusting and unsuspecting immigrants for the poorly concealed purpose of picking their pockets. It's a holdup game that does credit to no railroad management, and it goes without saying that it would not be practiced at all in sections where there was even a semblance of competition. It is tricks and skulduddery of this type practiced by some transportation companies that tend to put the whole class in disrepute and seem, in fact, to justify the feeling on the part of the payee that transportation companies are holdup institutions and enemies of the public which place full faith in the "public be damned" policy. In several other instances related the same trick was tried, in one case upon a widow and her daughter, who were easy victims, while in one or two other instances a loud "holler" was put up, and the railway officials modified their tactics.

THE FARM CENSUS.

Beginning April 15 Uncle Sam's census enumerators will not only count the noses of 90,000,000 or more people of the country, but they will want an inventory of the stuff on every farm of the country. Among other things the enumerators will want to find out will be: (1) Total value of farm, with all buildings and improvements; (2) value of all buildings; (3) value of all implements and machinery, including tools, wagons, carriages, harnesses, etc., and all appliance and apparatus used in farming operations; (4) number and value of domestic animals, including cattle, horses, mules, swine and sheep, classified by sex and the year in which they were born; (5) number and value of the several varieties of poultry over three months old; (6) number and value of swarms of bees. In estimating the value of the several items listed the farmer should be guided by the prices which would prevail were the stuff offered for sale. If an inventory of the above character is made out by every landowner in advance it would not only save the enumerator and himself time at the busiest season of the year, but such a record would prove very valuable for reference on later occasions. Instructions which have been prepared for the enumerators state that each operator must confine his report of acreage and yield of crops to land which he is working at the time of the enumerator's visit. Should he be on a farm which he did not work the previous year he should secure a record of the place from the man who did handle it.

THE HOME WATER SUPPLY.

[illegible] ness prevailing in any [illegible] in part upon the whole[illegible] food consumed, but in [illegible] measure upon the water supply, the purity of which is largely affected by the proximity of contaminating causes, such as the seepage from the barnyards and cesspools. Where it is not feasible to install a toilet system with water tight drainage to a cesspool located at a safe distance from the water supply the most rational equipment for the outhouse is a substantial drawer made of two inch stuff, the contents of which can be killed by the addition of slaked lime from time to time and which can be hauled afield and dumped as often as may be necessary. By such disposal of night soil the danger of a contamination of the water supply is reduced to a minimum. We realize that this is not a pleasant subject to discuss, but it is practical and vital and concerns chiefly those who are least able to foot heavy doctor's bills. Where a cesspool is already in bad shape conditions may be improved by dumping in half a barrel or so of quicklime which will put a quietus on any disease germs which may be lurking there. It should then be cleaned out and filled up and a better system installed.

A well known eastern seedsman advertises an "improved wonderberry." It is surely to be hoped that he can fulfill his promise.

Apples, prunes and figs are recognized by most all dietaspecialists as mild yet excellent laxatives, and the health of many would be improved were tons and tons more of these fruits consumed.

Those who have looked somewhat into the matter have concluded that the prairie dog does not dig his burrow deep enough to reach a water supply, but gets along on that which he secures from the leaves and roots of the herbage on which he feeds.

A poor draft in the stove, making watery eyes and smoky wall paper, may be due to the stove being clogged up with ashes or to defects or breaks in the chimney above the point where the pipe enters. Wherever located, the cause ought to be sought out and removed.

The wise grower of small grain will exercise proportionately just as much care in the selection of his seed grain as in choosing the sires and dams for his breeding animals. While not so perceptible, the law of heredity—that like produces like—operates in the same general way in the cereal as in the animal world.

The average boy is not half so much in need of being shielded from temptation as he is of assistance in the development of a becoming self respect and backbone that will enable him to behave like a man in the presence of temptation. Being tied to mother's apron strings never gave a boy character and stamina and never will.

In sections where the inroads of the woolly aphis are likely to be serious the young fruit tree may be protected by removing the soil for a distance of two or three feet around the tree to the depth of a couple of inches and placing a layer of tobacco stems and leaves or dust. These should be soaked thoroughly and the earth replaced. While the same means may be used to protect the root systems of older trees, the labor involved is greatly increased.

For the proper protection of the hives of bees it is well to put them where they will be protected from extremes of cold in winter, but we have in mind one swarm of bees that made headquarters in an old hollow bur oak tree for four consecutive seasons and that during their period of hibernation must have been subjected to temperatures of 20 to 28 degrees below zero. Whether they finally died of old age, froze to death or sought warmer quarters we never knew.

In many sections in the north central states, where much wheat used to be grown a score of years ago, but where in recent years it has been almost entirely given up, there will be a good deal sown the present spring. In many of these localities oats are not doing as well as in the past, and wheat is proving an acceptable substitute. Where it has been tried the yield has been from eighteen to thirty-five bushels per acre, and the market price a dollar or better. In securing the seed wheat it is a good idea to buy that which is plump and is grown near home.

While suicide requires a certain degree of physical courage, analyzed a bit it must be conceded as the abject and cowardly solution of the problem with which one may be confronted, for it involves an utter renouncing of all claims and obligations resting upon one as a result of the place he fills in life. The only honorable and heart satisfying way out of a condition that seems unbearable is a continuance in the treadmill, if such it be, consolation coming from the thought that a fellow is doing the best he can. There never was a situation in life so bad but suicide made it several stages worse.

One of the interesting geological formations of Wyoming is the extensive areas of decomposed red granite noticeable between Cheyenne and Buford, on the line of the Union Pacific. Having to excavate large quantities of this disintegrated rock in the lowering of the right of way, those in charge of the work hit upon the idea of using it as ballast for the road long distances in either direction. The rock was handled with slight expense by means of steam shovels from bank to car, and so excellent ballast did it prove that it has been used as a surface material for the road and depot grounds from Omaha westward. It is firm, holds its place and gathers little moisture, thus reducing tie rot to a minimum.

A fruit ranch that we saw near Mountain Home, Ida., the other day from the car window consisted of scrubby fruit trees set four or five years ago in the midst of the sagebrush in the arid Snake river bottom. The fellow who set them out had grubbed out no sagebrush except where the trees were to stand and given the tract no cultivation whatever. This is a sample of some of the "orchard investment" propositions that the gullible easterner is expected to take over at the end of five years for from $[illegible] to $[illegible] per acre and from which he is assured he will get rich without work in a very few years. Other orchards in the same valley, watered and well tended, are all that a prospective owner could desire. In buying western fruit land it is well to investigate the soil and the water right guarantees, but even more the moral status and business pedigree of the man or corporation promoting the same.

Nuts are very rich in protein and oil and when eaten fresh are not only appetizing, but form an excellent substitute for meat. The nut eating habit, along with the apple habit, is one that ought to grow.

Many bog or muck soils contain fertilizing elements in as large per cent as average manure, but they usually need tillage and sweetening with an application of lime to render these elements available for plant life.

While the warmer climate of the west and southwest is favorable for the winter production of eggs, this advantage is quite offset by the fact that the warmer weather tends to greatly multiply lice mite pests, which constitute as serious a drawback as cold weather.

In making choice of land in a new section it is well not only to keep in mind the fertility of the soil and its ability to produce bumper crops, but the distance of the land from market. There have been cases where such handicap has well nigh offset the two advantages named.

In sections where the time of setting out the young orchard is likely to be followed by a protracted dry spell it is well to give the trees a mulch of some kind which will prevent a drying out of the soil about the roots. This, coupled with thorough cultivation of the tree row, should give the trees the moisture required for their proper development.

The important fact for the prospective buyer of a cream separator to keep in mind is not the initial price of the machine, but ability to extract butter fat from new milk. If it fails to do this, and any considerable amount of butter fat goes through and is fed to pigs in the swill, it will be a costly proposition if it were a donation to the fellow who is to operate it.

Many of the trees in the older orchards in the Hood river valley were set too near together, from fifteen to twenty feet, and the visitor in the valley last fall saw these same trees in yellow leaf, bearing undersized fruit and in general appearance suffering from both lack of fertility and moisture at the end of an unusually dry season. Most later plantings correct this fault.

A quite striking illustration of the limited amount of nourishment required to sustain plant and tree life is found in a pine tree which grows from a crevice, largely of its own making, at the summit of the majestic, weather beaten gray granite sentinel dome in Yosemite valley. It has a diameter of fifteen inches, is twenty to twenty-five feet high, with a spreading top, and seems to have thrived on its scant fare. The United States survey mark within a couple of feet of its trunk gives its elevation above sea level at about 8,000 feet.

The decidedly unfavorable season which has prevailed in the corn belt during the past six months, in which it has been Hobson's choice whether the corn spoiled faster in field or crib, will call attention with new emphasis to the value of the silo as a very effective method of preserving the corn crop. Put here before the killing frosts of October came, it would have come to no harm, while the farm owner and help would not have had to wallow around in the spring mud to get the last of it from the field. Owing to the fact that many fields were not husked before the deep snows came, the stock was not turned into the stalk fields as usual, and as a result they have had to be stuffed with high priced hay, the fodder in the fields, such as it was, not being utilized at all.

A conservation doctrine that needs a deal more attention given to it this year than was last is that of increasing the usefulness and wholesomeness of the myriad homes of the country—the multiplication of home comforts, the increase of home happiness and contentment, the rearing and training of purer minded and more whole souled boys and girls. Here is a conservation directly affecting our perpetuity as a nation in comparison with which the saving of forests from destruction, the keeping of soils from depletion and the prevention of the looting of our mineral wealth by the greedy sink into paltry insignificance. The fact is there is good ground for believing that if we paid more attention to our homes and boys and girls some of these other ills would right themselves, for there would of necessity be a larger moral element in our national life.

An oat grower with whom the writer was talking the other day had an experience last season in the matter of a preparation of the soil for the seed that will be of practical value to him from this on and ought to be to others who read this item. Last spring when he put in his oats he plowed the larger of the tracts and let the smaller, the soil of which was not quite so rich, go with two diskings, one before and one after the seed was sown. He was warned by some of his neighbors that if he plowed his oat land in the spring he would get no yield at all. He kept their doleful prediction in mind, but at harvest time noted the fact that on the plowed ground his oats yielded at the rate of fifty-five bushels per acre, while on the piece which was disked only they went but about eight or nine bushels. He tumbled to a most important soil and crop fact and henceforth will discard the old way.

A becoming sense of the eternal fitness of things would suggest the propriety of having at least a couple of months elapse between the publication of a card of thanks and action on the part of the heirs at law to take steps to secure what they consider an equitable partition of the estate of the deceased relative.

Hen manure is too concentrated a fertilizer to be put on the land liberally, as is done with other manures. It should be mixed with dust or litter while accumulating, and even then one should spread the stuff sparingly. We have known of mature apple trees being knocked out by too much kindness in the application of this fertilizer.

Treating seed corn with coal tar by stirring a small quantity of it in a peck of seed at a time so that each kernel is smeared with a little of the tar is said to keep the crows and gophers from touching the corn after it is planted. If the kernels are inclined to stick together more corn should be worked in and possibly a little flour, which will tend to keep the kernels apart.

The sooner soil is harrowed after being plowed the more completely will it retain the moisture at and near the surface, for the blanket of fine, mellow earth thus made checks a rapid evaporation of the moisture. Since this is so a delaying of the harrowing will serve to more quickly dry a soil that contains more moisture than is required for the proper germination of the seed which is to be placed therein. In sections of the west where moisture is at a premium strict attention is paid this fact of moisture conservation.

If the truth were known it would probably come to light that the increased cost of living is due to a substantial increase in freight and express rates as well as to a perceptible inflation of the circulating medium and scarcity of some staple food supplies. This advance in transportation rates has been very quietly made, but the increase has been considerable, and the middleman and distributer in order to come out whole has had to add this advance to the prices he had been previously asking for his goods, which were already high.

There is nothing calculated to check milk flow in a dairy cow more effectually than being chased around a yard by a cursing, loud mouthed man or boy and being ever and anon pounded over head or rump with club or milk stool. Not long ago we saw a pretty likely looking heifer put through this kind of mill by a couple of little heathens, whose treatment would be sufficient to cause a cow to give skimmilk, sour milk or no milk at all. It may suffice to say that the father of these boys wasn't in the dairy business for profit or he would have got busy on the boys with a big slat.

Of all shortsighted initial economies there is none worse than the buying of runty and unthrifty fruit trees just because they can be got cheap, and this is true whether one is setting an orchard for himself or expects to turn it over to some customer at bearing age. It is the start a tree gets, as in the case of a calf or a pig, during the first three years that largely determines not only its later beauty, but utility as a horticultural thing, and hence every reasonable precaution should be taken to see that the choice of the young trees as well as the care given should be of the best.

A fellow may not suffer anything more than physical discomfort if he orders his undershirt and prunes from a distant mail order house, but he had better pass the practice up when it comes to grass seed and order from a home man who he can bat with a stuffed club if the seed is not pure and as represented. Not as yet is there in force an adequate federal pure seed law; hence a fellow has no recourse for damages if he orders from a firm outside of his own state and gets worthless or even pernicious grass seed. A number of states have effective pure seed laws, and where seller and buyer reside in such states the latter's rights are amply safeguarded.

While there is a big discrepancy between the prices which it was claimed could be got for ginseng in the craze which swept over the country four or five years ago and those which are quoted today, the returns are nevertheless sufficient to give a good interest return on the money invested, provided one has the patience to bide his time for results. The present prices of ginseng range from $4.50 to $6.75 per pound for the dried roots, the higher prices being received for the wild product, which finds a congenial home in moist, moldy wood lots where the shade is sufficiently dense to keep blue grass from getting a foothold. The roots should not be gathered before they are two years old, while much larger and a better quality of roots are secured if they are allowed to grow a longer period. In the artificial cultivation of ginseng the conditions of moisture and shade referred to as existing in a native wood lot are reproduced as nearly as possible, the beds being shaded by the erection of slat roofs and abundant moisture being supplied if the rainfall should not be sufficient.

THE MICROSCOPE.

It Has Its Prototype In Every Spherical Drop of Water.

Nature offers a free microscope whenever one is wanted. She has been dealing in free optical instruments and optical phenomena ever since the first dewdrop formed or the first raindrop fell earthward. Every dewdrop and raindrop and spherical water drop has all the powers and principles of a microscope. To get one of nature's microscopes in operation take up a drop of water between the two points of two sharpened sticks, say matches, and hold the drop over the minute object to be examined. The result will be that the object will be magnified about three diameters. The supposed invention of the microscope was nothing more than shaping a piece of glass into an imitation of a water drop so as to be easily handled.

Spiders have made suspension bridges for ages. The rough edge of sword grass gave the inventor the idea of the reaper blade for the harvester. The buzzard has been using the aeroplane for flying a good many centuries. By tapping on an end of a long beam the man at the farther end can hear you telegraphing, the sound traveling through the timber. Fishes have been using bladders of wind for balloons, lifting them in water for countless years. Water has been a camera ever since the world had sunshine.

Help yourself to nature's store of all things man needs, but never say anything about the invention. Nature invented; you can only arrange and combine facts.—St. Louis Republic.

EARLY BALLOONING.

Some Odd Ideas That Prevailed In the Eighteenth Century.

As far back as 1844 the American public were led to believe that the Atlantic had been crossed in a balloon. On May 28 in that year the New York Sun published a detailed account of an aerial voyage from Liverpool to Charleston, which purported to have been accomplished by "the steering balloon Victoria in a period of seventy-five hours from land to land." Five columns were devoted to the description of the journey and to a scientific account of the balloon, of which a woodcut was given, and an air of verisimilitude was added by a list of eight passengers, one of the names mentioned being that of Harrison Ainsworth, who was then at the height of his fame.

At the end of the eighteenth century balloons were all the rage. Then, as now, enthusiasts predicted a time near at hand when war would either be an awful matter of the annihilation of armies and forts by bombs from above or would cease altogether through the abolition of frontiers and the fusion of nations. Prophecy went even further.

Canals and roads were to vanish and the space occupied by them to be restored to agriculture. And ships (if any still existed) when caught in a storm would be grappled by the mast from balloons above and safely conveyed into port or even carried over mountain ranges.—Chicago News.

London's Police Press.

An article in the Illustrated English Magazine gives an account of the printing department of Scotland Yard and the astonishing amount of work it turns out. Four times a day a broadside is issued to all the police officers. At 9 in the morning the first is sent out, giving an inventory of all property lost. At noon is issued a list of all persons missing, and this often occupies several pages. At half past 6 the broadside contains both subjects, and also at half past 10. A habitual criminal register is distributed and every few days an account of persons released on tickets of leave. A sheet of missing articles is sent to every pawnbroker, and as many as 4,000 copies of this document are needed. This is only a small part of the work done by the Scotland Yard press.

When You Can't Sleep.

There is an odd theory, which many people believe and which is certainly harmless, that sleeplessness may often be cured in the following odd way: Move your bed out into the room so that no part of bed or covers will touch the wall. Then place under each caster of the bed a piece of rubber or a rubber overshoe or set the caster in a thick glass dish. Then go to bed, making sure the covers do not touch the wall. Thus the bed and yourself will be cut off from all electric contact with floor or wall. Such absence of electric contact, it is claimed, will make you sleep better. It is said to have cured stubborn cases of insomnia.

How to Open a New Book.

The best way to open a new book without risk of injuring it is to place it on its back upon a smooth or covered table, let down the fore and then the hind board, hold the leaves in one hand and open a few of the fore and afterward the end leaves until you reach the center of the volume. Do this several times and you will not break the back of the book.

Made It Very Clear.

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 1910 NUMBER 17

ARRESTED IN THIS CITY

Young Poet Who Is Said to Be a Real Genius Is in the State's Prison.

Editor of the Century Magazine Makes a Plea for His Freedom Before Pardon Board.

Considerable interest was taken in Thief River Falls in the application for pardon of John Carter, who was sent to the state's prison for robbing a saloon up at Karstad, north of here on the Soo line. Carter was arrested in this city by Chief of Police Lang assisted by some railroad men and turned over to the Kittson county authorities. The following, taken from the Minneapolis Journal, explains the matter:

The editor of one of the greatest literary magazines in the world appealed to the Minnesota state pardon board in behalf of a poet who is spending ten years in state's prison at Stillwater for burglary.

The editor is Robert Underwood Johnson of New York, the head of the Century magazine. The poet is John Carter, a young Englishman. Carter is not his real name. Only a few persons know his real name. Mr. Johnson hopes it will not be discovered. The man was homeless, cold and hungry. He stole $24.

Carter gained Mr. Johnson's interest when he sent the Century a poem several weeks ago. It was entitled "Con Sordini" ("With Muted Strings.") With it was a letter to the editor. The letter said frankly the author of the verses was in state's prison at Stillwater, Minn. "John Carter," said he hoped that fact would not prejudice the editor.

It did not. On the contrary, it sharpened Mr. Johnson's interest. He declares that he observed, instantly, that the poem had unusual merit, was beautiful in expression and fancy, and was, in short genuine poetry. He published it in the April number of the magazine with a footnote explaining where it came from.

"I received," declared Mr. Johnson in New York, a number of letters from literary friends whose judgment I value very highly. All were enthusiastic in their praise of 'Con Sordini' and its author. Some wrote me that they were carrying the verses around with them to show to friends."

The Century editor then wrote John Carter, addressing his letter to the Stillwater prison. Before long he received a reply, a long letter, but phrased in a way that struck the editor as frank and manly. John Carter wrote that he was serving a ten year sentence for burglary.

"He did not whine," said Mr. Johnson. He did not complain, or beg. He wrote the story of his experience as simply as if it had been the story of someone else. That fact and the fact of his unquestioned ability is what has prompted us to make a direct appeal to the Minnesota pardon board. We are hoping that the unfortunate boy will be released in a few days. I am not the sort to endulge in sentimental nonsense where crime and criminals are concerned, but this particular convict is a genius, and it does not seem right to me to keep a genius penned up ten years for stealing $24 when he was homeless, cold and hungry.

"I believe this young man is worth saving. He unbosomed himself to me in his letters. He mentioned in one of his letters that he was going to apply to the state board for freedom, but there was no intimation that I should intercede. He has learned his lesson and will, I believe, take his place in the world as a better man."

More of the details of John Carter's career were learned from J. A. Preuss, executive clerk in the office of Governer A. O. Eberhart. "Mr. Carter was sent to Canada from England," said Mr. Preuss, "when he was 19 years old. I do not know exactly why. The inference is that he needed to face the world and brace up. He is connected with a very fine English family. I do not know whether there is a title in the family or not. He was not sent to relatives, but was sent out to make his own way, doubtless in the hope that it would make a man of him. I know his real name but I do not think it should be given out.

"He came to Canada and then down into Minnesota. He was absolutely without means when he broke into a building—at least, I think it was this way, and stole $24 or $25. He was caught in a boxcar and was sentenced to ten years at Stillwater. It was a pretty good dose for stealing $25. The offense was commited at Karlstad, in Kittson county.

"Besides Mr. Johnson's letter, there are filed here documents showing that clemency is favored by Judge Andrew Grindeland, who sentenced him, and today I received a letter from Warden Henry Wolfer at Stillwater, saying that Carter's conduct had been irreproachable.

"Yes, Carter's family knows of his imprisonment. He wrote his mothher, and has received letters from home. No one of his family has ever been to visit him. I think. What action the board will take, of course I do not know, but in my judgement the young man is not a criminal in the general sense of the word. He committed one offense, and his term in prison has turned him into a philosopher and apparently has made a man of him.

LATER—Carter has been pardoned by the state board.

SATISFIED TO RETURN

George Leimers, Who Had Spent the Past Year in the West Is Back.

Says That Red Lake County Land Is Better Than $200 Per Acre Land In West.

George Leimers, who formerly lived on the Red Lake river east of Highlanding, returned to this city last week, and announced that for the remaining part of his life he will be a resident of Red Lake county. It was some over a year ago that Mr. Leimers left for Oregon and after spending some time in that state finally decided to locate in Washington where he purchased a piece of land. He is a good farmer and thoroughly investigated farming conditions in the west, and is satisfied that any man can make more money off a farm in Red Lake county than in any part of the west. Land out there is very high, so Mr. Leimer says, and the prices keep going up. This is not due to the fact that farmers out there are making any money, but on account of the big influx of settlers. Cut-over timber lands that will require an expenditure of from $100 to $150 to clear of stumps, is selling at $40 per acre and is not near as productive as land around here. Meadow land is very scarce and as a result much of the hay has to be shipped in. Mr. Leimer says that he can make more off any quarter section of land in this section than he could on the $200 per acre land in the west.

Mr. Leimers still owns his homestead up the Red Lake river and will engage in dairy farming up there again.

Planting Corn.

There is no fixed or best time to plant corn, other than it is usually planted in May and generally from the 10th to the 20th. Under no condition should corn be planted unless the seed-bed has undergone proper preparation. It is much better to keep the seed in the sack than to plant it in a heavy, cold soil. Early working of the soil with the disc and the barrow is essential, as it assists in warming it.

There are advantages in planting corn in drills, and likewise in the check system; and many advocates of either method are easily found. One of the objects of growing corn, and one of its advantages over growing small grain crops, is the fact that it is a cultivated crop, and if well cultivated will tend to clean the land of foul weeds. This object is more thoroughly accomplished if the corn is planted in check rows and is cultivated both ways.

On the other hand, on rich, reasonably clean land; larger yields are sometimes secured by planting in drills. It is our judgement, however, that for average Minnesota conditions the check row is to be preferred.

It is not wise to plant corn more than two inches deep; and if the soil is heavy, not more than one inch deep is preferble, as it will start more quickly near the surface; and, if heavy rains should come and pack down the soil, the young plants stand a much better show of getting through than when planted too deep. When properly prepared, the soil near the surface is warmer and contains moisture enough to germinate the seed. If the seed has been properly graded, it is no great task to secure a reasonably uniform drop of kernels per hill. No less than three nor no more than four kernels per hill will bring best results, if the seed be of good vitality.—University Farm Press News.

Another Traveler Returns.

L. Peterson, a son of "Dane" Peterson, one of the old settlers of New Solum, was in town yesterday. He and his wife moved to Washington state about ten years ago, but came back two weeks ago to take up farming in Viking.

Mr. Peterson thinks a lot more of Marshall county now than he did when he went away.—Warren Sheaf.

$2,500,000.00 TO FARMERS

That Is the Amount the Creameries of This Section are Paying Annually to Farmers.

M. J. Cort Tells of the Number of Creameries He Has Established In Past 12 Years.

Much has been said within the past few years regarding the wonderful strides forward being made in the dairying industries in Northern Minnesota. Much more will continue to be said for several years to come. Few men, however, are in a position to say as much as M. J. Cort, the dairy supply man who, in 12 short years, has established 230 creameries, all on the co-operative plan, north and west of the Twin Cities, in Northern Minnesota and North Dakota, four-fifths of them being in Minnesota. He is still in the harness and this spring has established new ones at Syre, on the N. P. south of here, at Laporte, Mahnomen (which will be the first one in operation in Mahnomen county), Waubon, the second one in Mahnomen County, and Cook, St. Louis county, which is the first one to be established in St. Louis county outside of Duluth.

Mr. Cort has figures which show that the 55 creamereis which he has established in northern Minnesota on the line of the Great Northern from Fisher to Bemidji and north from that line to the Canadian boundary, are now paying to the dairy farmers $2,500,000 annually for butterfat. What is more, Mr. Cort says the industry in northern Minnesota is just nicely started, in its infancy, and that a very few years more will see northern Minnesota the greatest butter producing section in the entire world, and the quality has already reached such a high standard that agents of the big commission houses in New York and Pacific coast centers of population pay a premium for all consignments from from this section.

"Creamery" Cort, as he is known throughout the territory, is an indefatigable worker. He has been instrumental in paying off more mortgages, the construction of more stock barns and making more farmers independent than any other one man anywhere in this section. Not half the people, not ten per cent of them, know what concern he represents. He gets the co-operative creamery company organized first, and then takes a chance with the rest of the creamery supply men as to who sells the butter manufacturing machinery.

His work has been invaluable to this section and his energy and level headed council has made every creamery in the organization of which he has had a hand, a success. He gets them started right and they always succeed in working out their own salvation. If they want help later, "Creamery" Cort always manages to have business in that locality and gives them a few needed pointers. He is the father of creameries in this section and his work his highly appreciated.

Highlanding Postmaster Appointed.

Andre N. Seter was on last Friday appointed postmaster at Highlanding, and thus a contest that has caused considerable excitement in the country east of here is at an end. J. W. Vroison, who had been the postmaster there for a number of years, resigned last fall, and Andrew Ellingson made application to be appointed. He was recommended by Congressman Steenerson, but the Farmers' Club of the town of Highlanding protested against the appointment of Ellingson and made serious charges against him, the same being filed with the postoffice department at Washington and resulted in the department asking that Congressman Steenerson make a new recommendation.

Mr. Seter, who has been appointed, is a new man in the town of Highlanding, but is of a very genial disposition and has made many friends since he started up in business at that place. His appointment gives general satisfaction.

DYNAMITE A STORE

Carter & Son's Store Up at the Red Lake Nearly Wrecked Last Week.

Robbery Was Not the Motive and Matter Is Being Investigated by the Sheriff.

The front of the building occupied by D. W. Carter & Son at Redby as a mercantile establishment and formerly citizens of Thief River Falls was entirely demolished last Friday night by an explosion of a charge of dynamite which was thrown into the doorway of the building, at about 11:30 o'clock.

The front of the building was wrecked, some showcases and counters in the front end of the store were badly damaged, and a considerable quantity of china and glassware and other goods were broken by the explosion, which did no further damage than that noted to the front end of the store.

F. A. Carter and family were sleeping in the second story of the building, and although the explosion shook the structure considerably, no one was injured.

While there are no further facts obtainable, it is intimated that the building was wrecked by parties who live at Redby or in that vicinity, and that the purpose of the act was not robbery, as but little is missing from the stock.

The sheriff's office in Bemidji was notified of the explosion.

We have some clients with unlimited amounts of money to loan on improved farms at reasonable rates and liberal terms. Those wishing farm loans should apply at once. Northern Adjustment Co., Thief River Falls, Minn. 42-tf.

Bonds Sold Well.

At a meeting of the city council held Tuesday evening, the bonds of the city to the amount of $25,000 to complete the new auditorium were sold to C. L. Hansen, of the First National Bank at a premium of $1250. The bonds draw 5 per cent interest and there were eight bidders present and all the bids were very close. One firm offered a premium of $1,280, or $30 more than that of Mr. Hansen, but it was thought advisable to sell to a local man as the interest will now be payable at the First National Bank in this city and there will be no exchange to pay. In this connection it may be stated that the bonds of the city bring a larger premium than those of the county.

All of the bids for the completion of the auditorium were rejected, the council being of the opinion that they were too high. They expect now to secure some private party to do the work at a less cost and will have another meeting this evening to consider the matter.

The council also decided to give ten per cent of the money received from taxes and liquor licenses to the park board, and it is expected that this board will in the near future secure a park. They will have between $5,000 and $6,000 this year.

Taken to the Asylum.

An old gentleman who gave the name of Lyman Smith was picked up on the streets last week by the police. He was in a demented condition, and an examination proved that he was insane, and was taken to the Fergus Falls asylum by Sheriff Nelson and Christ Porter. Smith said that his former home was at Roosevelt, up in Roseau county, and that the authorities there had furnished him transportation to Thief River Falls. The matter will be investigated.

Plummer to Be Dry.

The saloonkeepers at Plummer last week recieved their notice from Special Agent Johnson to discontinue business on the 10th of May. The order does not allow the saloonkeeper to sell either malt or beer, as was stated last week. The depot agent at Plummer also received notice not to receive any shipment of beer or liquor.

School Notes.

Several of the high school year studies will be completed by the close of this month, thus affording ample time for a through review of the subject. The half year studies will consume almost all the second semester.

Miss Stubbings resumed her duties in the domestic science department Monday morning, having been ill a part of last week.

The high school graduation class for '10 comprises the following students: Ida Ove, Ward Sharbach, Lena Lonson, Earl Weeks, Jossie Weeks, Martha Tanem, Selma Hoff, Cora Stene, Alf Berry, Gena Grannm, George Hicks, Louis Iverson, Lilian Brady, Bertha Olson, Ester Stebbins, John Ible, Edwin Karwand, Lilian Mussey, Fred Protz, Samuel Pope, George Rice, William Rinker, Frances Schmitz, George Jacobson, Rasmus Bartleson, Neil Dahl, James Walker, Ingwald Fossum. The first six are honor students, ranking in the order named, the others are not arranged according to standings. For second position Lena Lonson almost tied Ward Sharbach, there being but two-tenths of one percent difference between the averages of these two students in their four years' high school work.

The measels have played havoc with the attendance among the lower grade pupils for two months, and now, just as the disease is abating, mumps appear and will likely afflict the little people until the close of school.

The senior class play is now ready for presentation and as soon as the auditorium can be secured the graduating class will entertain their friends with an exhibition of their histrionic abilities.

A prominent speaker will be secured to deliver the commencement address. This event will take place in the auditorium on the evening of Friday, May 27th, the last day of school. On the Wednesday evening preceding, the eight grade pupils entitled to promotion to high school will hold simple exercises in the high school assembly room, at which time they will receive diplomas recognizing the completion of the grade work and officially entering them in the high school. This event will be dignified with the name of eighth grade graduation. This, of cource, has no connection with the senior class graduation, the latter occassion being the great school event of the year.

Why Meat Is High.

The number of food animals in the United States have decreased five million since 1901, and the number of consumers have increased 12 millions in the same time. This is the result of an analysis by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor, of the census estimates of populations and the Department of Agriculturist's estimates of food animals in the years 1901 and 1910. The term "food animals" includes in this instance all cattle, sheep and swine in the United States as estimated by the Department of Agriculture, and the term "consumers" includes all of the population as estimated by the Census.

Hurry up and list your farm that is for sale with Wm. Moeller, St. Hilaire, Minn., R. R. No. 1, box 9.

Bids Wanted.

Sealed bids will be received by the committee of the German Lutheran congregation for the erection of a church.

Also separate bids for the erection of the basement.

All bids must be in by Thursday, April 28th at 6 p. m., when they will be opened. Every bid must be accompanied by a certified check amounting to 5 per cent of the contract work as a guarantee of good faith. Plans and specifications can be seen with Rev. F. J. Seitz. 2t. The Building Committee.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep can not be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southers, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now I sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney pills as I know they have cured me." Sold by All Druggists

ADULTERATION OF MILK.

A Missouri reader of these notes writes inquiring if there is any simple and correct way of ascertaining whether sweet milk has been adulterated. In several states the pure food laws require that milk shall contain not less than 3 per cent of butter fat nor less than 12½ per cent of milk solids. The butter fat content is readily determined by the Babcock test, which is simply made by adding to a graduated test tube of the milk three or four drops of concentrated sulphuric acid, which causes the fatty content to separate as yellow butter oil and rise to the top of the tube, when the proportion it bears to the whole can be easily determined. If the butter fat content is less than 3 per cent there is good reason for believing that the milk has been adulterated or is from a mighty poor cow. The milk solids are readily determined by the Quevenne lactometer, and we are indebted to Professor Mortensen, director of the department of dairying at the State college at Ames, Ia., for the following directions for using it:

"Take a glass or tin cylinder one and a half inches in diameter and one inch high and fill about three-fourths full of the milk to be tested. The milk should be thoroughly mixed before the sample is taken and be at a temperature of 60 degrees F., though the reading may be taken from 50 to 70 degrees. The lactometer is placed in the milk and the reading taken after it has floated in the milk for a minute. At the same time there should be a reading of the temperature on the thermometer with which the lactometer is equipped. The total solids are ascertained by adding one and two-tenth times the per cent of fat to one-fourth of the lactometer reading. For example, if the lactometer reading is 32 and the fat according to the Babcock test is 4 per cent the total solids would be equal to 4 × 1.2 plus 32 ÷ 4, or 4.8 plus 8, or 12.8. If the temperature of the milk is above 60 degrees F. one-tenth should be added to the lactometer reading for each degree above, and if the temperature is below 60 degrees one-tenth should be subtracted from the lactometer reading for each thermometer degree below. For example, if the lactometer reading at 65 degrees F. is 32 the corrected reading would be 32 plus five-tenths, or 32.5, and if the reading of the lactometer is 55 degrees five-tenths should be subtracted from 32, which would make the correct reading 31.5.

HOW TUBERCULIN IS MADE.

There seems to be an idea in the minds of some that the injection of tuberculin into the system of a cow which does not have tuberculosis may in some mysterious way develop the disease in her. This is a wrong idea, as will be understood from a description of the method of preparing the serum given below, taken from a bulletin recently published by Dr. C. H. Stange of the Iowa Agricultural college at Ames:

"A bouillon is prepared with beef or veal infusion containing from 4 to 6 per cent of glycerin. This is placed in flasks and sterilized (heated to a temperature sufficient to kill all living organisms). It is then inoculated with a pure culture of the tubercle bacillus and kept in an incubator at 98 degrees F. In the course of a few weeks the tubercle bacilli will have formed a coarse granular scum on the surface. The contents of the flask are now poured into a porcelain dish and heated until evaporation reduces it to one-tenth of its volume. It is then filtered through a porcelain filter. The liquid passing through the filter is tuberculin. The heat required to concentrate the fluid before filtration is sufficient to kill all bacilli, while the filter removes all the dead bacilli. Tuberculin is therefore the bouillon in which the tubercle bacillus has been grown and contains the toxic material produced by its growth, but the heat to which the preparation is subjected effectively destroys all germ life."

CHEAP SEED CORN.

If reports from those parts of the corn belt which were visited by the killing October freeze are to be believed $10 is about the price which will be paid for seed corn showing an average test of 95 per cent. Buying seed corn at this figure is expensive business, but it comes a long way from being as expensive a proceeding as planting in good soil two dollar seed corn that will test but 50 per cent and that is neither good nor strong. In buying seed corn the coming spring it will be well to keep clearly in mind the fact that one bushel of good seed will plant seven acres, which even on the $10 basis makes the cost of seed per acre but $1.43. The question for the farmer to settle would seem to be whether the twenty to thirty bushels extra that he will get from planting seed that will grow are worth 75 cents.

This digging corn out of the snow in March is a belated and uncongenial labor, but any fellow who is engaged in it has the consolation of knowing that he has a lot of company in his misery.

Oilmeal is generally recognized as a most valuable food for the dairy cow in the furnishing of needed protein to the ration. A handful given the horse once a week is a benefit and tends to keep him in a thrifty condition.

There are a good many breeders which seem to be slow in learning the lesson that they should keep for breeding purposes and not sell the best individuals which they produce. It is hard to refuse a long price for a fine animal, but here is a case where a fellow's farsighted self interest ought to serve him well.

The average cost of hauling a ton of freight a mile by railroad is 7.8 mills, while the cost of moving it the same distance by wagon is 23 cents. In the difference between these figures lie the chief argument and motive for better roads. The question is a vital one that all who haul produce to market should be interested in.

Amber, which is merely fossilized resin, the sappy product of certain coniferous trees, is found in but few places. Among them are a portion of the Baltic sea coast, near Koenigsburg, and the island of Santo Domingo. The amber is usually found in flattened, egg shaped lumps, varying in size from a pea to a man's fist. These are dull on the exterior and are covered with a sort of brownish crust.

The quite common hit and go miss method of testing seed corn, in which the corn is shelled first and tested afterward, will spell disaster for a good many the coming season. Under this system there is no way of eliminating the dead or weak germed kernels, which can only incumber the planter boxes and decrease the stand. If all of the seed corn is planted the coming spring that has been saved regardless of its germinating quality, plates with holes large enough to accommodate the end of a broomstick will have to be used in the planter boxes.

Scientists who are making a thorough investigation of pellagra, the disease which has lately made its appearance in this country and owes its origin to the eating of moldy corn and corn products, seem to think it has its counterpart in the blind staggers which afflict horses and similar ailments of some other domestic animals, diseases which they hope to prove are superinduced by eating moldy corn. Whether the connection between the diseases can be established or not, an interesting field for investigation has certainly been opened.

The other day we came across the case of a breeder of blooded hogs and cattle who, it is said, does himself a positive injustice financially because he does not have his animals in even fair condition at sale time. We heartily commend in any breeder the practice of not pampering or overfeeding animals that are to be offered for sale, but there is a happy and entirely commendable medium that lies between these two—namely, the giving of the blooded stock that care from day to day which will enable them to make a good showing at sale time and which will at the same time give their owner the return to which he is justly entitled.

At a sale of Polled Angus cattle of which we read an account the other day, where the animals disposed of were brought across the state line without proper inspection, about a dozen of the animals were seized by the veterinary authorities of the state in which the sale was held and subjected to the tubercular test. Of this number ten animals were found more or less affected with tuberculosis, some so seriously that no portions of their carcasses were fit for food. This case is cited for the purpose of indicating the risk that the purchaser of full blooded stock runs and the wisdom there is in his insisting on a health certificate from a reliable veterinary authority before he pays the long price usually asked for such animals.

The North Dakota experiment station has been making a study of clover growing and in a report recently issued states that clover can be grown over the greater part of that state provided the land is prepared for the purpose by soil inoculation with clover bacteria. The land should be prepared as it would be for garden purposes, and on this there should be scattered from a field where clover bacteria are known to be present soil at the rate of from 100 to 200 pounds per acre, either after sunset or on a cloudy day, as the direct rays of the sun quickly kill the bacteria. This inoculated soil should be harrowed in as soon as possible and the clover seed sown at the desired number of quarts per acre. The station offers to send the inoculated soil to residents of the state free, beyond the cost of freight and packing. Where one cannot get the soil from an established field the nitrogen culture, which comes in a small sealed tube and is diluted in a solution in which the clover seed is moistened just before sowing, may be had by sending to the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C.

The county option forces have decided not to endorse any candidates for state offices. Their real work should be devoted to electing members of the legislature.

The Fairbanks expedition reached the summit of Mount McKinley April 3 and reports that no trace of Dr. Cook's records was found. It is stated, however, that the mountain was found to have twin peaks, one of which is covered with ice and snow, while the other consists of barren rocks. Perhaps the doctor left his records on the other peak.

John Kirsch and A. L. Berkland will in a short time begin the publication of a weekly newspaper in Crookston. Mr. Kirsch was formerly editor of the Journal and used to run a red hot paper. He will take an active part in politics in Polk county which means that there will be a warm campaign down there this year.

W. J. Bryan says that the present high prices are due to the increase supply of gold, thus vindicating his free silver theories, while other Democrats claim it is the tariff. We have not any idea who is right, but, as we live in a section where most of the wealth is produced from the farm, we would like to see the present prices of the farm produce remain stationary, even if we have to have a higher tariff or more people at work digging gold. Only a few years ago the Democrats were complaining because everything was too cheap, and now it is because they are too high.

That those who live upon the farm should be contented to stay there is well illustrated by W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central railway. Mr. Brown quotes statistics showing that consumption is increasing at a much greater rate than production and he likens the situation to two railroad trains traveling on a single track, one train representing production moving at 36 miles per hour and the other representing consumption, making 60 miles an hour. It is plain to be seen that the second train will soon overtake the first—and then what will happen?

Editor Hunt announces in the Sunbeam that he is going to support Al Jester for state senator on the grounds that the latter is a farmer. We don't know anything regarding the qualifications of Mr. Jester, but we are reliably informed that if he expects to win the office of state senator upon his claims as being a farmer he is going to be badly fooled. Mr. Jester was for a number of years a traveling salesman, and a few years ago purchased some land on the shore of a lake south of Bemidji where he conducts a summer resort and hires a man to raise a few vegetables for his guests. He resides in the city of Bemidji where he is secretary of the commercial club. As a farmer Mr. Jester is a jest, and does not actually cultivate as much soil as Editor Hunt.

THE CHEAP GRAFTER.

Every fresh graft disclosure proves anew the amazing cheapness of the grafters. Some of the forty or fifty Pittsburgh councilmen who were bribed got as much as eighty-one dollars a head for their votes. From that the price shaded off to fifty dollars.

Touching stories are told of men in public positions of trust who yield to the temptation of a glittering bribe in order to meet some pressing financial need. Such cases there may be, but they are not typical. The typical bribe-taker is a poor little sneak thief, so pitifully void of character that he hasn't even the courage to ask a decent price for himself. In city councils and in state legislatures the big robberies of the pubic are usually accomplished by means of members who are so ready to sell themselves that they will accept anything that looks like money: a few twenty-dollar bills or a few fives—either will do.

Now this is due also to a democratic, but utterly mistaken, notion that, in a representative government, the more representatives the people have the better; that every petty subdivision, such as the ward in the city, or the county in the state, must elect its own particular alderman or legislator, in order that local interests may be properly represented. This vicious cheapening of the representative office results in a lot of amazingly cheap representatives, each possessing very little responsibility.

The best-governed cities, on the whole, are those that have adopted the commision plan, electing only a few men and turning the government over to them. We expect that other state capitals will be fruitful sources of scandal until legislatures are reduced in size about nine-tenths.

THE FLOOD OF IMMIGRATION.

We are accustomed to regarding the pouring of European immigrants into this country as a sign of prosperity and their return in great numbers as a consequence of business depression. This is roughly true, though a more accurate analysis would put the proposition in rather different form.

We are not accustomed to regard rapid increase of imports and falling off of exports as a sign of solid and enduring prosperity without some qualification. Obviously such a condition indicates that we think we can afford to keep what we have for our own use and to buy largely from others.

But it takes time to prove whether the prosperity so indicated is solid and enduring or fictitious and temporary; namely, whether we are buying out of a surplus of created wealth, or running into debt to gratify taste for luxury or speculation.

We have learned to regard gold as a commodity which flows back and forth across the ocean in obedience to the law of supply and demand, like any other merchandise. By including immigrants who are seeking employment in the labor market in this same conception of commodities, we may get a clearer view of the reasons for the movement one way or the other and of its indication as a sign of business conditions.

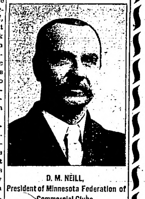
Immigrants pour into this country in increasing numbers when they can earn and save more here than in Europe, and pour backward when they think they can save more, even if they earn less on the lower wages of that country. Just now, when wages are going up everywhere under pressure of high cost of living, arrival of immigrants from Europe approaches the high-water mark.

How long this will continue after the immigrants learn what cost of living is in this country will depend upon how productively they are employed.—Minneapolis Tribune.

COMMERCIAL CLUB NEXT

Steps Taken to Re-Organize the Local Commercial Club.

Prominent Speakers from Abroad to Be Here to Assist in the Matter.



D. M. NEILL,
President of Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs.

Next Monday evening, April 25th, it is proposed to re-organize a rousing Commercial Club in Thief River Falls. This was decided upon at a meeting of a number of business men held in the Antlers Club rooms Monday evening.

D. M. Neill, of Red Wing, president of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs, and Curtis L. Mosier, of St. Paul, the secretary, will be here and deliver addresses upon the benefits to be derived by having active commercial clubs. A number of local speakers will also be present and give their views upon matters pretaining to the future welfare of Thief River Falls.

At the meeting held Monday evening C. L. Hansen was given the power to name numerous committies, which he did as follows:

Committee on arrangements —Dr. Helber, Oscar Sponheim and C. L. Hanson.

Reception Committe — Mayor Hamre, D. P. O'Neill and Frank H. Kratka.

Advertising, Printing and Program Committee—G. Halvorson, E. L. Quist and W. J. LaBree.

The meeting will be held in the new auditorium and it is the desire that every citizen of Thief River Falls be present and listen to the addresses. There are a number of important matters that will effect the future of Thief River Falls to be decided in the near future, and it is desired to form a strong commercial body. The band will furnish music and all should attend.

Tough Tale on Butcher.

Here is a tale of high cost of living that goes straight to the heart. It is told that a farmer selling a dressed hog to a local butcher decided to take part of his pay in trade. He ordered a ham and two sides of bacon and then asked the dealer how much he had "coming." While apparently having reached a result, the butcher scratched his head and the impatient farmer again demanded, "Well, how much do you owe me?" "Dont owe you anything," replied the butcher. "You owe me a dollar and eighty-five cents."—Winona Republican and Herald.

CAN BE SECURED

Residents Living North of Here Want Land Office Removed to Thief River Falls.

This City Is Certainly More Centrally Located Than Is Crooookston.

Crookston, Minn., April 18.—Guy H. Powell of Warroad, president of the Commercial club at that plabe, and others in that section of the state have started a movement to have the U. S. land office removed from Crookston to Thief River Falls. The matter will be taken up by the Crookston Commercial Club immediately.—Minneapolis Journal.

The above would indicate that if Thief River Falls would get busy they could secure the location of the land office here. Land offices are located by the department of the interior at points most convenient for the settlers. When the new Soo line is built through Clearwater county, there will not be one portion of the district as near to Crookston as to Thief River Falls. Parties living north of here could come to Thief River Falls to transact their business and be required to stay in the city only one night, while at Crookston it requires two nights. All that is necessary we believe, is to have the matter taken up and properly presented to the department of of the interior at Washington and that office will order the removal of the land office to this city.

Stole a Letter.

Charged with stealing a letter from a rural free delivery box near St. Vincent, Minn., Francoys Petier was brought to this city Monday evening by a postoffice inspector. He was bound over to the federal grand jury at Fergus Falls by United States Commissioner Michelet and was taken to that place Tuesday evening by Deputy Marshall Tuffs. Bail was fixed at $300.

Has a Scheme to Get Rich Quick.

W. J. LaBree is going into the chicken business quite extensively this spring. He believes there is great possibilities in the poultry business and is now indeavoring to interest parties in a "goose farm."

Mr. LaBree has it all figured out. He says that an investment of $300 paid in by three stockholderes, each holding one of the three shares of the company, and 300 geese at $1 each; total, $300.

The estimated production is three eggs a week from each goose, making nine hundred eggs a week, 46,800 a year, and for three years the life of the (company), 140,000.

None of the eggs are to be sold, but all incubated and hatched, and allowing 40,000 for bad eggs, there would be a total of 100,000 goslings. In three years each goose would produce, "conservatively," three pounds of feathers, which at $1 a pound would amount to $300,000. From 100,000 goose livers would be received $50,000. Estimating twenty buttons from each goose bill, and the price of 1 cent a button, there would be $20,000 from 2,000,000 goose bill buttons, while from 100,000 marketed geese at $1.50 each would be derived the sum of $150,000.

The operating expenses are estimated at $190,000, to which should be added the $3,000 paid in by stockholders and investigated in goose eggs, making the total outlay $193,000. The total receipts as enumerated, would be $530,000, making the enormous net profits of $337,700 in three years, or an annual dividend of $37,744 for each stockholder.

No Kinghead Wanted.

As a result of a stand taken against kinghead wheat at the terminals the farmers who have this weed in their fields will face a difficult proposition. In Duluth the State is placing sufficient dockage on this class of wheat to absolutely clean it and in Minneapolis the buyers are reducing their bids to cover dockage if the State does not dock heavy enough to clean out all kingheads. The grades are lowered in both markets because of a presence of kinghead and at Duluth a rule has been posted to take effect Aug. 1st, 1910, that no wheat can be applied on sale to arrive—if it contains kinghead. From this it would appear that unless farmers want to suffer a big loss on the grade of their wheat it will be necessary to take immediate steps toward the eradiction of the weed mentioned.

Contract Not Let.

The contract for the new high school, which was to have been awarded by the board of education last Saturday afternoon at one o'clock, was not let. Owing to the fact that a number of contractors desired more time to figure upon the job, the school board thought it advisable to postpone the opening of the bids for one week. The contract will be let next Saturday.

Seed Potatoes.

It is nearly potato planting time. Select your seed now, quick. Don't use the long, rough stock of round or oval varieties. Its vitality is diminishing, and it will be disappointing at digging time. Avoid the small, slender, tapering stock of longer varieties. Use as intelligent care in selecting seed potatoes as any sensible farmer will use in selecting breeding animals, for the better and stronger the parent the better and stronger the offspring. The same rule applies to vegetables and animals. The short, thick potato, compared with the lot in the bin is the vigorous, hardy seed. Medium sized potatoes give best results. Potatoes with deep eyes are harder to peel than shallow eyed. In peeling much of the nutritive value is lost. Avoid irregular surfaces and small tubers. The small individuals indicate run out vitality. They will do to feed stock or poultry.—University Farm Press News.

Indians Receive Money.

The Red Lake Indians were this week paid some over $51,000, part payment of the funds received from the sale of the eleven towns just east of this city. Some 1375 persons were entitled to draw annuities, and the per capita payment was about $37.

IS THIS YOU?

I once had money, I once had friends, I loaned my money to my friends I have no money I have no friends.

YOUR MONEY IS YOUR BEST FRIEND, PUT IT IN THE BANK.

Have you ever had reverses and thought your friends would help you, and when you asked for help found that most friendships cease when they cost a man money. A savings account started to-day will save many bitter disappointments in after life.

We will pay you 5 per cent interest on the money you put in our bank and compound the interest every 12 months.

SOME FALSE ECONOMIES.

Some of the worst blunders that are made by tillers of the soil and those engaged in animal husbandry are the result of practicing shortsighted initial economies—the attempt to save in first cost followed by increased losses later on. To this class of economies belong the purchase of scrub or cheap grade sires for the dairy or beef herds, the use of poor seed on high priced land when good seed costing a half more would give three times the crop return, the use of wornout and dilapidated machinery and tools when money would be made by the use of those new and up to date, the plodding along in the same old rut in the dairy without Babcock tester or cream separator when money could be made by the use of both, the refusal to buy a manure spreader or other labor saving devices which would make possible a maximum utilization of the various farm resources and, lastly, the use of the old, played out fuel wasting stove and furnace when the new would do vastly better work at a minimum consumption of fuel.

This is but a partial list of false economies, but enough have been mentioned to suggest a profitable line of thought. This fault may be summarized in the statement that the trouble lies in holding the copper or nickel so close to one's eye that it ruins one's perspective of the real value of things and obscures the distant dollar or eagle that might be made were a more intelligent and enlightened policy adopted.

SOME SILO ADVANTAGES.

In many sections of the corn belt during the past few months corn has not only spoiled from being left in the field as a result of heavy snows, which made husking impossible, but considerable quantities of that which was cribbed also spoiled because it was not properly dried out when stored. But that corn which was cut in season and put in the silo was safe not only from frost damage, but from possibility of rot and mildew as well. There ought to be a suggestion in this all too general situation for the farmer who would combine the best intelligence with brawn in his farming operations. There is no debating the question that the silo offers both the safest and the most economical method for handling this great cereal staple of the country. It is none too early now to begin making plans for a silo if one contemplates installing one next fall, as a study of plans and types of silos should be made, while a visit to several farms where they are in successful operation, coupled with inquiries made of the owners as to their experience with them, would be time very well spent. The greatest agricultural leak in the country today is the result of the present careless methods of handling the corn crop. The use of the silo offers the best way out.

THE LAWING CHAP.

We have in mind a fellow who is everlastingly at law about something or other. Part of the time it is because he fancies he has been wronged in some way by those with whom he has had dealings, while the rest of the time he is a defendant in suits brought by his fellows who feel that he has been an offender in an attempt to get what did not belong to him. While seemingly a strong believer in the law as a corrective of the ills from which folks suffer and a generous contributor toward the maintenance of its machinery, he now and then is hauled into court for open violation of the statutes. It goes without saying that this chap is a mighty disagreeable person to get along with, his rating as a man being away below par in the family as well as in the community in which he lives. He makes rich plucking for the lawyers, who are the only ones who are the gainers from the squabbles and suits in which he becomes involved.

THE STRAWBERRY BED.

In view of the fact that strawberries are among the most delicious of the garden fruits it seems strange that more folks do not have a patch to supply the family table and, if the bed does well, to sell to the neighbors. The plants should be set in rows from two and one-half to three and one-half feet apart, depending upon whether the hill or row system of culture is followed, while the plants should be from one and one-half to two feet apart in the row, depending somewhat upon the variety. The bed should be set while there is sufficient moisture in the ground, should be given frequent cultivation and kept free from weeds and [illegible] If the rainfall is not sufficient [illegible] If the plants are to [illegible] thrifty [illegible] should be snipped off the season the plants are set out. When a bed has produced two full crops it should be plowed up and some legume sown to give the land a rest.

India's wheat area is 27,000,000 acres. The bulk of the crop is thrashed by hand, and the yield is from eight to twelve bushels per acre.

The time it takes a fellow to set fire to a pile of rubbish that he wants to dispose of makes him scratch his head to see how a barn will catch fire from simply throwing down a supposedly dead match or the stub of a cigar.

Many a failure to get a start in alfalfa seems traceable to a need of liming and sweetening the soil or to use of seed and soil neither of which has been inoculated with the bacteria whose presence seems quite indispensable to the best growth of the legume.

When the cow seems greedy for dirt or paint or wants to gnaw old bones it is fair to assume that there is lacking from her ration some element which she ought to have, and this is quite likely to be bone forming matter. The difficulty may be righted by feeding wheat bran or giving bonemeal in the ground feed occasionally and seeing that the cow has plenty of salt.

It will be well for gardeners of a competitive turn of mind who live north of the latitude of Tennessee to pass up trying to win the $1,000 prize offered by a well known seed house for a bush lima bean stalk bearing 000 pods. The lima bean is to all intents and purposes a tropical plant and requires a degree of heat for its best development, found only in the southernmost states.

It speaks well for the type of instruction which is given at the agricultural short courses over the country that three of the five silver cups given by the Milwaukee chamber of commerce for the best exhibits of spring wheat, winter rye and Oderbrucker barley were won by a young man, a graduate of the 1907 class of the short course school. Thus the day has gone by, if it ever was, when a fellow has to be gray headed before he can succeed in agricultural, horticultural or animal husbandry lines.

Where the pruning of the orchard has been neglected and the putting of the tree in proper shape would necessitate very heavy cutting of surplus branches it is well to do part of the work one season and complete it the next instead of doing it all up at one time, as one's natural inclination often is. Spreading the job out over two or even three seasons relieves the tree of a shock that often results in permanent injury. Of course this refers chiefly to pears and apples, for the peach stands far heavier pruning than either without injury.

If moss luxuriates on the shingles and snails are now and then seen clinging to the clapboards and doorknobs it is presumptive evidence, unless one lives in a section where it rains all the time, that there is too much shade about the house. If such is the case some of it should be removed, whether through the removal of whole trees or the trimming up and thinning of the branches. Sunshine is recognized by all health authorities as one of the most effective germ destroyers known, and unless a good supply of it plays on the house and the ground immediately surrounding things are too wet and a decidedly unhealthful condition prevails which ought to be righted.

The Crop Reporter for February, issued under the supervision of the department of agriculture at Washington, contains some interesting statistics relative to the number and value of farm animals in the country Jan. 1, 1910, as compared with the showing of a year prior. The number of horses shown on Jan. 1, 1910, is 21,040,000, their value being placed at $2,276,333,000, or an average of $108.19 per head. This is an increase in number of 400,000, while the average value per head shows an increase of about $12.50 for the period. The total number of mules at the last report was 4,123,000, an increase of 70,000 during the year and an increase in value per animal of $12. Although swine show a decrease in numbers of 6,365,000 in a total of 47,782,000, the increase in total value is $81,800,000, or $2.59 per head during the year. The number of sheep is placed at 57,216,000. This is an increase during the year of 1,132,000, the total increase in value being $41,022,000, or 65 cents per head.

Apparently seedsmen the country over don't relish being advertised as venders of adulterated grass seeds, for the number who have been found guilty of the practice in seed investigations made by the federal seed testing departments in different parts of the country are far fewer than the number reported the preceding year. Of 630 samples of red clover seed tested by the department last season but fifty-four, or less than 10 per cent, were found adulterated as compared with over 30 per cent adulterated in the samples of seed examined in 1908. The seed examined is bought on the open market and if found to contain impurities or adulterations the per cent of such admixtures, together with the names of the firms selling, is printed and given wide circulation in pamphlets issued by the department. If one has grass seed which he suspects contain impurities he may have the same tested by submitting samples to the seed laboratory at Washington or to the branch seed testing laboratories operated in connection with the state experiment stations at Columbia, Mo., Lincoln, Neb., or Corvallis, Ore. There is hardly a state but whose experiment station will make a like report on the purity of seeds if samples are submitted by residents thereof.

Scrimping the salary given to a first class buttermaker is like planting cheap seed corn at $1 a bushel when first class seed could be secured for from $3 to $6. We have known of creamery companies losing thousands of dollars by just such a policy as this "penny wise and pound foolish" kind.

A partition fence may prove a source of good will and neighborliness or enmity, depending upon whether the respective owners do or do not meet their obligations connected therewith. The same principle works out much the same with a number of other matters of everyday life which might be named.

The one great advantage that western states have over central and eastern is in the nearly ideal conditions which prevail during the harvest season of small grain and forage crops. Because of this it is possible to leave small grain standing weeks after it is fit to cut and to take alfalfa from the stack as bright and green as the day it was made.

Whatever may be the net result of the congressional investigation into the Ballinger-Pinchot affair so far as either man or the public welfare is concerned, it is nevertheless a fact that a good deal of information is being made public which is not only interesting but highly entertaining to the public and of a type, by the way, which certain interested mining, railway and timber syndicates would quite likely a great deal rather have kept in the dark.

A very simple preventive of the contraction of diseases, chiefly typhoid, from an impure water supply lies in bringing to a boiling point all water which is used for drinking purposes or taken into the mouth for the washing of the teeth or gargling of the throat. Such treatment of water will destroy any disease germs which it may contain. Of course such precautions will avail but little if the family milk supply is taken from cans which are rinsed with cold water from the same foul well.

Whether in the case of neighbors or members of the same household, it holds that when two people set out to see how mean they can be they seem to succeed, each surpassing the other by a good lap every turn in the game, to the increasing wrath and discomfiture of both parties concerned. On the other hand, if the contest is one in which there is an effort to outdo one another in consideration and kindness the results are also cumulative, being edifying rather than destructive and contributing substantially to the cause of human happiness and decent living.

An inspection of the root system of a mature alfalfa plant enables one to realize at once that disking and harrowing a field well established for the purpose of killing out grass and weeds could not possibly destroy the stand. One alfalfa farmer whose case was reported to us the other day went over such a field with a spring tooth harrow, then disked the piece and followed this with several draggings, which left the soil as mellow as would be required as a seed bed for small grain, hardly any alfalfa crowns showing at the time the process of renovation was finished. That it did not damage the field a bit was shown in his getting the best alfalfa crops that season that he had had in years.

There would seem to be slight excuse for shoddy and indifferent farming in communities where land is worth from $60 to $100, and far less excuse for this type of management in fruit valleys where land is priced at from $300 to $1,500 an acre, yet notwithstanding this just such fellows are too often run across, and the query that naturally arises in the mind of the newcomer from the sections of lower priced land is what the owners of such abused and neglected properties can be thinking of. The situation as indicated simply goes to show that whether in sections of low or high priced land it is, after all, the type of management rather than favorable or unfavorable climatic and soil conditions that may prevail that is responsible for the measure of success achieved in the great majority of cases.

The excellent state experiment stations scattered over the country and maintained by taxes which come out of the pockets of every property owner are doing a most valuable work along the several lines to which they are giving attention, but their usefulness could be measurably increased would agriculturists and horticulturists refer to the experts in charge oftener than they do matters on which information would be valuable. For instance, most all of the experiment stations will test and report on the impurities contained in grass seed, will test stock foods, the vitality of corn and other seeds, will identify the fungous and insect enemies of fruit trees as well as noxious weeds and give brief methods of eradication and answer dozens of other questions that arise in everyday farm management. Experiment stations are established for the use of the public, and the more frequent the demands made upon them for information and assistance the more fully do they perform their mission.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 299 of the General Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

Citation for Hearing On Petition For Probate of Will.

Estate of Augusta Younke

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF RED LAKE, IN PROBATE COURT.

In the matter of the Estate of Augusta Younke, Decedent.

The State of Minnesota To August Younke, G. J. Lane, Caroline Lane, Minnie Schrepel, Hattie Schrepel, Caroline Schumacher, Emma Bartz, Sarah Marquardt, Flora Nelson and all persons interested in the allowance and probate of the will of said decedent. The petition of G. J. Lane, of Hatton, North Dakota, being duly filed in this court, representing that Augusta Younke, then a resident of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, died on the 9th day of September, 1908, leaving a last will and testament which is presented to this court with said petition, and praying that said instrument be allowed as the last will and testament of said decedent, and that letters testamentary be issued thereon to G. J. Lane of Hatton, North Dakota. Now Therefore, you, and each of you, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this court, at the Probate Court Rooms in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 10th day of May, 1910, at five o'clock p. m., why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

Witness the Honorable S. A. Swanson, Judge of said court, and the seal of said court, this 12th day of April, 1910.

(COURT SEAL) S. A. SWANSON, Judge.

PERL W. MABEY,
Attorney for Petitioner [apr. 14-28]

Chapter 22 of the Revised of Laws Minnesota, 1905, entitled "Forestry and Fire Wardens," requires the Forestry Commissioner to prepare an abstract of the penal laws relating to forest and prairie fires and he may require any county board to cause at least three weeks published notice thereof to be given. The following is accordingly hereby published:

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
Office of Forestry Commissioner.
St. Paul, March 15, 1910.

The law of Minnesota for preventing and suppressing forest and prairie fires, as amended by Chapter 182 Laws of 1909, makes town supervisors, town clerks, village presidents and mayors of cities fire wardens, and requires them to take precautions against such fires, report them promptly and prosecute offenders.

THE LAW FORBIDS:

Setting fires and not extinguishing it before it endangers the property of another;

Throwing or dropping burning substance into combustible material without extinguishing same;

Starting camp-fire without clearing ground within radius of ten feet;

Setting fire to brush or slashings [illegible] land before piling same;

Setting fire to brush or slashings or other combustible material in a dry season, or allowing fire to be burning or smouldering in such season.

Those who cut timber or wood to sell must pile the slashings and burn the same as soon as practicable, and when it can be done without danger, and before the first of May.

Rangers may be appointed in a dry and dangerous season.

Railroad companies must keep their right of ways clear of combustible material, extinguish fires that occur near their lines of road, also patrol their roads in dangerous weather. The master mechanic and locomotive engineer, as well as the company, are responsible for the efficiency of spark arresters.

The minimum penalty for violation of any of the provisions of this law is $[illegible] the maximum penalty, $100 or three months imprisonment in jail.

C. C. ANDREWS,
Forestry Commissioner.

THE CABMEN OF PARIS

Hailing One Is the Same as a Declaration of War.

THEY ARE INSOLENT ROGUES

Sneers and Caustic Advice Are Showered Upon Those Who Engage Them. On Wet or Festal Days the Cabbies Spurn Those Who Want to Ride.

Among Anglo-Saxons there is a general and instinctive desire to do business on the basis of an entente cordiale. In Paris the hailing of a cabman is looked on by both parties to the transaction as an implied declaration of war. The cabman takes your measure, and you take his number if you are wise. At once he will give you a reason to remark that he has a rooted and premeditated objection to drive you where you wish to go. Perhaps he prefers the opera quarter because it is central, or should the weather be fine his heart is probably set upon driving in the Bois, while you may have business at the bourse. He explains his views on the subject selfishly and rudely.

A foreigner alighted recently from the Calais train at the Northern railway station in Paris and ordered a typical Parisian cabman, bloated, pale and absinth soaked, to drive him to the Rue Blomet, which is a street in the relatively distant Vaugirard quarter. "Peut on habiter la Rue Blomet?" ("Is it possible to inhabit the Rue Blomet?") exclaimed the ragged ruffian in an epigrammatic note of disdain which would have done honor to Beau Brummel.

But it is when the Paris cabman has once started on his "course," a warpath in the strict sense of the term, that he proves to what a limitless extent he is the enemy of mankind. His hatred of the "bourgeois," the "man in the street," in spite of and indeed because of his being a potential client, is expressed at every yard. He constantly tries to run him down, which makes strangers to Paris accuse the Paris cabman of driving badly, while in point of fact he is not driving at all, but playing with miraculous skill a game of his own which suggests cannon billiards in the hands of a world's champion.

But it is not with the public alone that he is at war. On all other cabmen whose path he crosses, on omnibus drivers, motorcar men, bicyclists, private coachmen, costermongers with barrows and (sotto voce) the police he heaps deadly insults, the least outrageous of which are "Ours!" ("Bear!") and "Fourneau!" ("Oven!"), the latter containing a subtle double meaning, intelligible only to those who have Paris "argot" or slang at their finger ends and too long to explain.

The cabman's wild career through the streets, the constant wavering and slashing of his pitiless whip, his madcap hurtlements and collisions, the frenzied gesticulations which he exchanges with his "fare," the panic stricken flight of the agonized women whose lives he has endangered, the ugly rushes which the public occasionally makes at him with a view to lynching him, the sprawlings and fallings of his maddened, hysterical, starving horse, contribute as much as anything to the spasmodic intensity, the electric blue fire diablerie, which are characteristic of the general movement of Paris.

All that can be said in mitigation of the Paris cabman's method is that "he has them in the blood." Every Parisian (and the cabman is no exception) has the soul of a dictator and the spirit of an artist. To exercise autocratic power and, failing this, to enjoy the maximum of personal freedom from all restraint, moral or social, is the goal at which he is ever aiming, openly or secretly.

Watch a Paris cabman, for instance, on a wet day or on some festival occasion, such as the New Year, when there is a big demand for his services. With what haughty disdain does he drive along the streets, deaf to every appeal, refusing every fare, rejoicing in the discomfort and inconvenience he is causing, triumphant in the thought that at last he has "the bourgeois" at his feet; that the clientele which he detests and which detests him is now a humiliated, bemuddled or bedraggled mob of supplicants waiting on his will, whom he can enrage to boiling point with his sneers and his silence or lash with his sarcasms as cruelly as he beats his horse.

Cheerfully does he sacrifice half a day's earnings to the enjoyment of this exquisite revenge, for at least he can say to his hungry wife and children when he gets home, "J'ai vecu." They may not have dined, but he has lived.

It is because the Parisian recognizes in himself a certain community of sentiment with the cabman in this attitude toward life that he tolerates him, though he does not forgive him. —Harper's Weekly.

Her Only Course.

Lady Anne Lindsay, the author of the old poem "Auld Robin Gray," was not only a delightful conversationalist, but she was a great story teller.

This gift made her not only a welcome guest abroad, but a valuable member of the home circle, for it is related in "A Group of Scottish Women" that at a dinner party which she was giving to some friends an old manservant caused some amusement by saying in a perfectly audible undertone:

"My lady, you must tell another story. The second course won't be ready for five minutes."

Notwithstanding the large quantities of beans which are produced in the United States, there were imported last year more than 2,800,000 bushels, valued at over $4,000,000.

The manufacturers of almost all brands of stock foods realize that stock does not, as a rule, get all the salt they need; hence put in a generous supply of this much relished condiment.

On loose, rolling soils alfalfa is preferable to an annual legume like crimson clover or cowpeas, because when once established the soil needs no plowing and but slight harrowing for several years.

The newly set wood lot will do best if given much the same cultivation as other tilled crops, for the law of rapid growth for trees and plant life is the same—namely, adequate circulation of the air and moisture in the soil.

During the last fiscal year the importation of wool into the United States amounted to 266,500,000 pounds, valued at $45,000,000. For the last decade the consumption of wool totaled 4,750,000,000 pounds, of which 38 per cent, valued at $213,000,000, was imported.

If the boy couldn't have both, but could choose the one or the other, he would be better equipped for life with a well endowed self respect and moral backbone than by having a parentage endowed with a fat bank account only. The possession of the former will enable him to keep his head level in many times of stress, while the latter would more likely prove a pitfall and a snare than of any positive benefit.

It is generally conceded by experienced fruit men that heavy pruning during the dormant period tends to produce heavy wood growth the season following. This type of pruning is therefore desirable for young trees where growth of wood and the building of a good frame are the chief aim. With mature bearing trees the pruning, if proper care has previously been given, should be light and should be done during July and August, which will induce fruit rather than wood production.

Where it is not desired to grow an intensive crop like strawberries in the young orchard beans or corn makes an excellent substitute where soil and climatic conditions are favorable. The tillage of these crops gives the soil that stirring which is most beneficial for the growing trees, while neither pulls largely on the soil fertility. In sections where the summer sun is very hot and a shade is needed for the trees corn would be preferable to beans, while the presence of the growing corn would lessen the damage to the young trees from grasshoppers in case they were numerous. In the first year many follow the practice of having the young tree take the place of a hill of corn, while others allow no corn to grow in any of the four adjoining hill spaces. Of course the only condition under which corn would be permissible in a young orchard would be that of repeated and frequent cultivations.

Every farmstead located in a section where winters are cold and winds blow ought to have its shelter belt of coniferous trees—spruces, pines or firs. The strip devoted to such windbreak ought to be located at a sufficient distance from the house and farm buildings to give room for feed lots, garden, etc. This strip should be put in mellow condition and given frequent cultivation after the young trees are set. It is well to select for the shelter belt varieties which have done well and made thrifty growth on other farms in the vicinity, or, if there be none of these, varieties which are recommended by the nearest reliable nurseryman. Only those trees should be bought which are guaranteed to have good roots and to grow when properly cared for. Trees that have been transplanted several times in the nursery are far preferable to those which have not been. The important thing to keep in mind in buying the trees is not how cheaply they can be bought, but, having been set, how well they will do and how thrifty and symmetrical a shelter belt they will make. Shoddy, poor rooted trees that can be got for a song are the most expensive kind of trees that a fellow can buy in the long run.

While the statistics of the world's supply of live stock are incomplete, the latest estimates are interesting. Sheep are the most numerous of the domestic animals, and their total number is placed at 580,000,000. In this industry Australia ranks first with 88,000,000 head, Argentina next with 67,000,000, and the United States third with 57,000,000 head. The world's supply of cattle is given as 430,000,000 head, and in this line British India leads with 91,000,000 head, including buffaloes and buffalo calves. The United States stands second with 70,000,000 head and Russia third with 37,000,000. In the raising of hogs the United States is far and away in the lead, being credited with 50,000,000, or more than a third of the world supply. Germany comes second with 22,000,000 head, while European Russia has about 11,000,000. The total number of horses is placed at 96,000,000 head, and the United States and European Russia rank about even with between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000 each. This country is credited with more than half of the 7,500,000 mules. Asiatic Turkey raises most asses. British India leads in goats. Asiatic Russia has most camels, while Russia leads in the number of reindeer.

DIDN'T GET IT RIGHT.

He Thought He Was a Student of Human Nature, but He Wasn't.

"On this trip in," said the car conductor about 11:30 o'clock at night, "we'll begin to pick up the beaus. They commence leaving their ladyloves about 11 o'clock. I've seen so many of them get on the car that I've got so I can tell who has said a loving goodby and who has had a scrap with her. It's in the way they pay their fare."

The car stopped, and a young man stepped aboard.

"There's one," continued the conductor. "I'll get his fare and then come back and tell you how I think he got along with his ladylove."

The fare was collected, and the conductor returned to the man with whom he had been talking.

"They had a fight," he said. "I'd almost bet she told him to go and never return. Oh, I'm a student of human nature, you bet you!"

Just then another fellow boarded the car. He sat down by the "beau."

"Why, hello, John!" the new passenger said. "How are the wife and babies?"

"All well but the youngest girl," was the reply. "I'm going down to the drug store now to get her some cough medicine."

The conductor went to the other end of the car and stayed there as much as he could.—Denver Post.

THE BEST THEY HAD.

Put It All on Exhibition to Make a Good Impression.

The Norwegians are always trying to put the best foot forward, and they do it in reference to marriage as well as in reference to other matters.

It is said that a young man once went out to seek a wife and came to a farmhouse where there was more wit than money. The only thing of which the farmer could boast was one new sleeve to his coat. This must be made the most of. "Pray take a seat," he said hospitably. "But this room is shockingly dusty," and, so saying, he went about wiping tables and benches with his new sleeve, while he kept the old one behind him.

His wife possessed one new shoe and one only, but she made the most of it by pushing the furniture in place with it and keeping the other hidden beneath her skirts. "It is very untidy here," she said. "Everything is out of place."

Then they called to the daughter to come and put things to rights. But the only new thing she possessed was a cap. So she kept putting her head in at the door and nodding and nodding.

"For my part," she said, "I can't be everywhere at once."

Thus they all tried to make the young man believe that the household was well to do.—Detroit Free Press.

He Sees Double.

His name isn't really Guzzler, but it will answer the purpose, and it is descriptive. Guzzler has a habit of looking upon the wine when it is red, frequently to the extent that he can see two bottles where only one exists. Now, Guzzler is married, and recently the stork paid a visit to his abode. Several days after the event two of his friends met, and the following conversation ensued:

"Hello, old man! Hear about the doings over at Guzzler's?"

"No. Another birthday party?"

"Yes, in a way. Guzzler's wife has presented him with twins."

"How do you know?"

"How do I know? Well, I ought to know. Guzzler told me himself."

"Well, I wouldn't place too much dependence on it. You know Guzzler generally sees double."—New York Times.

Paying the Doctor.

Some American doctors are in favor of the contract system for medical service, but they are still a long way from the Chinese scheme of stopping the doctor's salary when the patient falls ill. The writer knows a New Yorker who says that if ever he is threatened with an operation he will ask the surgeon what it is going to cost. Then he will hand him the amount at once with the assurance that the fee goes whether the operation comes off or doesn't. He reasons that the doctor will then have no possible temptation if it comes to a toss up whether to operate or take a chance. —New York Press.

A Rabelais Hoax.

Rabelais, being out of money, once tricked the police into taking him from Marseilles to Paris on a charge of treason. He made up some packages of brick dust and labeled them "Poison for the royal family." The officers took Rabelais 700 miles only to be told at the end of their journey that it was April 1 and the affair was a hoax. Of course, as Rabelais was the privileged wit of the royal family, he was forgiven.

Altogether Different.

Suitor—I have come to ask you for your daughter's hand. Father—Well, the fact is we are pretty crowded here as it is, and I— Suitor—Oh, I intend to take her away from home if I marry her! Father—Oh, well, in that case— But you did give me an awful start, my boy.—Boston Transcript.

A Lovers' Quarrel.

"Hello, Fitzy! Where did you get that black eye?"

"Oh, it was only a lovers' quarrel."

"Lovers' quarrel! Why, your girl did not give you that, did she?"

"No, it was her other lover."

A PHANTOM COACH.

It Is a Messenger of Death to an English Family.

Up the drive of a certain manor house situated in one of the southwest counties of England a phantom coach with spectral horses and driver is always heard or seen prior to the death of the head of the family or of some important member of it.

On one occasion of quite recent years a number of gentlemen and two ladies who formed a portion of the house party at Christmas were startled on their return at dusk to hear the sounds of several horses' hoofs coming up the drive. Upon turning, all the party saw an old fashioned coach with a team of four white horses advancing toward them. They drew aside, and as the coach passed them the two ladies screamed and fell almost fainting in the arms of their companions. One was the daughter of the house.

All retired to rest about 11 o'clock, some, no doubt, to think over the mysterious appearance of the coach and others to sleep. Early in the morning a telegram, which had been dispatched too late the previous night for delivery, came to hand, conveying the intelligence that the only son of the house had been drowned while wild fowling in the fens.

It was nearly forty years before that the coach had last been seen, although seventeen years previously it had been heard to drive up to the front door and away again down the avenue in the middle of the night. On this occasion the head of the family had died in his sleep the next night.

THE FATA MORGANA.

Conditions That Must Obtain to Allow of Its Production.

The fata morgana is a singular aerial phenomenon akin to the mirage. It is seen in many parts of the world, but most frequently and in greatest perfection at the strait of Messina, between Sicily and Italy. So many conditions must coincide, however, that even there it is of comparatively rare occurrence. To allow of its production the sun must be at an angle of forty-five degrees with the water, both sky and sea must be calm and the tidal current sufficiently strong to cause the water in the center to rise higher than on the edges of the strait. When these conditions are fully met the observer on the heights of Calabria, looking toward Messina, will behold a series of rapidly changing pictures, sometimes of most exquisite beauty.

Castles, colonnades, successions of beautiful arches, palaces, cities, with houses and streets and church domes, mountains, forests, grottoes, will appear and vanish, to be succeeded perhaps by fleets of ships, sometimes placidly sailing over the deep, sometimes inverted, while a halo like a rainbow surrounds every image. It is supposed that the images are due to the irregular refractive powers of the different layers of air above the sea, which magnify, repeat and distort the objects on the Sicilian shore beyond, but to the Italians these singular appearances are the castles of the Princess Morgana, and the view of them is supposed to bring good fortune to the beholder.

The Florin.

The florin, one of the most famous of modern coins, originated in Florence. Some say that it gave the name to the city, while others assert that it was first so called because it had on it a flower de luce, from the Italian fiorone, or flower, for the same reason that an English silver piece is called a crown or certain gold pieces in France indifferently a napoleon or a louis or the ten dollar gold piece in America an eagle. Two countries, Austria and Holland, have retained the florin as a unit of monetary value, taking it at a time when it was very universal in Europe, its usage having been rendered general by the financial supremacy of the little states of northern Italy and the imperfect coinage system of the other countries of the continent.

Reputations.

"The autocrat," remarked the recondite person, "made a remark the import of which escaped me until the other day. He said, 'Many a man has a reputation because of the reputation he expects to have some day.'"

"That's not a half bad remark," suggested the practical person, "but my son—just out of college, you know, and in the habit of thinking hump-backed thoughts, as it were—said something only this morning that appealed to me. 'Some men,' he said, 'get a reputation and keep it; other men get a reputation and make it keep them.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rare Self Control.

"He's a remarkable man. When he sees an unfamiliar word he looks it up in the dictionary and finds out what it means."

"Nothing so remarkable about that."

"Yes, but he doesn't try to lug it into conversation right away."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Her Compassion.

"How could he have married that termagant wife of his? I don't see what she was made of."

"That is the answer. She was made of money."—Baltimore American.

Easily Remembered.

Waiter—Beg pardon, sir, but the gentleman at this table usually remembers me. Mr. McTavish—I've nae doot o' that, ma mannie. Why, you're quite a comic.—London Telegraph.

Who has deceived thee as often as thyself?—Franklin.

TOOK THE GUARD'S PLACE.

Dr. Byles Shouldered a Gun and Kept Himself From Escaping.

One of the most famous of the old Puritan divines was Dr. Mather Byles, who was born in Boston in 1706 and who was the first pastor of the Hollis Street Congregational church, to which he ministered for more than forty years.

Dr. Byles was famous as a humorist and wit, and innumerable anecdotes are related of his clever quips and retorts. He was a zealous Tory and warmly advocated the cause of "the mother country" against the colonies. In November, 1777, he was arrested as a Tory, tried, convicted and sentenced to be confined on board a guard ship and sent to England with his family within forty days. The sentence was afterward commuted by the board of war to confinement in his own house, a guard being placed over him with instructions not to permit him to leave his residence for a moment under any circumstances.

On Thanksgiving morning, observing that the sentinel, who, like many of the colonial soldiers, was a simple rustic, had disappeared and that Dr. Byles himself was pacing up and down before his own door with a musket on his shoulder, the neighbors crossed the street to inquire the cause of this singular spectacle.

"You see," said Dr. Byles, "I begged my guard to let me go out to procure some cider with which myself and family might celebrate Thanksgiving day, but he would not permit me to stir. I argued the point with him, and he has now gone to get the cider for me on condition that I keep guard over myself during his absence."

THE ANCIENT BOW.

It Varied In Shape With the Different Nations.

Although universally used by the ancients, the form of the bow varied with different nations. The Scythian bow was in the form of the letter C, and the bow of the Tartars, descendants of the Scythians, still keeps that shape. The Greek bow was not more than four feet in length, but so stout and stiff that it required considerable strength and skill to use it. It is said that the first Greek bows were made from the horns of a species of goat, the bases being united by means of a metallic band. Afterward other material was used in their manufacture, but they still retained their original shape. These bows were too short to be of much use, and only a small portion of the troops were armed with them.

The Romans brought the bow to Britain, where it at once obtained favor and during the middle ages was extensively used, forming an important weapon of the armies of that period. The English archers were said to be the finest in the world, and their skill decided the battles of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt. The bows used were of two kinds—the longbow and the arbalest, or crossbow. The arbalest was made of steel or horn and was of such strength and stiffness that it was necessary to use some mechanical appliance to bend it and adjust the string. The arbalesters carried quivers with fifty arrows and were placed in the van of the battle.—St. James' Gazette.

Why She Couldn't Accept.

Telephone operators who plug wrong numbers or get the wires crossed sometimes are responsible for very embarrassing situations, as was exemplified by a broker in this city the other morning. The broker called up his home number and said to the person on the other end of the wire:

"Hello, dear. Is that you?"

"Yes," replied a sweet toned voice.

"Well, I've been thinking about you all morning. I want you to come downtown and meet me for lunch, and we'll go to a show this afternoon."

"Well, that would be very nice," replied the person on the other end, "and I should dearly love to do so, but my husband is home, and I'm afraid he'd object. Don't you think you've got the wrong number?"—Philadelphia Times.

Weight of Atmosphere.

Atmosphere is the name applied to the gaseous envelope that surrounds the globe. It consists of a mechanical union of nitrogen and oxygen in the ratio of four to one, together with a relatively small amount of carbonic acid gas and a little water vapor. Its thickness is about fifty miles, although it probably extends in an attenuated form as far as 500 miles. This is inferred from the observation of luminous meteors. It exerts a pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch at the earth's surface and weighs over eleven and a half trillions of pounds. Each adult inhales one gallon of air per minute and consumes thirty-ounces of oxygen daily. An ordinary gas jet consumes as much oxygen as five persons.

The Scoffer.

"Here," solemnly said the Bostonian, "General Warren fell."

"So?" replied the gentleman from Chicago, running a speculative eye up and down the perpendicular of Bunker Hill monument. "Must have been a swell subject for a moving picture act."—Puck.

As Good as Refused.

"And she refused you?"

"Practically. She said she would marry me as soon as I settled down and went to work at something worth while."—Chicago Record-Herald.

To know what one likes is the beginning of wisdom and of old age.—Stevenson.

Bodies Recovered.

The body of Frank Gordon, who with his father was drowned in Red lake last November, was recovered on the north shore of Upper Red lake, midway between Moose creek and Deer river, two small streams that flow into Red lake from the swampy lands north of the lake last week.

The body of Joseph Gordon, father of Frank Gordon, was recovered the week before and was buried in the Eland cemetery. The body of young Gordon was in a bad state of decomposition, having been tossed about in the waters of Red lake since last November. The body of the young man was also buried in the Eland cemetery.

Joseph Gordon and his son Frank, who owned claims near Eland postoffice, were at Shotley one day last November and determined to return home by going direct on the waters of Red lake from Shotely to the Tamarac river. They got some distance from shore in safety, but the boat was finally capsized and both men were drowned. All efforts to recover the bodies were fruitless and it was only when the ice in Red lake was thawed out this spring and the wind tossed the waves hither and thither that the bodies were thrown upon the north shore of Red lake.

The elder Gordon is survived by his wife, three daughters and a son, the eldest of whom is aged 20 years and the youngest 10.

Mr. Fant Dead.

Word was received in the city last week to the effect that H. Fant died in Minneapolis recently. Mr. Fant was one of the pioneer business men of Thief River Falls and had a reasonable amount of success in the last few years of his life. For years he conducted a confectionery store here and built the telephone exchange. After disposing of these properties here a few years ago, he parted with his wife and went to Minneapolis where he married another woman. The first Mrs Fant died about a year ago in Grand Forks.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

SOME OHIO SPRAYING RESULTS.

When the average orchard owner who has not been spraying his trees is broached on the question of spraying, quite naturally one of the first points he raises is, "Does it pay?" With a view to giving an emphatic affirmative answer to this question a number of the state experiment stations have during the past three or four years conducted most instructive co-operative spraying experiments, in which the matter seems to have been given very conclusive demonstration. Of the above type of experiments were those conducted by the Ohio station in 1907. Twelve acres of an orchard near Amherst were selected for the experiment, the trees being twenty feet in height and having about an equal spread of top. A few trees were left unsprayed for purposes of comparison. At harvest time 2,500 bushels of perfect apples were gathered, a conservative estimate of the gain due to spraying being $1,400, or over $100 per acre, and this after the cost of spraying, amounting to $125, had been subtracted. Set, as this orchard was, in the midst of many other unsprayed orchards, the demonstration was very convincing, and as a result of the showing made many orchardists of the state were convinced of the practical value of spraying and took the work up the following year. The average of picked sound fruit at harvest time on all the trees sprayed was 90 per cent, while the same average for the unsprayed trees was less than 58 per cent. The main fact proved in connection with this work is that if one has an orchard which is worth anything at all he cannot afford to leave it unsprayed, as so doing will reduce both the quantity and quality of his fruit below the point where he can successfully compete with the growers of clean fruit. On the other hand, if the orchard is too far gone to justify the expense of spraying, it were better cut out and converted into stove wood, as it is merely an incumbrance on the ground.

HOW IT WAS GROWN.

When one reads of an exceptional yield of grain or corn an interest very naturally attaches to the methods followed in producing it. For this reason those who have read the previous reference in these notes to the authenticated yield of 154 bushels of corn secured from a single acre by John Sundberg will be interested in knowing how it was grown. The ground on which this fine yield was produced was second bottom Missouri valley soil which had been in clover pasture some five years preceding. It was plowed in the fall, and in the spring it was given the usual thorough preparation for corn, including disking and harrowing. An acre and a half were chosen in the richest part of the field, one acre being laid out for the actual test. The grower figured out in advance just how many plants he would have to have to produce 150 bushels at harvest. To this were added a sufficient number of kernels to make up for those that for one cause or another would fail to produce ears. He planted the corn early in May, using a drill and double planting, so that the rows were twenty-one inches apart, the kernels being dropped eighteen inches apart in the row. The cultivating was done with a single horse and a five tooth cultivator, this being given at frequent intervals so as to keep the soil loose and moist. At husking time an actual count showed 11,880 stalks with ears averaging in weight 14.4 ounces. The land was remeasured and the corn weighed in the presence of a justice of the peace. The variety planted was Reid's Yellow Dent. It is interesting to note in connection with this yield that it was just about six times the average yield per acre for corn the country over. It is worth remembering, too, that, in addition to using the finest pure bred seed obtainable, the corn was grown on a very rich piece of bottom land and was given ideal cultivation. When corn growers will give more heed to the three factors here mentioned in the growing of their corn the yield of this great cereal will be materially increased.

DOES CLIMATE CHANGE?

An inspection of meteorological records made in semiarid sections during the past fifty years seems to give little encouragement to the theory that the breaking up of the soil in these sections and the growing thereon of tilled crops tend to increase the actual amount of rainfall from year to year. The most that can be fairly said seems to be that tillage of the soil in sections of short rainfall makes possible a maximum utility of the moisture that does fall, while there is little question that mellow soil and growing crops serve to reduce somewhat the withering effect of hot south winds in that they tend to lessen rather than increase their capacity to absorb moisture.

The Missouri legislator who left political life and embarked in the skunk business as a more congenial and savory occupation quite likely played the role of reformer for a bunch of unfeeling and unresponsive constituents.

The feeder is certainly not living up to his opportunities in a progressive age who doggedly stuffs high priced feed into a scrub steer which will fetch $4 when he could just as well convert the same feed into grade or high grade beeves that would fetch from $8 to $9 per hundredweight.

A well known agricultural paper in a recent issue recommended, unquestionably as the result of an error or oversight on the part of the "devil" or managing editor, the sowing of from 100 to 200 pounds of clover seed per acre. In view of the fact that ten pounds would be a superabundance of seed, the error will be detected at sight.

There may be readers of these notes who would like information relative to the several irrigation projects which are being carried to completion under the supervision of the national government or about public lands anywhere which are still subject to homestead entry. Inquiries addressed to the office of public lands, Washington, D. C., stating what is wanted, will secure the information which is sought.

The fellow who has been duping folks in some of the eastern states through the sale of a dope which he claims will render poultry immune from the worst ailments that afflict them for the rest of their lives is first cousin to that other chap who operated in about the same territory a year or so ago with a spray mixture the application of which he said would protect trees from their several insect and fungous pests for a term of several years.

That the sheep business bids fair to be a paying one for some time to come is indicated in figures which have recently been published showing that since 1873 there has been a decrease in the world's flocks of sheep of 93,000,000 head, or more than 3,000,000 head a year. The decrease seems to be in quite a measure due to movements of population which have discouraged the keeping of the large flocks of the past, a tendency which means that the keeping of a limited number on the small farm would be attended with increased profit.

At Rothamsted, England, is located a famous government experiment station where exhaustive experiments in soil fertility and crop production have been conducted during the past fifty years. On one field to which no manure and no plant food has been given the average yield of wheat per acre during this interval has been 12.9 bushels. Another field which has been heavily fertilized with barnyard manure has given an average of 35.5 bushels for the same period. A third field which has been re-enforced with commercial fertilizers has produced 37.1 bushels of wheat per acre in the same period. These English experiments should have a suggestion or two for some American farmers who are getting perilously near the twelve bushel yield as a result of continuous cropping to wheat.

The application of lime to land does not add to its store of fertilizing elements, but merely serves to correct an acid condition of soil, thereby enabling plant life to utilize the elements already stored there. Some experiments lately conducted by the New Jersey station showed that on sandy soils ground unburned limestone gave better results than burned and slaked lime. In similar experiments conducted by the Florida experiment station the application of ground unburned limestone doubled the yield of beggarweed, a legume which is classed as the clover of the state. An interesting fact which was developed in connection with this test was that the liming of the soil resulted also in a large increase in the number and size of nitrogen nodules, upon which the value of the legumes as soil enrichers depends. This service rendered by lime is one that those who are desirous of getting a start in alfalfa and some other legumes should keep in mind.

Among the several elements of the soil that make the growth of plant life possible is humus, or vegetable matter in various stages of decomposition, consisting of the roots, stalks and leaves of the plants which have grown thereon in a wild state or the straw, litter and manures which have been mechanically distributed. Not only does such decaying vegetable matter contain important chemical fertilizing elements, but it gives the soil that friability and looseness so essential to an easy manipulation of it with plow and cultivator and so favorable to a ready circulation of the soil air and moisture, indispensable factors in a rapid growth of plant life. In view of these facts the tiller of the soil should keep constantly in mind both the wisdom and necessity of maintaining this supply of humus in the soil and increasing it when occasion requires. A proper understanding of the matter should put a stop to the burning of stubble and straw, should mean the turning down now and then of growths of green manures and the raking and scattering of the largest possible quantities of stable manure. It is under a system of grain farming that the supply of humus in the soil is most rapidly depleted, and on this account the system is a harmful one and should be discouraged in all sections where stock raising and dairying can take its place.

The most wholesome influence that can come into the life of any person is a condition in which he is called upon to work for another. There is at once satisfaction and zest in such service.

Milk, sweet or sour, is a most valuable adjunct in the ration for the flock of hens and should be provided for them whenever possible. It furnishes them food elements in a form which they relish and which is at the same time easily digested and assimilated.

There is surely an African in the wood pile when the growers of potatoes get but 35 cents per bushel for their tubers f. o. b. in October and the consumer has to pay from $1.25 to $1.40 per bushel for the same article when they are delivered at his back door three months later by the local groceryman.

For all practical purposes—and this holds whether the animal be of the roadster or draft type—a horse is valuable in just the proportion that the feet and legs on which he stands are strong and sound. For this reason, in the judging of the merits of sire and dam and the worth of their get, this important point can be given hardly too much attention.

All too many farmers in the corn belt have yet to learn the several advantages coming from adopting a type of soil tillage which makes possible the growing of 1,000 bushels of corn on fifteen acres instead of sprawling it over forty or fifty acres. Such an agricultural reform would mean not only a vastly greater economy in the use and working of land and care of the crops, but a corresponding increase in satisfaction on the part of the proprietor.

One of the largest irrigation projects in the world has been under construction during the past year and a half on the Murrumbidgee river, in New South Wales. The dam, which is located at Barren Jack, will cost when completed $7,500,000 and will store water enough to irrigate and make available for settlement 1,358,000 acres of land. The cost of this dam is almost twice that of the celebrated Salt river dam, near Phoenix, Ariz., the largest enterprise of its kind in the United States.

Considering the difficulty which is often experienced in carrying the canna through so long a dormant period without serious impairment of vitality, it may be well to put the roots in soil in small pots or in a box large enough to accommodate several roots and place them in a rather cool, light room where the bulbs will sprout, but where their development will be slow. Later, as the time approaches when they may be transferred to the open ground, with the danger of frost past, they may be given warmer quarters.

A few crystals of potassium permanganate placed in the drinking water for the poultry make it an excellent disinfectant, which cleanses the mouth and throat and will kill germs of roup that may be present. If the nasal passages are badly affected relief will come from forcing into the nostrils a few drops of a 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid and a 5 per cent solution of copper sulphate mixed by means of a fine pointed oil can or atomizer. Besides this treatment, the sick fowls should be kept by themselves in a dry and well ventilated place.

There is no system or method of selecting public servants that will of itself insure the election of clean and honest men to office unless it is backed by voters who are alert, honest and actively interested in the problems of popular government. The primary election system, admittedly the best method of selecting officers yet tried, will not insure the election of the right men to office any more than a reaper will harvest grain without horses to pull it. Along this line the farmer, the tradesman and the professional man have an equal responsibility in the attainment of good government.

The black color of the surface soils found in many sections is due to the presence of humus, the decaying and decayed vegetable matter, the accumulation of many years. White soils are usually of a sandy character, red soil of decomposed granite or clay, while the gray soils often noticed in western states are composed of volcanic ash. While black soils are usually fat and rich in humus, in no sense do they surpass the red or gray soils when it comes to other fertilizing elements. True, they often lack nitrogen, but this deficiency is made good by the application of manures and the growing of legumes.

A query that naturally comes to one who feels an interest in the soil beneath his feet is that having to do with its origin. Subsequent to the epoch where the stuff of which the old earth was made "took form and substance" the earth masses were of rocky formation, but as a result of processes partly chemical and partly physical, extending through millions of years and including the work of heat and frost, of rain and snow, of flood and glacier, they were disintegrated and reduced to a fineness which made possible the nourishment of plant life. Before this disintegration of rock masses was far advanced vegetation appeared, helping in the further work of disintegration and adding to the rock soil the other element necessary in giving us the soil of the agriculturist—humus. Many of these processes are still in operation, and soil making in a very true sense goes on under our very feet.

The raising of more bushels of grain and tons of hay to the acre from a given piece of land serves only to aggravate the matter of an exhaustion of soil fertility unless along with the harvesting of the larger yields there goes the adoption of such methods of culture as will enable the soil to maintain its supply of fertilizing elements notwithstanding the heavier draft placed upon it. This is a point not often referred to and yet one that may well be kept in view.

Ohio and Mississippi valley farms are slowly but surely being threatened with the same fate which has overtaken all too many eastern farms and southern plantations through a long continued and ruinous system of cropping which has had no thought for a maintenance or restoration of soil fertility. The only course that can prevent such a calamity from being fully realized in the sections mentioned is the adoption of rational methods in the handling of the farm, crop rotation, dairying and stock raising and in general ceasing to employ thirty dollar methods on land that is worth from $80 to $160 per acre.

In Connecticut and some other new England states the laws which have been in force for some years past having in view the protection of deer have resulted in such an increase in their numbers that the animals have become a positive source of injury to gardeners and orchardists. One case reported lately in an eastern agricultural journal tells of the destruction of 500 young apple trees by them, the trees being virtually stripped of all their smaller branches. An agitation is already afoot looking to a repeal or such modification of the law as will result in reducing the number of the deer and keeping them in their legitimate haunts, the untilled meadows and timberlands.

A recourse at hand for those who occupy positions which they feel are economically oppressive as well as of uncertain tenure is the taking of the steps necessary to secure a small tract of fertile land. This cannot be done in a moment, but once it is taken as an object for achievement and worthy of one's best efforts a long step toward the desired goal is made. A home on the land and a living exacted from the few acres adjoining mean hard work, but they carry with them a guarantee of health, contentment and economic self respect. Were this movement of population from the cities to the soil to become at all general it would effect a cure of the worst ills, social, economic and moral, that folks suffer from today, while it would mean better wages and more considerate treatment for those who remained in industrial pursuits.

The decadence of many a small town of a thousand inhabitants or less may be the result of seemingly inevitable economic conditions, agricultural and industrial, but it is worth while citing the fact that this lapse seems coincident with the amassing of enormous fortunes by big mail order houses in the large cities which bear none of the burden of taxation imposed in the small towns notwithstanding the fact that they are sapping their very life-blood. Some day farm dwellers will wake up to the fact that their lands have shrunk in value, or at least fails to advance to the point that they otherwise would, as a result of this trading away from home. There can be no other result. The only reason why land is worth more near a town of 5,000, 10,000 or 20,000 people is not because it is more fertile or productive but simply owing to the fact that it lies adjacent to a good town. A grain elevator, stockyards and postoffice are necessary adjuncts to every town, but they do not in themselves serve as flaming advertisements suited to attract men of energy or business enterprises of real value.

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1910 NUMBER 1

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

BEING URGED TO RUN

Senator A. L. Hanson Will Announce His Intentions in the Course of a Week or Two.

His Friends and Supporters Believe He Will Consent to Become a Candidate.

Senator A. L. Hanson, of Ada, spent Saturday in the city, being enroute home from a trip to Mahnomen where he had been attending to some business matters.

Senator Hanson is being strongly urged by the people from all parts of this senatorial district to again become a candidate, and states that he will make a definite statement in the course of a week or so. That he will at that time annouce that he will become a candidate is greatly hoped by all who have followed his course during the past two sessions of the legislature. Mr. Hanson is thoroughly honest and at all times supported legislation that was for the best interests of the people as a whole. The only criticism that has been made of his legislature career is that he could not accomplish as much for his district as he might have, simply because he refused to become a member of the legislature combine and take in the "log rolling." As an individual, however, Mr. Hanson was one of the strongest forces in the senate. He was to be found on duty every day and when he gave his support to a measure, the other members were quite sure it was right.

Apposed to Mr. Hanson will be Al H. Jester, of Bemidji, and Former Secretary of State Albert Berg, of Spooner. Judging from reports coming from Beltrami county, Mr. Berg will be the strongest candidate in that country. He will have the almost solid support of the northern part of the county and will run well in Bemidji and Southern Beltrami county where there is much outspoken opposition to Jester. Outside of Beltrami county neither Mr. Berg nor Mr. Jester has much of an acquaintance, but it looks very much as if the opposition to Senator Hanson in Red Lake, Norman, Mahnomen counties would unite upon Jester, and the real fight will be between Jester and Hanson. Albert L. Thompson, of Mahnomen, who was thinking seriously of becoming a candidate, will probably not be in the race for state senator, but will quite likely become a candidate for the house. Mr. Thompson is an able man and will make a good man for the legislature.

More County Exibits.

Several changes which will prove interesting to the various counties contemplating making an exibit at the State Fair this year, were made by the board of managers at a meeting held on the fair grounds on the 18th of March.

Special premiums offered for county exhibits will be increased to ten moneys, including diplomas, ribbons, etc., instead of five as heretofore. Each section to get ten prizes instead of five with the following division: $75, $60, $50, $45 $40, $35, $30, $25, $10 and $5.

Some change will be made in the three districts of the state, the special committee on the corn exibit being given authority to re-district the state.

It was also decided to add $500 in prizes to be pro-rated in the event of there being over fifteen and under twenty county exhibits, and $1,000 if over twenty exhibits.

Let the Contract.

The contract for completing the basement of the auditorium was awarded last week to F. S. Doege by the city council. As Mr. Doege is one of the best workmen in this section of the state, the job is sure to be done in excellent shape.

GOING AFTER THE OFFICE

Thief River Falls to Endeavor to Secure the Removal of the Land Office.

This City is so Situated that All the Settlers Desire the Removal.

Thief River Falls is to make a determined effort to secure the removal of the United States Land Office from Crookston to this city. Inquiry made in different sections of this land office district are to the effect that it is the unanimous desire of all interested parties that the land office be removed to Thief River Falls. Not only is Thief River Falls situated nearest the government land, but the railroad accomodations here are such that it is far more convenient for those having land office business to transact to reach this city. Those living at points north of here on the Great Northern could come to this city on the evening Great Northern train and leave again the next morning, whereas by going to Crookston they are compelled to remain over for two nights, as the train does not reach Crookston until after the land office closes for the night and it leaves in the morning before the land office is opened. It is not necessary to secure any act of congress to secure the removal of the land office. The law governing the matter is as follows:

Sec. 2251, Vol. 6, Federal Statutes Annodated.

The President is authorized to change the location of the land-offices in the several land districts established by law, and to locate the same from time to time at such point in the district as he deems expedient.

MAY CLOSE THIEF RIVER

Special Agent Johnson So Intimates in a Letter to H. H. Finrow, of Plummer.

Not Going to Allow Bootleggers to Sell Liquor Here or Elsewhere.

In reply to a letter to H. H. Finrow, president of the village council at Plummer, who had written to Special Agent Johnson asking that the saloons be allowed to continue business at Plummer, the latter gentleman says no in a very determined manner, and intimates that the saloons of Thief River Falls will be closed if they sell liquor to bootleggers. Mr. Johnson's letter to Mr. Finrow is as follows:

"Mr. H. H. Finrow,
Plummer, Minnesota.

Sir: Reference is hereby made to your letter dated April 13th, 1910, in which you request that the saloons be permitted to continue in Plummer in violation of the provisions of the Treaty with the Chippewa Indians of 1863.

The facts in this matter so far as Plummer is concerned are these:

After we issued the first order closing the Mahnomen country the bootleggers and Indians began going up to Plummer on the evening train and returning on the midnight train with grips full of liquor which they secured in your two saloons. Both of those saloons catered to this illegal trade.

I took the pains at the time to send one of my officers to follow a bunch of Indians to Plummer on one of these trips. He caught them in the act of buying liquor in your saloons. Instead of making arrests the officer warned both of these saloon keepers. For a short time things were a little better but I soon began getting complaints from your citizens that this traffic with Indians and bootleggers was being resumed. I sent officers to Plummer to investigate. The complaints were well founded. Half a dozen sales were made in both of your saloons to Indians in the presence of my men.

Under these circumstances there is nothing left for me to do except to enforce the provisions of the treaty, which excludes spiritious liquors.

If, as you fear, an attempt is made to sell liquor just north of the south boundry of town 152, (Thief River Falls), I shall issue another order extending the boundry line of the closed district.

It might as well be understood now that these boundry lines will be extended from time to time as may be necessary. It is for the liquor dealers themselves to determine how far they will compell me to go in this respect.

Very respectfully,
William E. Johnson,
Chief Special Officer.

Can't Buy Clothes in Canada.

The treasury department, at Washington, has made new regulations covering the allowance for those who cross the border. It is designed to stop the practice of going across the line to purchase clothing, and duty will hereafter have to be paid on everything in your possession above the value of $10.

Another New Ditch.

At a meeting of the board of county commissioners of Marshall county held last week at Warren, a ditch was established that will drain lands in the town of Excel and Adger on the east side of the Thief River. While the ditch is only a small one, it will be of great benefit to many farmers.

Wants to See Land Office Here.

R. D. V. Carr, the Middle River editor, was in the city last week attending to some business matters. Mr. Carr says he hopes the people of Thief River Falls will make a determined effort to secure the removal of the Crookston land office to this city. He states that the people of Middle River and vicinity would be unanimously in favor of the the move.

School of Traction Engineering.

Would you like to learn to run a steam engine or a gasoline engine in a practical way? If so, the opportunity is given in a course of one month's duration at the School of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, beginning May 24th. Students are put on engines of different makes and are taught how to run them. Besides this practical instruction they are taught and actually preform, the operation of valve setting, tube beading, babbitting, belt lacing, rope splicing, etc. Students who are faithful in their work may obtain a license of such grade as their experience and skill warrant. No entrance examinations are held. Students live in the school dormitories, where the cost of living is very low.

A large number of the members of the Eastern Star Lodge from Warren were in the city last evening visiting the local lodge. The affair was a most enjoyable one.

H. E. Mussey states that he never saw the small grain crop come up so nice as it has this year. Much of the land west of town was seeded before the snow of last week and the fields are now all green.

Howard L. Dudley, formerly associated with S. W. Bagely in the publication of the Press, but now located at Fargo where he is in the real estate business, is in the city visiting old friends and attending to some business matters.

Base Ball Sunday.

The first base ball game of the season will be at the fair grounds Sunday. The club from Red Lake Falls will be here and try conclusions with the local team. C. A. Leigh, who is to be the pitcher for the local team, arrived in the city Tuesday from Superior, Wis., and will remain until the end of the season. Henry Roy, of Mahnomen, will be the catcher. These two will be the only hired players in the team this year.

CONTRACT NOW LET

Lars Pearson, of Minneapolis, Will Erect New High School Building.

The Contract for Doing the Plumbing and Heating Not Yet Awarded.

Bids for the construction of the new high school were opened by the board last Saturday afternoon. There were twelve bids submitted for the general contract, and the figures were exceedingly close. Owing to the absence from the city of Dr. Penney, clerk of the school district, we are unable to secure a full list of the bids, but the general contract was awarded to Lars Pearson, of Minneapolis, his bid being $35,750, the lowest one received. Mr. Pearson will at once commence work. He has let the contract for digging the basement to A. C. Hanson of this city.

The contract for the plumbing and heating has not been let as yet and there is talk of the board rejecting the bids for the heating plant and asking for new bids, as there will probably be different plans and specifications. Lee and McMillan had the lowest bids for doing this work.

It is now evident that the new school will cost in the neighborhood of about $10,000 more than the school board had anticipated and it is quite likely that the school board will ask the voters to vote additional bonds when the annual election is held this summer.

THREE DIE IN FLAMES

Woman and Two Daughters Perish In Burning Depot at Egeland N. D.

Husband Makes Futile Efforts to Save His Wife and the Two Children.

Mrs. G. A. Kruger and her daughters, Lucille, 7 years old, and Beatrice, aged 5 years, were victims of a Sunday morning fire at the Soo depot at Egeland, west of here on the Wheatline. Awakening at the smell of smoke and crackling of flames, Mr. Kruger aroused his wife and children, taking them into a room from which escape was to be made by a window. Leaving them for a moment to open the window, Kruger was suddenly cut off from them by flames which forced him to leap from the window.

Guided by the screams of his wife and children, imprisoned behind the wall of flames, Kruger made several attempts to gain entrance to the burning building but each time was forced back by the flames.

The bodies, charred beyond any semblance of human beings, were found later. Kruger has lived at Egeland four years and intended removing to Montana this spring.

Funeral services for the victims were held Monday morning in the Presbyterian church, and the bodies were shipped to Cyrus, Minn., Mrs. Kruger's former home, where interment will take place.

BIG MEETING WAS HELD

A Boosters Meeting Held Monday Evening in the New Auditorium.

Large Crowds Present and Interesting Subjects Were Discussed by Speakers.

The boosters meeting held Monday evening in the new auditorium was very largely attended and there was much enthusiasm. After a selection by the band, Mayor Hamre in a short address introduced the principal speaker of the evening, Hon. D. M. Neill, of Red Wing, president of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs. Mr. Neill made a strong address and urged upon the people the necessity of organization and co-operation. He did not believe that it was a commercial club's duty to spend all of its energies in endeavoring to secure new manufacturing industries but rather to assist those that it already had and help make them strong institutions. He believed that the best opportunity for a town like Thief River Falls was to spend its energies in endeavoring to assist the farming population of this vicinity so that there would be a higher state of cultivation and more land cultivated.

Mr. Neill was followed by Curtis L. Masler who spoke upon the necessity of organization of a commercial club in a very interesting manner. D. P. O'Neill, of this city, also made a few remarks.

Notice.

After the first of May the physicians of Thief River Falls have agreed to charge the prices for day and night calls as are charged in surrounding cities of this size, namely, day calls outside of office, $1.50; night calls $2.00.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Commercial Club Reorganized at Meeting Held at Antlers Club Tuesday Evening.

Much Sentiment to Have Antlers Club and Commercial Club Unite.

At a meeting of business men held in the Antlers Club rooms Tuesday evening, steps were taken to reorganize the Commercial Club. New officers for the club were elected as follows:

President—C. L. Hanson.

Vice President—Math Barzen.

Treasurer—Dr. Holber.

Secretary—H. N. Peterson.

President Hanson was given authority to appoint a committee to solicit members or make other arrangements.

There is a strong sentiment in the city to have both the Commercial Club and the Antlers Club united into one body under a new charter. The Antlers Club, while wholly a social organization, has a strong membership among the younger element of the city, and they could hardly be induced to become members of a purely commercial body. If the two organizations could be united, much good would be accomplished.

Lights Out.

An irascible sergeant going his nightly round of the barracks in order to make sure that all lights had been extinguished noticed that a window was illuminated. He roused the occupants of the room.

"Put out that light," he ordered, "and be quick about it."

"But it's moonlight!" explained a private.

"I don't care what it is!" roared the sergeant. "Put it out!"—London Express.

A Genius.

Little Willie—Say, pa, what is a genius?

Pa—A genius, my son, is a person whom nature lets in on the ground floor, but whom circumstances force to live in an attic.—Chicago News.

A Strong Hint.

Customer—You don't seem very quick at figures, my boy. Newsboy—I'm out o' practice. Ye see, most o' de gents says, "Keep de change."—Harper's Weekly.

The heart is no island cut off from other lands, but a continent that joins them.—Bacon.

WHO WILL BE APPOINTED

Governor Has Not as Yet Named a Successor to Judge of Probate Swanson.

Ira C. Richardson, of This City, Appears to Have the Strongest Backing.

Up to the time of going to press, Gov. Eberhart, who has the appointing of the successor to Judge of Probate Swanson, had made no announcement. There are a number of candidates. Red Lake Falls, as usual, is at the front with four, M. O. Sortedahl, E. G. Buse, Joe Perrault and F. L. Farley, all of Red Lake Falls, made application and have more or less backing. Upon the face of the matter, Mr. Farley made the best proposition. He agreed, it is said, to employ the widow of the late S. A. Swanson, who is left almost destitute, as a clerk in the office and pay her $50 per month. This would be a very generous act, but there is another rumor in circulation to the effect that the money would not stay long in her hands, but would find its way into John Duffy's bank and there be used to pay off an obligation that Mr. Swanson had contracted before his death. It is said that Mr. Swanson has assigned his salary up to and including September, 1910, to the Red Lake Falls banker, and now that he is dead there is no way of collecting it. Anyway Mr. Duffy was an ardent supporter of Mr. Farley and the story sounds plausible.

Ira C. Richardson, of this city, has the strongest backing, and it is quite probable he will secure the appointment. Chairman D. P. O'Neill and Secretary C. L. Hanson, of the Republican county committee, are backing Mr. Richardson as well as a number of others from this city. Other candidates are said to be after the job, but they are making more or less of a still hunt for the office.

THE FINAL TEST.

Where the Candidate For the Army Put His Foot In It.

Bill was one of those fellows who always try to do things right. He lost his position recently and, being unable to secure another, decided to join the regular army. He applied at Uncle Sam's recruiting station. Now, Bill was a good looking specimen of manhood, and the army officer began his examination with pleasure.

Heart, lungs, hearing, sight and nerves were found in the best of condition. But one test remained before he could become a regular.

"Take off your shoes," commanded the officer.

Bill did so.

"Now wet your feet in that bucket," he was further instructed.

Bill did as he was told.

"Now walk across the room," said the army man.

Bill knew from the actions of the army officer that he had made a good mark and wanted to increase his average. He started across the floor, bringing every inch of his weight to bear at every step. He looked back. Yes, he was doing fine. He could plainly see the whole imprint of his feet each step he had taken. He was happy, and the task was finished.

"Don't want you. You're flatfooted," said the army man.

"What do you think of that?" reflected Bill as he made his way to the street.—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

THE ROYAL HOAX.

And the Missing Sword of the Duke of Cumberland.

What became of the Duke of Cumberland's sword, which was lost or stolen at the Haymarket theater Jan. 16, 1749?

It was on the night of the great "Bottle Hoax." According to advertisement, a man was to "play on a common walking cane the music of every instrument now used to perfection, get into a quart bottle without equivocation and while there sing several songs," besides doing other things only a little less marvelous—more marvelous that the theater should have been packed with spectators, including many of the nobility and the Duke of Cumberland of Culloden fame.

The conjurer did not appear, but one of the theater officials did and informed the house that all money would be returned at the doors. "Cumberland was the first that flew in a rage," a contemporary account tells us, "and called to pull down the house. He drew his sword and was in such a rage that somebody slipped in behind him and pulled the sword out of his hand, which was as much as to say, 'Fools should not have chopping sticks.'" This sword of his has never been heard of nor the person who took it. Thirty guineas of reward are offered for it."—London Chronicle.

F. G. Tornerhjelm, a Stockholm lawyer, died the other day, aged eighty-two years. Mr. Tornerhjelm became well known a great many years ago through the fact that he was the one who discovered Kristina Nilsson, the great songstress, picking her up when she was a mere tot and singing for pin money at the country fairs. He took charge of little Stina and spent 7,000 crowns to give her a musical education and when he had spent all of his own money for her he induced others to help her. It is needless to state that Kristina Nilsson never forgot her friend and benefactor and he was never in want after she had made her great success.

"Berliner Liedertafel" is the name of a German male chorus which will make a concert tour in Sweden during the month of May. It is 150 strong and is reported to be one of the finest male choruses of Germany. The chorus will remain in Stockholm three days and will give two concerts. A little later the Swedish-American male chorus, consisting of fifty-four trained voices from all over the East and Northwest in the United States, will arrive. The latter chorus will give concerts in not less than thirty Swedish cities.

QUEEN VICTORIA OF SWEDEN.

Queen Victoria arrived at Naples from Rome March 15, whence she boarded the protected cruiser Oscar II. for Capri, where a large number of people were at the landing to meet her. Her majesty was the recipient of hundreds of bouquets of beautiful flowers. She was also enthusiastically received at Anacapri and Casa Caprille. The weather was balmy and springlike and the queen seemed to be in the very brightest of spirits.

The so called Norwegian "ministers' hotel," which was purchased by a stock company in Stockholm from the Norwegian government some time ago, will be razed and a new building erected, which, when finished, will cost in the neighborhood of 550,000 crowns. The building will be used for residence purposes and will be rented to members of the diplomatic corps and foreign legations. It will be one of the most pretentious residence apartment buildings in the city.

Former United States Minister Thomas has purchased a villa from the artist, Axel Sjoberg. The place is located at Lungvik's bay, in Namdo parish. There are excellent fishing grounds there and Mr. Thomas has a reputation for being a most ardent fisherman.

King Gustaf is still at Cape Martin and since his arrival there has been spending most of his time in the open air. He is very much improved in health and one can tell from the way in which he enjoys the company of his friends that he is in the very best of spirits.

Fire broke out in the hotel occupied by the American minister and his family at Blasieholmen the other day. The fire had made great headway when the fire department arrived, but, after half an hour's work it was under control.

Anders Zorn, the eminent portrait painter, who was selected as juryman at the international art exhibition, which will be held in Pittsburg this spring, will, on the advice of his physicians, abandon his journey to America.

The new daily newspaper which is to be issued in Christiania after June 1 by Editor Thommessen will be known as "The Signs of the Times." Editor Thommessen, who for a great many years has been connected with the "Verdens Gang," recently had a disagreement with the publishers of the last mentioned paper and the result is that a new paper will be started. Thommessen is reported to have a good deal of backing and a strong competition between the old and the new papers is looked for.

The Norwegian skaters, who returned last month from Stockholm after capturing the Swedish-Norwegian trophy, were received by a crowd of at least 2,000 persons at the Central depot. Oscar Mathiesen was carried in a golden chair, but succeeded in making his escape and the crowd was in consequence not a little disgusted. At any rate the large crowd was elated over their victory in the Stockholm contests.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen for a long time has been at work on a historical-geographical work entitled "The North in Taagehelmen." This book, which will soon be published, deals with the northernmost sections of the world since the Sixteenth century. It is understood that Nansen has spent years in preparing the manuscript for this work and a great deal of interest is being evinced from many parts of Scandinavia.

There is apparently no truth in the report that Ove Gude is to be retired as Norway's minister to the United States and that his place is to be filled by Consul Gade of Chicago. Minister Gude is very popular in Washington and has made a good representative for Norway and it is very apparent that the Norwegian government does not contemplate any change there at present.

There are 199,200 registered country estates in Norway, which in the aggregate are valued at 993,000,000 crowns. Hay, barley and potatoes yielded in 1908 an income of 271,000,000 crowns. This is not a bad showing for a country with barren hills and mountains.

A company has been organized in Rostock which proposes to establish airship traffic between Warnemunde and Marienlyst. The dirigible balloon in which the trips will be made will have 400 horsepower and a crew of ten men. The balloon will have room for twenty-five passengers. Many people have already signified their willingness to risk the trip between the aforementioned points and if the company can prove through them to the general public that there is no danger it can commence charging at least the regular passenger rates. This is an interesting question, however, which has apparently not been decided and many people would like to know what the "air line" rates are going to be.

During his recent visit here Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States, was a guest at the British legation, where he visited his sister, Lady Johnstone, wife of Sir Allan Johnstone, British minister to Denmark. Although there was much persuasion in that direction Mr. Pinchot emphatically refused to discuss politics, but stated on the other hand that, while in Denmark, he would study Danish agriculture, especially the co-operative system and the Danish forest administration. Mr. Pinchot remained in Copenhagen for about a week and then he went on to Vienna.

The oldest savings fund in Denmark has completed the first century of its existence. It was started in Holsteinberg parish in 1810. Since then similar institutions have been started in various sections of the country, so that there are now 540 of them and their deposits aggregate 226,530,000 crowns.

The Northern Boat society will give its first rowing contest in Copenhagen July 10. A large number of sportsmen are expected to attend from Finland, Norway and Sweden and a banquet will be held in their honor.

POLITICAL NEWS.

William Randolph Hearst, former aspirant for the Democratic nomination for the presidency, has issued a remarkable statement over his own signature, in which he unqualifiedly endorses Mr. Taft. In doing so he also criticises in the severest terms the administration of President Roosevelt and in so many words warns the American nation against a renewal of the political domination of the former president.

Between 6,000 and 8,000 voters of Monroe county, N. Y., changed from the Republican to the Democratic column and elected the first Democratic congressman that has represented the Thirty-second district in twenty years. James S. Havens, a Democrat, running on a tariff reform platform, defeated George W. Aldridge, for a score of years the ruler of the county Republican organization, by 5,900 votes.

According to John Temple Graves, William Sulzer of New York, a Tammany congressman, is the man upon whom William Randolph Hearst and the Democratic party will unite for the next governor of New York. Colonel Graves adds that Sulzer will be elected.

Confirmation of the report that Senator Aldrich will retire from the senate on March 4 next and the further announcement by Senator Eugene Hale of Maine that he also will retire on that date has created a political sensation in Washington.

Thomas Taggart, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, has formally announced that he will be a candidate before the Indiana general assembly next year to succeed Albert J. Beveridge in the United States senate.

After eight years of government service as surveyor of the port of New York General James S. Clarkson, formerly chairman of the Republican national committee, has retired.

Congressman Frank O. Lowden, Republican, of the Thirteenth (Ill.) district, announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

An effort will be made by the administration to bring the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation speedily to a close. In this move the indication is that the wishes of the friends of the secretary of the interior will meet with the ready acquiescence of all members of the congressional committee.

At a White House conference consideration was given the anti-injunction and postal savings bank bills now pending in the house. Reports made to the president are that there is a great deal of opposition to postal savings banks, with a prospect that the measure will fail of passage.

The attorney general of the United States has ordered an inquiry into the gigantic bull movement in cotton with which the names of James A. Patten of Chicago, Frank B. Hayne and William P. Brown of New Orleans and Eugene Scales of Texas have been popularly connected.

The executive committee of the National Association of Railroad Commissioners has begun a movement to secure the re-enactment in the pending administration railroad bill of a proviso bearing expressly on the authority of the federal government over interstate business.

A demand for an investigation of the official career of Judge Peter S. Grosscup of the federal circuit court at Chicago was laid before the president, the Illinois senators and members of congress from that state by lodge No. 17 of the Switchmen's union of Chicago.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

KILLS HIS YOUNG STEPSON

Becker County Farmer Then Ends His Own Life.

An innocent and defenseless boy of twelve years was murdered by Louis Johnson, a farmer living in the town of Green Valley, Becker county. The lad was a stepson of Johnson and was shot dead with a rifle.

After committing the foul deed Johnson turned his gun upon himself and fired a shot which ended his own life.

The murder and suicide occurred in some woods near the home of the Johnsons. The murderer and suicide was about forty-five years old.

Johnson had a daughter by his first wife and fears that she would be dispossessed of his property, in the event of his death and that the stepson would inherit it, are supposed to have led to the tragedy. The first husband of Mrs. Johnson, a man by the name of Hill, also died a suicide in the same neighborhood about eight years ago.

DECIDE TO OPPOSE TAWNEY

Progressive Republicans of the First District Confer.

No opponent of James A. Tawney, congressman from the First Minnesota district, was put in the field by the progressive Republicans of that district who met at Dodge Center for the avowed purpose of naming a man to scalp the chairman of the house appropriations committee. Practically every county in the district was represented.

However, the selection is merely delayed. A committee of ten—one from each county in the district—will have charge of the anti-Tawney campaign from now on and in due time will name a man to go against the congressman.

Who the nominee will be is, of course, uncertain. It was admitted by members of the committee after their conference that a number of men were considered, among them being Thomas Kelly of Owatonna, Thomas Frazer of Rochester, J. P. Hurley of Albert Lea and Milo Price of Owatonna.

The executive committee consists of seven members and meetings will be held at frequent intervals during the next few weeks.

The organization to be perfected by the executive committee will be known as the Progressive Republican league of the First district. An effort will be made at once to perfect the organization and get county committees and township members at work. Mr. Frazer said he understood each county in the district was practically pledged to contribute $200 to the campaign fund.

IF FUNDS ARE PROVIDED

St. Paul Can Secure National Conservation Congress.

Ralph W. Wheelock, private secretary to Governor Eberhart, has returned to St. Paul from Washington with an option on the meeting of the National Conservation congress tucked under his arm.

This option presupposes the disposition on the part of St. Paul to take care of the financial side of the matter. Just what the meeting would cost to arrange and carry through is unknown. The State Conservation congress, held in March, cost about $6,000. It was estimated by Mr. Wheelock that the national meeting would cost twice that amount.

IN FIGHT OVER RELIGION

Two Duluth Workmen Stabbed, One of Them Fatally.

Mike and Nick Shepherd, workmen in the employ of the Minnesota Steel company at New Duluth, were stabbed as the result of a boarding house quarrel, the latter fatally.

The police are looking for three Austrians, who are said to have done the cutting.

It is believed that the men quarrelled over religious matters. The Austrians are Protestants and the Shepherd brothers, who are Montenegrins, are Catholics.

Child Killed by a Train.

While playing with his dog in the Chicago Great Western railroad yards at St. Paul little Willie Gribble, four years old, started to crawl under a freight train standing near the Robert street bridge. Unseen by the trainmen the train passed over the child's right leg, severing it at the hip, and cutting off his left foot. The boy died on the way to the hospital.

Boy Crushed to Death.

Leonard Krause, seventeen years old, was caught in the belt of a machine in the Northern Pacific railroad shops at Gladstone. Before the engine could be stopped he was drawn between two heavy wheels and crushed. One arm and both legs were mangled, every bone being broken. He died in a hospital here two hours later.

One Conductor Who Was Cured.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington Ky. Street Railway; It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. Sold by All Druggists.

Sheriff's Sale.

By Virtue of an Execution, issued out of and under the Seal of the District Court, in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, upon a judgment rendered and docketed in the said Court, on the Sixth day of April, 1910, in an action wherein F. H. Gambell is plaintiff, and Margaret M. Elder, is defendant, in favor of the said plaintiff and against the said defendant, for the sum of One Hundred Fifteen and 85-100 Dollars, in an action in the District Court of said County which execution was directed and delivered to me as Sheriff in and for the said County of Red Lake, I have this 14th day of April, A. D. 1910, levied upon all the right, title and interest of the said Defendant Margaret M. Elder in and to the following described real property situated in the County of Red Lake in said State as follows:

All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, and described as Lot numbered twenty-five (25), in block number one (1), of Meehan's Addition to Thief River Falls, according to the owners rearrangement of said block one (1), and also that part of out lot [illegible] of said Meehan's Addition described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-five (25), thence in a southerly direction, the line being the same variation as the north line of said lot twenty-five (25) to the reserve line of Red Lake River, thence in a southerly direction to a point where the south line of said lot twenty five (25) would intersect the said reserve line if continued, thence in a westerly direction to the southeast corner of said lot twenty-five (25), thence northerly to the place of beginning, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Notice is Hereby Given, That I, the undersigned, as Sheriff as aforesaid, will sell the above described real property to the highest bidder, for cash, at public auction, at the front door of the postoffice in the city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, on Saturday the fourth day of June, A. D. 1910, at [illegible] of that day, to satisfy the said Execution, together with the interests and costs thereon.

Dated April 14th, 1910.

Warroad is making great preparations to accommodate tourists this summer. Over 5,000 are expected.

A farmer near Wadena reports clearing a profit of nine per cent last year at a valuation of $100 an acre, and that was for a farm of 440 acres. He is a real farmer; there are others.

Middle River, so the Pioneer informs us, is to have a "male quartet of three members." Middle River is a town that does things, and we have an idea that if occasion really required it they would have a male quartet if they only had two male songsters.

P. J. Youngdahl, superintendent of the Minnesota Anti-Saloon League, announces that the county option forces will elect from thirty to forty per cent of the delegates to the next Republican state convention and that if a county option plank is not adopted they will bolt the convention. It is a little early to talk about bolting the convention and we don't believe that kind of talk is going to win a county option victory.

Here is some good advice from the Northwestern Agriculturist:

> If we had a million dollars to invest right now we would quietly buy up all the Northern Minnesota agricultural land we could get hold of at present prices. If there ever was a "dead open and shut" opportunity for a profit it is in anticipating the rise in values of Minnesota land in the next two or three years.

The Bureau of Statistics says: "The number of food animals in the United States has decreased 5,000,000 since 1909 and the number of consumers has increased 12,000,000 in the same time." And it produces the figures to suspend its assertions By food animals is meant, of course, cattle, sheep and hogs, while "consumers" means the entire population. The fact above stated doubtless accounts to some extent for the prevailing high prices of meat.—Warren Register.

State Auditor Iverson's plan to have the state pay its proportion of the expense of constructing roads through its own lands would if put in operation, help out some in several of the northern counties where immense quantities of land is owned by the state. Mr. Iverson's idea is that land on both sides of the road for a distance of six miles should be assessed.

A 50-cent bottle of

given in half-teaspoon doses four times a day mixed in its bottle, will last a year-old baby nearly a month, and four bottles over three months and will make the baby strong and well and will lay the foundation for a healthy, robust boy or girl.

That the state should make a direct appropriation for the improvement of its lands. Certainly the building of roads would improve and add to the selling value of the land and the experiment is worth trying.—Princeton Union.

During 1909, Government statistics show that 59,927 homeseekers moved from the states into Canada and 53,448 moved from Canada into the states, a balance in favor of Canada of 6,748. This does not include those who purchased land in Canada. As a matter of fact, thousands of land seekers have gone into Canada from this side, of the boarder and thousands of them have come back, while many thousands have made good and will remain. The Canada fever however is about over. The best lands have about all been taken and the attempt to dispose of undesirable territory by speculators has caused many thousands of would be buyers to return to the states with unfavorable reports. Land seekers will now turn to localities like Northern Minnesota, where conditions offer better opportunities for diversified farming.—Roseau Times.

SENSE FROM A CORPORATION MANAGER.

Duluth Herald:— George W. Perkins, a partner of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. and a leading influence in the United States Steel corporation, said some things the other day at Harvard university that must sound like rank heresy to corporation managers of the old school. Indeed, if the average "reformer" had said the same thing he would have been hooted by the old time corporation manager as a Populist, a Socialist or something else that he thinks horrible and deadly and unrespectful. Indeed reformers have said such things and have been so condemned many times.

He was talking about the relationship between the corporation and the people. He said, in beginning, that "the people have witnessed abuses, glaring abuses, in business methods. They have suffered under many of these for years, and have found no remedy. They have been told that these abuses came about largely because of the size to which certain business enterprizes had grown. For want of a better reason many have accepted that one. How un-American it is to be affraid of a thing because it is large!"

Bigness isn't the trouble. This is the day of big things. Business could no more be conducted by small concerns nowadays than this issue of the Herald could be run off on an old-fashioned hand press. Methods, not size, make the trouble. Regulation, not destruction, should be the remedy. Mr. Perkins did'nt say that, in quite the same words; but The Herald says it, and not for the first time, either.

Speaking of the corporation officers, he said: "The officers of great corporations should realize that such concerns are more nearly public institutions than private property. While the agitation of the last few years has been unfair and harmful in many instances, on the other hand it has set business men thinking; it has awakened the business conscience." While the "agitation" may have been unfair in its objectives at times, it grew out of recognized and undeniable abuses, portest against which was not only fair but a patriotic duty. If, for lack of proper knowledge of the real causes of these abuses, the wrong people or the wrong things have been the subjects of public indignation that is something that proper knowledge will correct.

Here, however, is some plain common sense advice which Mr. Perkins gave to corporation managers, and it should be heeded: "Let those of us who are in business be fair with the people and the people will be fair with us; let us see and accept the tendency of the times; let us realize our responsibilities, and our problems will be far easier of solution. If, we believe that in our republic the people's word is law, let us believe it in all things, and if the people have decided that the time has come to take a hand in how business shall be conducted, is it not plain business sense to meet the question at least half way rather than fight it all the way?"

Mr. Perkin's argument comes to this: that the fight against the big corporations ought to be changed into a fight to control the big corporation and make it a faithful servant to the people. Publicity of corporation affairs and public regulation of corporations, in his view, will go further to solve the people's problems than any amount of prosecutions under the Sherman anti-trust law.

And he is right. Perhaps his idea of the extent of that public regulation and your idea of it or ours would vary; but sooner or later such regulatation is coming, and its extent will be great enough to insure the people decent treatment from the great corporations. They will then be servants, not masters.

The NEWS is in receipt of a letter from Al H. Jester of Bemidji, candidate for state senator in this district, in which he takes exception to the statement made in the NEWS last week to the effect that as a farmer he was a jest. Mr. Jester states that he has sixty acres under cultivation, and, owing to the fact that he hires a man and woman, it is not necessary for him to live upon the farm in the winter time, but his legal residence is on the farm. He keeps summer guests in order to create a market for his produce, and also mentions the fact that he shipped in 1906 some twenty-five bushels of seed potatoes to Thief River Falls for which he received $1.50 per bushel. We certainly have no desire to do Mr. Jester any injustice, but it is a matter of general report throughout this section that Mr. Jester derives his living as the proprietor of a summer resort, and that his farming operations are for the purpose of catering to the wants of his guests.

W. J. Bryan had the following clever contribution to the Peary-Cook controversy: "I met a Texas man who said Dr. Cook was a Democrat and asked me if I didn't hope he had discovered the North pole. I told him that while I could express no opinion on the controversy between Peary and Cook, I thought, as a general proposition, that a Democrat would be more likely to discover the pole than a Republican, because the Democrats have been out in the cold a long time and are used to it."

Many Buyers Coming.

State Auditor Iverson is receiving from 100 to 200 letters a day inquiring about the state land sales which will be held in several northern counties. The sale for Red Lake county is scheduled for May 21. These letters of inquiry are coming from all parts of the country showing that the people every-where are coming to realize the worth of Central and Northern Minnesota land, and have also awakened to the fact that our lands bought at low figures will yield big returns within a few years.

Telephone Dispatching Trains In The Northwest.

The Great Northern Railway has just been ordered telephone train dispatching apparatus to be installed on six more divisions of its road. This railroad is already using the telephone for this purpose on appraximately 2100 miles of line, and the new extension, which includes the Fergus Falls, Breckenridge, Northern, Dakota, St. Cloud and Cascade divisions, reaches in the neighborhood of 1500 miles.

When the proposed equipment has been installed, the telephone train dispatching system of the Great Northern Railway will extend over the entire main line from Minneapolis and Superior to Seattle and Vancouver, and, it is believed, will cover the longest continuous stretch of track of any railroad in this country.

The divisions on which the telephone equipment is to be used are among the most important and busiest of the whole railway.

WORK TO BE RUSHED

Soo to Build Line from Wheatline to Drake This Year, It Is Stated.

Line May Not Branch Out From Medford, and Lankin Is Now Considered.

The new branch that the Soo line proposes building from the Wheatline southwest to Drake, N. D., is to be completed this year. Work will shortly commence and it will be rushed. At the present time three crews of surveyors are at work, and as soon as they are through, grading will be commenced. It was the original intention to have the road branch off at Medford, and make this place the division point, but so much difficulty is found in getting a suitable grade out of Medford that it is now very likely the road will branch out from Lankin. Whether or not the division point will be established at Lankin is not known, but it is probable that it will as this point will be the most convenient. The new road is going to cut through the heart of some of the best territory of the Great Northern, and will make a very valuable feeder for the Wheatline, which will incidentally greatly benefit Thief River Falls, as all of the traffic of this line has to pass through this city. It is also stated that it is possible that the division point at Adams, on the Wheatline, will be removed to the place where the road branches off.

Charles A. Robbecke to Retire.

Charles A. Robbecke, for twenty-two years the proprietor of the Hotel Ogahmah, the best known hostelry in the Northwest, announces that on the first of June he will retire from the business. Mr. Robbecke will erect a residence on the East Side and take life easy in the future. He has made no arrangements for the disposal of the hotel as yet, but expects to sell the furniture and lease the hotel.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep can not be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southers, Eau Claire, Wis., says:—"For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney pills as I know they have cured me." Sold by All Druggists

Last week the state supreme court sustained a verdict of $300 damages against the Great Northern in favor of a Polk County farmer who claimed losses by water being turned from its course by reason of the railroad grades. This is an important decision and may be a precedent for bringing macy suits against the railroad companies for damages from water through lack of culverts and diverting water from its regular channels. It may also be the means of inducing railroad companies to appropriate money for drainage ditches.

State Wins Case.

The state of Minnesota won its case against the Creamery Package company started in the courts at Owatonna, to dissolve the creamery trust.

This is the first prosecution brought under the state anti-trust law. The verdict for the state was handed down in the supreme court last week.

The case effects every dairyman in the state and will be of personal interest. It was declared there was a trust in the state organized to boost the prices of creamery material.

The case to dissolve this alleged trust was first brought during the last year of Attorney General Young's administration and completed by Attorney General Simpson. The special appropriation for it was made by the last legislature

S. A. SWANSON IS DEAD

Probate Judge of Red Lake County Dies Very Suddenly Sunday.

Had Been Sick but a Short Time—Death Due to a Stroke of Paralysis.

S. A. Swanson, judge of Probate of Red Lake county, died at his home at Red Lake Falls early Sunday morning after an illness of but a few days. Death was caused by a stroke of paralysis. The funeral services were held from the Presbyterian church at Red Lake Falls Tuesday morning at nine o'clock.

Mr. Swanson had been a resident of Red Lake county for a number of years, his parents residing in the township of Black River. When Red Lake county was first organized he became the first register of deeds of the county and held this office for two years. He was twice a candidate for the office of representative and once for state senator, but each time was unsuccessful. At the recent election he was elected to the office of probate judge.

Mr. Swanson always took an active part in Red Lake county affairs and had a strong following in the southern part of the county.

SHOWING THE ALBUM

The Old Plush Volume Pictured the Family History.

A TREAT FOR THE VISITOR.

She Learned All About the Twins and Aunt Jane's Little Love Affair and Sister Gertie's Narrow Escape and a Whole Lot More Besides.

Yes'm, that's my marriage certificate, and them pictures pasted on it is me and pa the day we was married. No, he wasn't sick, but he was so scared it made him look peaked. Do you like to look at photographs? Most everybody does, I guess. Wait till I get the album. Yes, it is kind of a pretty cover—real plush. I got it off a book peddler lady—dollar down and 50 cents a month.

Them's twins. There was two of them. They looked just like you see them there. One of them is my husband, but nobody can tell which he is now. Sort of creepy, ain't it, not to know whether your own husband is one twin or the other? One of them died when he was sixteen, and that broke the set. I think it is the sweetest picture in the album, they look so simple and harmless, just like two little calves. Gran'ma Jones used to make their clothes herself. You'd never guess it, would you? She used to lay the cloth in two thicknesses and cut out two suits at once. If one of them had been a girl she couldn't have done it. Turn over the page.

That's the gentleman Aunt Jane nearly married. He looks like a college professor, don't he? He was so refined and meek and so eloquent at prayer meeting. But he wasn't a professor; he peddled Grigg's infallible cure for hog cholera and lectured on temperance. He was awful poor in his health, and the minute Aunt Jane set eyes on him she made up her mind to marry him. She was forty, and she usually got what she wanted, and everybody said it was a thousand chances to one that she would get him. But just when Aunt Jane was sure she had him he got wind of it. He went back to Massachusetts the next day and died peaceful. Turn over the page.

That's my sister Gertie and a bass singer we used to have in the choir. His name was Spung—Launcelot Spung—and he was a barber by profession. Him and Gertie was engaged for six weeks, but she found out he had a wife and six children at Boston, so she didn't marry him. He was the sweetest singer! You'd never imagine he had a wife and six children if you could have heard him sing. Ain't it awful how sinful people can be and yet look so innocent? Gertie took on awful when she heard the facts about him, and she wouldn't get engaged to anybody else for a long time, and you know what that means for a choir singer. Turn over the page.

Sue Hartwick that is, one of my old girl chums. She ran off with a cattle buyer and got married, but that wasn't until five years after this picture was took. She had a lovely character—so light and playful and that fond of handsome clothes. I remember the day she had that picture took. She'd been to a picnic with a traveling gentleman from Cincinnati and got engaged to him. I helped her trim the very hat she has on. It was a green straw with roses, one red and one blue and one yellow. It matched her complexion lovely. She was a dark blond with red hair. Oh, yes, she always smiled that way on account of one front tooth being out. Turn over the page.

That's my Aunt Phoebe by marriage the day she was married. Ain't she sweet? The basket wasn't hers. It belonged to the man that took the picture. Neither was the curls all hers, though they didn't belong to the photograph man. I've got them now laid away till they come in handy. I tell pa it's a pity it ain't man's hair 'stead of lady's, and then he could wear it. Baldness seems to run in his family. His father was so bald that he never used a brush and comb for forty-two years; used to comb his hair with a flannel rag. That dress of Aunt Phoebe's is the lowest necked anybody on either side of our family ever had, but then she was a great one for society. Turn over the page.—Ellis Parker Butler in Reader.

Queer Legal Oaths.

In Siberia, in the wild Ostyaks law courts, the natives swear by the newly severed head of a bear, which is implored to subsequently rend and devour them should they perjure themselves, while in Assam the opposing witnesses lay hold of a chicken by its feet and retain each one-half as the clerk of the court chops it in two. By undergoing this ceremony they are considered to be pledged to a like fate in the event of their swearing falsely.—Chicago Journal.

Saved His Life.

"Don't chide me for carrying a revolver. This little gun saved my life once."

"How exciting! Tell me about it."

"I was starving, and I pawned it."—Cleveland Leader.

WELL GUARDED CASH

The Millions Piled Up In the Mint at Philadelphia.

STORED IN ARMORED VAULTS.

The Whole Building Is Embedded In a Solid Concrete Foundation, and the Underground Strong Rooms Are Impregnable—The Night Watch.

The Philadelphia mint always contains coin and bullion which fluctuates in value each day between a half and three-quarters of a billion dollars. One hundred millions of dollars of this amount is in silver dollars stored for several years in a room by itself 100 by 55 feet in area. About $300,000,000 is in gold coin, ready to be put in circulation or to be stored in the national treasury at Washington against the issue of a corresponding number of gold certificates. A million or two is in bronze and nickel coins. Finally an amount of bullion varying from a small quantity to several hundred millions of dollars' worth occupies the four massive vaults designed for the uncoined metal.

Now, how is this vast hoard protected?

First of all, the whole mint is embedded in a solid concrete foundation about three feet deep. Concrete, as every one knows, is one of the strongest of all known substances and the most impervious to drilling or wear. Then on the interior, where the vaults are placed, within this concrete protection, comes a solid armor of battleship steel six inches thick, so strong that an expert working on it a week could scarcely make an impression, much less penetrate it by hand tools.

The vaults themselves are sunken deeply below the ground. Descending several flights of stairs and passing by doors guarded by a fearsome array of rifles for use by the night guards, a long, fairly wide corridor of solid concrete masonry shows the entrances to the six vaults, one for the silver already referred to, one for all kinds of coinage, but mostly for gold, and the remaining four for the gold, silver and nickel bullion. The bronze bullion lies in another room by itself, but as a few dollars' worth of this substance makes an uncomfortably heavy load it is not thought necessary to surround it with the minute safeguards used in the case of the precious metals.

The vaults themselves have a double combination. That to the outer door is known by the cashier only and that to the inner door by the custodian of the vaults only. To enter a vault both men have to be together, and it is a rule of the department that both shall stay together till the inspection or other object for which the huge safe is opened is accomplished.

Entering one of these great cages after five minutes' working at the combination, one finds himself in a huge room partitioned off in fifteen compartments by steel gratings of the strongest kind. A straight passage six feet wide and the height of the chamber goes down the length of the room from the door. At the entrance are stored the bronze coins, the cents, about $80,000 worth of them, but the amount varies from day to day. Next come the more precious nickel coins, of which the value usually totals about $300,000.

Beyond these storage places a steel grated door in the passage itself has to be opened and then still another to get completely to the end of the room. All along the length of this passageway, from the entrance to the vault to the end, are the compartments for the coins, separated from the passageway by exactly the same kind of gratings as those which divide the way itself into sections.

The bottom, the sides and the top of this vault are lined with steel plates, and about the entire vault is the three foot protection of concrete. Within the vault itself are the separate compartments, each locked. These compartments are examined shortly after the end of the fiscal year and are then sealed by the examiners, so that any entrance to them would be impossible without the breakage of the seals. In each compartment devoted to the storage of gold the coin is stored first in bags which contain $5,000 each in half eagles, eagles or double eagles, and then these bags are arranged twenty on a shelf. Each shelf has thus $100,000 on it. The shelves are arranged in rows downward, ten from top to bottom of the compartment, each row having thus $1,000,000 in gold in it.

Electricity lights the entire section of each vault, and the electric current is so arranged that if it were possible for the vaults to be tampered with the electricity would immediately give notice outside that something was wrong.

A detachment of guards every night is stationed at the entrance to the stairways leading to the corridor, which gives access to the vaults themselves. Their orders are to shoot down any one attempting an entry.

For the protection of the mint from fire a well drilled fire brigade has charge of the extinguishing apparatus. There are thirty-one fire alarm stations located in the corridors and rooms throughout the building.

At night every fifteen minutes thirty-one watchmen ring a signal notifying the watch in the telephone room that all is well. All these men carry revolvers during the night watch. If the signal from any watchman was not heard at the right time an instant alarm would be sounded.—Philadelphia Record.

SNOW CRYSTALS.

They Invariably Conform to the Rule of Six.

What magic is there in the rule of six that compels the snowflake to conform so rigidly to its laws? Here is a germ bestrewn realm of nature possessing the charm of mystery, of the unknown, sure richly to reward the investigator.

Much wonder has been excited because the snow crystals exhibit such a bewildering diversity and beauty. They form within a very thin gaseous solvent, the air, and this allows the molecules of water an unexampled freedom of motion and adjustment while arranging themselves in crystal form. The fact doubtless largely explains why the crystals of snow far exceed other crystals in complexity and symmetry. Snow crystals, like all crystals of water, develop under the hexagonal system and invariably divide into six. Nothing absolutely certain is known as to why they grow thus except as it is assumed the number and arrangement of the attractive and repellent poles possessed by the molecules of water impose this habit of growth on them. This dividing into six is necessarily discussed and best explained in somewhat technical sounding terms. We may assume each water particle or molecule possesses two opposite primary poles, positive and negative, corresponding in direction with the main tabular axis of the crystals, and in addition three or six equidistant secondary poles arranged around what may be called the equatorial diameters of the molecules. Water, being a diamagnetic substance and susceptible to polar repulsion, presumably has a tendency to arrange itself thus in a position between and at right angles to the primary electromagnetic poles. This alignment of the lines of growth opposite to the lines of greater magnetic force would compel the crystals of snow to grow mainly outward in the directions of their equatorial diameters and secondary poles. This theory would perhaps best explain why the crystals grow upon thin tabular or in the hollow columnar form and increase so little in the directions of their main axes—that is, in the direction in which, it is assumed, their main position and negative poles lie.—Technical World Magazine.

A PATHETIC DUEL.

Sad Sequel to a Meeting In the Days When Middies Fought.

One of the most pathetic duels in the early history of the American navy was that between two young midshipmen whose names are not given in the record, according to a recent writer. Their ship was in the Malayan waters. One hot night they quarreled over the question of leaving open the scuttle. The dispute was finally settled amicably by the exchange of cots. A superior officer who had overheard their heated words made it plain to one of the midshipmen that he would have to "call out" his friend if he wished to retain the respect of his friends. To avoid ostracism and to conform to the standard of honor imposed by his superiors the unwilling midshipman challenged.

The meeting occurred on the seashore. He wrote of it afterward as follows: "Upon the signal we both fired. I found myself wounded and was about to lean upon my second's arm when I perceived my opponent fall upon the sand. My own wound was in the fleshy part of the thigh. It did not prevent my running to the prostrate figure of my old friend, whose face exhibited intense pain, and, kneeling down by his side, I implored his forgiveness, which he instantly granted.

"My despair at his fate knew no bounds, and, accusing myself of his murder, I upbraided with the bitterest reproaches those who had urged me to send the challenge. For weeks after his cot was attended by his late opponent, whose greatest joy was to anticipate his wants."

The wounded youth recovered, but had a withered arm, and, leaving the service, died of a broken heart.

America.

It was an Englishman who after traveling from New York to St. Louis was asked in the latter city if he was going west. "Heavens, what a country! Here I am, a thousand miles from the sea, and I'm asked if I'm going west!"

It was an American who, alighting in San Francisco from a trip across the continent which had been impeded by heavy traffic, grasped his friend's hand at the station and exclaimed, with pride, "What an empire, where a man, though moving all the time, can be twenty-four hours late on a railroad train!" It is an empire and powerful as vast.—Washington Star.

Charles Reade's Mistake.

"It was Charles Reade, wasn't it, who wrote, 'Nothing is so terrible as a fool'?"

"Yes, but he was wrong. I live next door to a newly married couple. If Charles could see them he would at once admit that two fools are even more terrible."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Peculiar.

Tess—I see a notice in the paper of the wedding of Mrs. Nutrale. Jess—Yes; I know her very well. Tess—Do you? What was her maiden name? Jess—I suppose her maiden aim was to get married.—Philadelphia Press.

It is very much easier for a fat man to become [illegible] than for a good one to become famous.—Atlanta Journal.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or, in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 2[illegible]9 of the General Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

Tenor Gets Funny.

Slezak, who was one of the new bunch of talent at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York—just closed for the season—is a practical joker. All the company were his victims. His favorite was Schmedes, the Vienna tenor. One morning about 2 o'clock Slezak stirred up Schmedes.

"Are you Herr Schmedes?" Slezak called through the telephone in broken German, fitting the character.

"Yes," came in sleepy impatience—"Herr Schmedes, the tenor."

Yes, of course, the tenor. What other would at that hour have stickled for complete identification?

"How fortunate!" was the ambiguous rejoinder. "I am Lord Morley, at the Hotel Bristol."

"Delighted, I am sure."

The voice sounded now quite awake. A distinguished foreigner of a nation not noted for its impulsiveness could not sleep without a word with him!

"Who is singing in 'Lohengrin' Monday night?" sped to him over the wire.

"I, Schmedes," the answer rang, with an inference of pleasing news.

"Ah!" Deep, startling disappointment freighted the word. "I had hoped it was Slezak. They say he sings so beautifully."—Chicago Post.

Mysterious Knowledge.

Some years ago an expedition from the University of Pennsylvania was sent to one of our southern states for the purpose of observing a solar eclipse.

The day before the event one of the professors said to an old colored man belonging to the household wherein the scientist was quartered:

"Tom, if you will watch your chickens tomorrow morning you'll find that they'll all go to roost at 11 o'clock."

Tom was of course skeptical, but at the appointed hour the heavens were darkened, and the chickens retired to roost. At this the man's amazement showed no bounds, and he sought out the scientist.

"Perfesser," said he, "how long ago did you know dem chickens would go to roost?"

"About a year ago," said the professor smilingly.

"Well, ef dat don't beat all!" was the man's comment. "Perfessor, a year ago dem chickens wa'n't even hatched."—Ladies' Home Journal.

His Incentive.

"You fought that burglar like a very demon," said the police lieutenant as he listened to the little man's story.

"Thank you," replied the little man.

"And the fellow was twice as big as you," pursued the admiring lieutenant. "I don't think I ever saw a man much worse beat up. You must have been frightfully mad."

"It wasn't that exactly," said the little man modestly. "You see, my wife was behind me, prodding me with a hatpin!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Identified.

"I wouldn't marry the best man in the world," said Miss Dolliver scornfully.

"I'm glad to hear it," cried Bolivar joyously. "Then I can hope."

"You?" she retorted.

"Yes," said Bolivar. "I'm not the best man in the world, you know."

And she married him just to get even.—Harper's Weekly.

So Sweet of Him.

"I was passing that swell florist's shop with Lord Brokeleigh," said the first heiress, "and I hinted that I'd like to have some of the lovely roses that were displayed in the window"—

"And did he really send you some?" eagerly interrupted the other.

"Yes; they came this morning—C. O. D."—Catholic Standard and Times.

SHEEDY AND THE SHARPS.

The King Gambler Taught the Small Fry a Lesson.

Some years ago, when St. Louis was wide open, Pat Sheedy, king of gamblers, was sitting in the corridor of the Planters' hotel with a friend. Two strangers took seats alongside of Sheedy and very shortly turned the conversation to poker hands. They had never seen Sheedy before and did not know him, but he looked the part of a prosperous "sport" and at the same time appeared like "easy money."

"It's too bad," one of the strangers said, "that we haven't another man here. We might get up a little game of draw-poker."

"Wouldn't mind sitting in myself," said Sheedy, with a nudge to his friend. "I haven't played poker for some time."

"Suppose we play a little showdown—$1 or $5 limit?" one of the strangers said.

"I'm agreeable," Sheedy replied, "and I guess my friend is. Make it a five dollar limit for an hour or two."

Introductions under fictitious names on both sides followed, and the four men went to Sheedy's suit. On the cut for the first deal the speaking stranger received the honor. The way he handled the cards showed that he was used to that careless abandon method that can only come from years of practice by a professional gambler.

The suspicions of Sheedy and his friend were verified by the first hand shown. Sheedy received three kings, his friend a small full house, the dealer's friend a pair of tens and the dealer an ace full. The betting was very light on the part of Sheedy and his friend.

The next deal was Sheedy's. He took a long while arranging the cards. When they were dealt every one in the party had fours, Sheedy's hand, of course, being the highest. The betting was fast, and when the hands were shown the speaking gambler suddenly remembered a long distance telephone call for himself and friend was awaiting them. They departed hurriedly, and Pat Sheedy, turning to his friend, said:

"My boy, it's been twenty years since I had to do that for a living."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A GREWSOME PRISON.

The Famous and Terrible Russian Fortress of Schluesselburg.

In the middle of the river Neva, where it flows out of Lake Ladoga, there lies a tiny island surrounded on three sides by the mighty, turbulent waters of the river and hemmed in upon the fourth by the cold and stormy lake. Upon this island stands a very ancient fortress inclosed by high walls more than twenty feet in thickness. This is the Fortress of Schluesselburg. Day and night sentinels relieved every two hours pace around the top of these walls, keeping a vigilant lookout on every hand. No one from within the fortress, not even the soldiers or gendarmes, is allowed to communicate with the people who dwell upon the banks of the river. If the unwary fisherman chances to drift in his boat too near to the walls of the fortress he is greeted by the shout of a sentinel, aiming his rifle:

"Away, or I shoot!"

Not even the Dead sea in the deserts of Asia is so utterly isolated and cut off from the living world as is this Fortress of Schluesselburg, which lies within forty miles of St. Petersburg.

They are very ancient, the high walls of the fortress. In many places they are cracked from old age, and in the cracks little trees have taken root. The lower part of the wall has gradually become covered with thick dark moss, just as the face of a very old man becomes covered all over with hair. They look sullen and ominously silent as if they hid dark and grewsome secrets. And, in truth, in the whole world there are no other walls that have witnessed so many and such terrible human tragedies as the Fortress of Schluesselburg.—David Soskice in McClure's Magazine.

When Fashions Lasted For Years.

In times past a fashion lasted with slight modifications for years. Much the same fashion continued through the long reign of Louis XIV. and another through that of Louis XV., while the ladies of the middle ages never thought of varying their costumes. As for the Greeks and the Romans, generation succeeded generation with little change in female dress, and yet all these ladies of the past were more artistically dressed than those of today. Many no doubt spent more than they could afford, but when they had a costly dress they kept it and did not throw it away to replace it with another.—London Truth.

Going Some.

Inebriated One—Shay, mishter, did you she me beat out that friend of mine? Stranger—I saw you running down the street, but I didn't observe any competitor. Inebriated One—You didn't? Why, I went by that lamppost back there's if it was standing still!—Puck.

Trying Work.

Thin Haired Man—What! A shilling for cutting my hair? That's outrageous! Barber—But, my dear sir, the hairs on your head are so far apart that I had to cut each one by itself.—London Tit-Bits.

The Play.

It is remarkable how virtuous and generously disposed every one is at a play. We uniformly applaud what is right and condemn what is wrong when it costs us nothing but the sentiment.—Hazlitt.

BIRTH OF AN ICEBERG.

The Dramatic Experience of Two Antarctic Explorers.

C. E. Borchgrevink, commander of the antarctic expedition of 1898, nearly lost his life by an accident of a nature so peculiar that it is probable no other man could duplicate the experience. At the foot of Mount Terror in February, 1900, he landed from his ship with Captain Jensen and three other men. Then, wishing to take a picture of the shore, he sent his boat back to the vessel to get a camera, and he and Captain Jensen were left alone on the rough beach. Before the boat returned a strange and awful thing happened. Mr. Borchgrevink told the story in the Outlook:

A roar and a rush, with tremendous explosions, shook the beach. The thought came to us that the perpendicular rocks above us were falling. Then we realized what was taking place. The mighty glacier immediately to the west of us was giving birth to an iceberg.

Millions of tons of ice plunged into the ocean. We could see nothing beyond an immense cloud of rolling snow. The water rose from the plunge of this antarctic monarch. I sang out to Jensen, "Now we shall have to face the wave!"

We rushed to the highest point of our limited beach, four feet above the sea. We saw advancing on us a dark green ridge with a white crest. I called to Jensen to struggle for dear life. We clutched the uneven rocks, with our backs toward the advancing water. Although it could not have taken more than seven minutes, the time seemed long before the water closed over our heads.

Floating upward, scrambling upon the rocks, I tore the nails from my flesh in my endeavor to keep from being dragged out. After the second wave we again felt the rocks under our feet.

At the place where Jensen and I first stood the rock was wet twenty feet above our heads. It was somewhat lower when it struck us. Where the wave had struck with full force the face of the rock had been altered, and rocks were still falling when the three men in the boat found us, bleeding and torn.

Two facts had saved us. To our right a small peninsula of ice protruded some five feet from the rock, and the rock itself bent toward the west. From the moment it struck the curve of the mountain rock to the west of us the wave took a course more easterly than where Jensen and I stood.

Utilizing the Waste Product.

A parish in the highlands had been cut off from communication with the nearest town owing to a severe storm. Supplies began to give out, and the minister was much perturbed in mind, as his snuffbox was quite empty. The Sabbath came round. How was he to get through his discourse without the aid of his usual stimulant? He appealed to his faithful henchman, the sexton. Alas, he was in a similar unsatisfactory predicament! How was it to be remedied? Andrew shook his head, thought long and suddenly disappeared. Presently he returned with something resembling snuff wrapped carefully in paper. The minister took a hearty pinch or two and then asked:

"Where did you get it, Andrew?"

"Please, sir, I just went and sweepit the pulpit oout," was the reply.—Dundee Advertiser.

Spoke Too Soon.

Alexandre Dumas was one day the guest of Dr. Gistal, a leading practitioner in Marseilles. After dinner, while the coffee was being handed round, the host requested the great novelist to enrich his album with one of his witty improvisations.

"Certainly," replied Dumas, with a smile, and, drawing out a pencil, he wrote under the eyes of his entertainer the following lines:

Since Dr. Gistal came to our town
"To cure diseases casual and hereditary
The hospital has been pulled down—

"You flatterer!" here exclaimed the doctor, mightily pleased, but the poet went on:

And we have made a larger cemetery.

An Unlikely Substitute.

When I was teaching in the kindergarten I always tried to impress on my pupils the necessity of neatness. One little girl repeatedly forgot her handkerchief. One day I said to her, "Use your kerchief."

She, as usual, "fordot it."

I said, "You did not forget your lunch, did you?"

She looked up in great surprise and said, "I tan't wipe my nose on mi apple, tan I?"—Delineator.

Practical Poetry.

"Pa, here's a piece of poetry that says something about a 'moated grange.' What is a 'moated grange,' pa?"

"Lemme look at it. I guess that must be a misprint for 'garage.' A moated garage is one that's designed for motors. That's it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

Sentence of Minneapolis Attorney Affirmed on Appeal.

The sentence of E. S. Cary, the well known Minneapolis lawyer who was given thirty days in the workhouse for contempt of court by the Hennepin county district court, has been confirmed by the state supreme court and Mr. Cary will be forced to serve his month in the workhouse.

Disbarment proceedings are now pending against him, and will be heard on June 2. Both actions arose out of Cary's conduct of the defense in the case of the state against Baker. The attorney called opposing counsel "a stiff" and swore in the presence of the court.

In its unanimous decision the supreme court finds that Cary conducted the case in an unprofessional and contemptuous manner. When he was asked to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt he made no excuse nor apology.

"We are unable to say," said the court, "that the penalty inflicted was not warranted by the facts and the judgment is accordingly affirmed."

DREDGE SINKS DURING GALE

All of Those on Board Manage to Escape.

Only presence of mind and a peculiar freak of the wind saved ten men, the crew of the Zenith Dredging company's dredge No. 2, from a fearful death in Lake Superior when, in a blinding snowstorm, the dredge was driven close enough to the piers at Ontonagon so that the men could jump off.

A terrible gale was blowing and for a time it looked as though the crew was doomed, but the wind drove the dredge near enough so that the men could jump off on the piers.

In a blinding snowstorm, the weather cold, and the dredge rocking, the men one after the other leaped in safety to the piers and the dredge went to her destruction alone.

GLASS CUTS HIS THROAT

New Ulm Man Meets Death In a Peculiar Manner.

Frank Preisinger, seventy-one years old, met death at New Ulm in a peculiar manner.

After spending part of the night sleeping in the depot he sauntered along Minnesota street, the principal thoroughfare, and ascended the stairs of the Reinhart block, where he fell asleep. Shortly thereafter he tumbled down stairs, his head striking a large plate glass in the door at the foot of the stairs.

He was literally impaled on the ragged edges of the broken pane, which cut his throat and jugular vein, causing instant death.

Acquitted of Manslaughter.

Frederick H. Camp of St. Paul, manager of Twin City Wonderland, was acquitted of a charge of manslaughter in the second degree by a jury in the Hennepin county district court at Minneapolis. Mr. Camp was accused of negligence while driving his automobile in North Minneapolis on the evening of Sept. 20 last, causing the death of Mrs. D. R. Thompson of Rockford, Minn., who lived in Minneapolis temporarily while her children attended school.

Train Strikes Street Car.

Northern Pacific passenger No. 11 struck a street car at the Sauk Rapids crossing, seriously injuring five persons. There were eighteen passengers on the car, nearly all of whom were bruised and scratched. Mrs. John Olson was thrown twenty feet and internally injured. It is feared she will die. Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hagquist were badly cut and bruised. Mrs. Axel Larson had three ribs broken.

Two Men Drowned.

A gasoline flyer which plies along the north shore of Lake Superior entered Grand Marais harbor one night recently about 10 o'clock. The boat later was found anchored in the bay, but nobody was on board. While Joseph Croft was hauling stones across the bay in a rowboat he saw two bodies and a small steel boat on the bottom. It is supposed the men were coming ashore when the boat capsized.

Declared to Be a Trust.

One more "trust" has been put out of business by the state supreme court. In an opinion written by Justice Thomas D. O'Brien, to which no member of the court dissents, it is held that the Creamery Package Manufacturing company, incorporated in Illinois but licensed to do business in Minnesota, is a combination in restraint of trade and its license is forfeited.

One Killed and Another Wounded.

During a brawl in a saloon at Minneapolis Nels Munson, a cook, was shot and almost instantly killed and Andrew Swanson of Buffalo, this state, lies at the city hospital with a bullet hole across the back from shoulder to shoulder, as the result of shots fired by Mike Vito, an Italian glass worker, who is under arrest at the central police station.

Opening of Indian Lands.

News received at Cass Lake that Indian lands around that place and Deer River would be opened to settlement came as a great and pleasing surprise to Cass Lake people. Within two hours after the news arrived men could be seen hurrying in all directions to get to the land and make settlement.

MR. BINNEY'S FAILURE.

Opinions by Neighbors, Creditors and His Family.

Mr. Binney failed in business.

One of his neighbors said, "At last?"

Another neighbor said: "I thought they were going it pretty strong for a man of his income. Still, I didn't like to say anything at the time."

A third neighbor said: "Oh, I'm so sorry! My dear, we must go over and give Mrs. Binney our deepest sympathy. I'm dying to see how she is taking it."

One brother-in-law said: "If he had lent me that $500 I asked him for last year he'd have been that much ahead, anyway. Much good it did him to keep it. Too bad, though, of course."

Another brother-in-law said: "Sly old boy, Binney. He's got it salted away somewhere, all right. Don't you worry."

His butcher said: "Now, a poor man like me has to pay his debts as he goes along. All the same, I'm not worrying about the $20 he owes me, but I'll bet you if I owed anybody $20 they'd make my life a misery till they got it."

His wife's best friend (to Mrs. Binney): "Now, my dear, you mustn't mind any of the awful things you hear. At a time like this people will talk."

A friend: "A man must either have exceptional capital or exceptional ability to succeed in business nowadays. Poor Binney, as it happens, had neither."

A second friend: "How much will he be able to pay? Twenty-five cents on the dollar? How did there come to be so much? Did Binney overlook it?"

A third friend: "Ninety-five per cent of business enterprises are unprofitable. There's nothing like a steady, well paying position."

A knowing acquaintance, "Wise old Binney."

His daughters, "We must hold our heads up higher than ever or people will say that we are ashamed."

His wife, "He'll be home more now, and that is everything."

Binney: "Whew! Thank heaven it's over. Now I've got to hustle and get a job."—New York Sun.

A CITY OF DANGERS.

Going Out at Night In Mosul Means Imperiling One's Life.

Mosul, on the western bank of the Tigris, is described in "The Short Cut to India," by David Fraser, as a place of some difficulty for the residents. Prices of every mortal thing are dearer than anywhere else in Turkey. Water is procured only from the Tigris, and every drop required must be carried therefrom in skins upon donkeys. Two pounds a month is a very ordinary expenditure on this essential and provides but a scanty bath.

To go out at night is to place one's life in jeopardy. To walk across the bridge in broad daylight is a danger owing to the frailty of the structure. The bridge is a wonderful affair and yields an income of some thousands of pounds annually to the contractor who farms it from the government. Three hundred yards of it is solid masonry and the remaining 150 yards a wooden platform laid upon a row of crazy boats.

Where the bridge of boats abuts the shore at one end and the stone bridge at the other are the points of danger, for owing to the height of the river when I was there the joinings were at a slope of forty-five degrees and consisted of narrow gangways up which people, sheep, cattle, donkeys, mules, horses and camels had to scramble. No wonder there were many fallings into the water—dangerous water, too—for it coursed like a cataract between the boats and swirled and boiled in fierce eddies and whirlpools below the bridge.

One poor Zabtie, with rifle slung and bandoliers strapped across his chest, was walking across when his horse slipped at the ascent to the boat part of the bridge, and both fell into the water. The horse was rescued, but the man was drowned. Life has small value in Mosul, however, and nobody bothered to mend the huge holes in the bridge or to make its passage less precarious.

A Hard Lot.

Nicaragua has been distinguished even among Central American republics by the number of its revolutions. Discovered by Columbus, it takes its name from the chief who ruled it at the time of its exploration by Dolria, in 1522. Of its earliest rulers it has been said that "the first had been a murderer, the second a murderer and rebel, the third murdered the second, the fourth was a forger and the fifth a murderer and rebel." Nicaragua abounds in prehistoric remains, and in some parts, it is said, the inhabitants still supply themselves with pottery from the vast quantities preserved below the surface.

Off Duty.

Winfred, six years old, was tying paper boots upon the kitten's paws when his aunt remonstrated with him for teasing the kitten, saying, "I thought you belonged to the Band of Mercy." "Yes, auntie, I do," said Winfred, "but," he added apologetically, "my badge is on my other coat."—Delineator.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

There will be no appeal from the decision of the three judges of the Fifteenth judicial district holding that the provision of the forest protection law passed by the last legislature requiring railroads to employ a patrolman for each mile of road through wooded country in dry seasons is invalid. The ruling of the district court was made in a criminal case started by the state and as the state cannot appeal in a criminal proceeding there is apparently no way the matter can come before the supreme court for them to pass upon its constitutionality.

The city of Owatonna has won its long fight with the Public Service Operating company, the concern which supplies electricity, gas and heat for the city. In a communication addressed to the council the company agreed to all the terms which the city had insisted upon, including the complete surrender of all franchises the company now holds.

Dr. John Lee Coulter, professor in the department of economics and political science at the state university, has resigned to take up work as a statistician under the federal government at Washington. Two years ago the government tendered him a similar offer, but Dr. Coulter was retained at the university at an increased salary.

James C. Burchard of Marshall has received authority from the New York association which has charge of the J. M. Burke estate to use his best judgment in putting the 15,000 or more acres of Burke land on the market. This wild land in Lyon county has been wanted by farmers for years, but it has not been for sale.

The 648 state banks of Minnesota held resources aggregating $109,619,548.36 Jan. 31, 1910, being an increase of $6,517,061.59 over the condition a year ago, according to a table compiled by J. B. Galarneault, state superintendent of banks.

Of the forty academic students suspended during the year from the University of Minnesota for failure in studies eleven are graduates of Central High, Minneapolis. Twenty of the forty students are graduates of Twin City high schools.

German-American citizens of Minnesota will celebrate a "German day" in Minneapolis Sunday, Sept. 4. This is the plan of the German-American Central alliance, a state organization, with thirty local branches and a large membership.

Minneapolis will soon take first place in the United States with a rye flour mill that will have a capacity for [illegible] barrels a day.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

While attempting to cross the car tracks of the Twin City Rapid Transit company near Deephaven on a motorcycle George Leathers, a bachelor, forty-one years old, a motorcycle dealer of Hopkins, was struck and instantly killed.

Emil Scherer is dead at Mankato as a result of freezing his hands and feet so badly at Kasota one night last winter that the feet and some of the fingers had to be amputated. He has been in a Mankato hospital ever since.

The large livery barn of Downs Bros. at Spicer, ten miles northeast of Willmar, burned to the ground. Seven horses were saved, but eight perished, together with a lot of feed, harness and other equipment.

The body of a stranger was found hanging from a crossbar in a refrigerator car in the east end of the railroad yards at Willmar. He had hanged himself with a thin rope.

J. W. Torkelson of Bagley, one of the most prominent Democrats in Northern Minnesota, was instantly killed in a freight wreck at Redland.

George Ward's two-year-old son fell over the bank of the Little Cobb river at Medo and was drowned at the water's edge, with his feet on shore.

Mrs. Francis Monroe, seventy years old, was run down and killed by a speeding automobilist at Duluth.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Rev. Alexander McGregor, for twelve years pastor of the Park Congregational church at St. Paul, is dead at Whittier, Cal. Rev. Mr. McGregor went to California for his health two years ago, but after a year there he had a stroke of paralysis, from which he never fully recovered.

Mrs. Rose Jackson Gribble, the wife of the late Judge Edwin Gribble, is dead at St. Paul. She had lived in Minnesota for sixty years and had many friends. In the early days she routed a band of Indians, bent on pillage, with an empty rifle.

On the eve of his birthday, with his eighty-second anniversary but a few hours away, Colonel Francis Peteler, one of Minneapolis' oldest settlers and veteran of three wars, passed away at his home in that city.

Word has been received of the death at Sacramento, Cal., of George M. Gage, president of the first normal school opened in Minnesota, and first superintendent of the St. Paul public schools.

Mrs. Schulz, mother of C. G. Schulz, state superintendent of schools, is dead at her home at Winthrop. Mrs. Schulz was past eighty years of age and had been in ill health for several years.

PLANET PROBLEMS.

We Really Know Very Little About the Celestial Bodies.

"The amount of ignorance not yet removed concerning the planets is very great," writes E. S. Grew. "We do not know, for example, whether the planet Venus rotates. If it does it may possibly have a life and a vegetation like our own, though we suspect that it is clothed in eternal cloud. Of Saturn's rings we cannot say whether they consist of millions of tiny moons like brickbats or whether they may be even smaller still—a veil of shining dust. Of Jupiter we can only say that it is covered with clouds, though of their substance we know nothing, and, according to Professor Lowell and Sir William Huggins, some of the bands we see on it may be rifts in the clouds revealing the body of the planet. Little lines crisscross these bands. Photographs of Jupiter taken at Flagstaff observatory seem to indicate that these lines, too, are the upper clouds of Jupiter.

"But whenever we see a planet we see it badly. Even Mars, the most clearly revealed of them all, is constantly obscured by a refracting haze, so that even of the famous 'canals,' though nearly 500 in number, only a few are perceptible at a time, and an unskilled observer would probably not make them out at all. Sandstorms, sometimes snowstorms, sweep the surface of the planet, and because the winds of Mars are very gentle and slow moving these occurrences take a long time to pass by."—London Family Herald.

HE AMUSED THE CUBS.

Then the Young Lions Took a Turn at Amusing Him.

A negro attached to an African hunting party met with a curious adventure, says an English paper. Wandering one day from camp, he surprised two lion cubs at play and thoughtlessly commenced to amuse them. He was only too successful. The big cubs gamboled fearlessly about him and to his dismay refused to desist when he wished to leave them.

Realizing the danger to which he would be exposed should the mother appear, he began to run, but the cubs refused to be shaken off and in their play scratched his legs in fearful fashion.

That the creatures were thoroughly enjoying themselves was evident from their manifestations of delight, and before long their unusual cries brought a lioness leaping to the spot.

Trembling in every limb, the negro faced the growling animal, while the cubs continued to jump up at him, eager for further caresses. The enraged lioness moved round uneasily in a circle, man and beast keeping their eyes steadily on each other. Several times the lioness crouched to spring, but the man, from fear, never shifted his gaze.

At length, after what seemed an age, when the negro was ready to drop from exhaustion, the animal suddenly called her cubs away and disappeared into the surrounding scrub.

An Artist's Struggles.

Professor von Herkomer, the famous painter, had such a struggle to gain a living in his early days that had it not been for his inexhaustible stock of patience and self confidence he would probably have abandoned art entirely. He sold his first picture for 2 guineas and later on earned for a short time a couple of pounds weekly for a woodcut which he supplied to a comic paper. This modest salary coming to a stop, he was at his wits' end to know what to do. He applied to a troupe of minstrels for an engagement as zither player, but in vain, and then took to designing carpets. For some years he battled with poverty, achieving no success until he obtained employment on a weekly illustrated journal.—London Globe.

First Oil Well.

In the year 1859 E. L. Drake of Titusville, Pa., drove the first oil well. Like other pioneers, he was regarded as a dreamer or a fool, and people laughed at the idea of tapping a subterranean oil lake. It was only by pretending that he was in search of a bed of salt that he was able to get drillers to work for him. When the borer had reached a depth of about seventy feet Drake found his anticipations realized, and he was the possessor of an oil well which, with the aid of a hand pump, yielded him twenty-five barrels a day.—New York American.

Malacca Sticks.

The most costly walking sticks come from the Malay archipelago, and the most highly prized stick is the malacca cane. To insure straightness these sticks are reared in glass tubes. A good malacca should be a yard long, not less than an inch in diameter at the upper end, perfectly straight and smooth and of a very dark chocolate color, slightly mottled. It should be used delicately, for the lacquer which gives it its beautiful gloss is easily chipped.—London Graphic.

But They Can.

A BYRON STATUE.

Made For Westminster Abbey, but Dean Lincoln Refused It.

Many years ago some admirers of Lord Byron raised a subscription for a monument to the poet to be placed in Westminster abbey. Chantrey was requested to execute it, but on account of the smallness of the sum subscribed he declined, and Thorwaldsen was then applied to and cheerfully undertook the work.

In about 1833 the finished statue arrived at the customs house in London, but to the astonishment of the subscribers the dean of Westminster, Dr. Ireland, declined to give permission to have it set up in the abbey, and owing to this difficulty, which proved insurmountable, for Dr. Ireland's successor was of the same opinion, it remained for upward of twelve years in the customs house, when (1846) it was removed to the library of Trinity college, Cambridge.

The poet is represented in the statue of the size of life, seated on a ruin, with his left foot resting on the fragment of a column. In his right hand he holds a style up to his mouth, in his left a book, inscribed "Childe Harold." He is dressed in a frock coat and cloak. Beside him on the left is a skull, above which is the Athenian owl. The likeness is, of course, posthumous. Thorwaldsen was born Nov. 19, 1770, and died on March 24, 1844.—Exchange.

A LAD OF MYSTERY.

"That Awful Boy Jones," Who Tormented Queen Victoria.

For a little while about the middle of the nineteenth century "that awful boy Jones" was the torment of Queen Victoria's life, and his short career in public contains a mystery which would try the mettle of Sherlock Holmes.

He was a barber's apprentice who in some unexplained way discovered a passage into Buckingham palace, with which he alone was acquainted. When he was first found trespassing he was gently admonished and sent home. Soon after he was encountered again in the palace. He would not tell how he obtained access. Again he was sent home, and again he reappeared.

Once he calmly admitted that he had been lodging in the palace for a fortnight. He had laid snug during the day, sleeping in the royal apartments, and at night had wandered from room to room, helping himself to the food left over from royal repasts. He had seen the queen repeatedly and indeed had never been far from her.

The matter was considered so serious that the boy was summoned before a special meeting of the privy council. He refused to give any account of his secret. Soon after he disappeared, and it is supposed that he was removed under state protection.—London Globe.

Grant In the Saddle.

Grant was at his best in the saddle. The one real record that he made for himself at the academy, the one time that he excelled all his fellows, was at the final mounted exercises of his graduating class, when, riding a famous horse named York, he was called upon to clear the leaping bar that the gruff old riding master had placed higher than a man's head. He dashed out from his place in the ranks, a smooth faced, slender young fellow on a powerful chestnut sorrel, and galloped down the opposite side of the hall, turned and went directly at the bar, the great horse increasing his pace as he neared it, and then, as if he and his rider were one, rising and clearing it with a magnificent bound. The leap is still recorded at the academy as "Grant's upon York."—St. Nicholas.

A Singular Marriage Custom.

The Kurds have a very curious and somewhat dangerous marriage custom, which one would think would be more honored in the breach than in the observance. The husband, surrounded by a bodyguard of twenty or thirty young men, carries his wife home on his back in a scarlet cloth and is desperately assaulted the whole way by a number of girls. Sticks and stones are hurled at the bridegroom, who in the coming home with his bride can hardly be considered a very happy man, for the irate amazons often inflict on him marks which he carries to the grave. It may be that among the lady pursuers are some of the bridegroom's former "flames," who turn the mock attack into downright earnest to avenge slighted love.

Quite a Comfort.

"There was a time when they put men in jail for debt," said the bill collector severely.

"Well," answered the fretted citizen, "I don't know but a good, stout jail, where your creditors couldn't send in cards or call you up on the telephone, would be a great deal of a comfort."—Washington Star.

Experience Would Tell.

"I want an easy chair," said the householder, entering the store.

"Yes, sir," said the salesman. "What sort?"

"I don't know yet," was the answer. "Let me look into the boss' office and see what he has. He ought to be a judge."—Buffalo Express.

A Marrying Man.

"Are you a marrying man?" was asked of a somber looking gentleman at a recent reception.

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply; "I'm a clergyman."

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, MAY 5, 1910. NUMBER 19

"THE ROYAL CHEF" AND "A KNIGHT FOR A DAY."

Two Musical Comedys Secured for the Opening of the Auditorium.

The formal opening of Thief River Falls' new auditorium will be on Friday and Saturday evenings, May 27 and 28. The building is now being decorated by artists sent direct from the studios of the Twin City Scenic company and will present a most beautiful appearance for the opening evening.

On the evening of May 27, the beautiful musical comedy, "The Royal Chef," will be presented by a company of fourty people. It contains more song hits, more witty lines, more attractive girls, in fact, more that pleases a critical audience than any musical comedy ever offered in America. The company is one of the best on the road, and has presented this play in nearly every large city in the United States with great success. On the afternoon of the 29th, this company will give a matinee, presenting "The Royal Chef," and on the evening of the 29th will present "A Knight for a Day," another musical comedy also said to be a great success.

The committee having in charge the opening believe they are very fortunate in securing such a high class play, and will expect a large attendance. The time for the sale of advance seats has not been determined upon, but will probably be on the 20th of May. The price of admission has not yet been decided upon.

The Best Location.

Thief River Falls wishes Uncle Sam to move his land office for that district, which is at present at Crookston, to that city and petitions are being circulated with this object in view. It is claimed that Crookston is far removed from the 300,000 acres of government land in that district, while Thief River Falls is just about centrally located and has fine railroad and boat connections with all parts of it.—Little Falls Herald.

The Central Location.

Guy Powell's suggestion that the land office should be moved to a more central point than Crookston seems to have borne fruit. We understand Thief River Falls is preparing to circulate petitions to locate it there. This is the center of what homestead land there is left in the northern part of Minnesota, and is the logical point for the location of the land office.—Warroad Plaindealer.

Son of Albert Eve Killed.

Louis Lonson last week received a letter from Albert Eve, a former resident of this city and also of Highlanding, but now located at Millbank, S. D. Mr. Eve stated that his oldest son, Alfred, was killed on the 9th of April, being accidentally shot, but gave no further particulars.

The Logical Location.

Last week we published a news article in regard to the proposed removal of the U. S. land office from its present location to Thief River Falls, a movement having been started by Guy H. Powell and others of Warroad. Since the greater part of the business done at the office in question comes from territory northeast of Crookston there is no logical reason why the office should not be removed to Thief River Falls, more so since it would mean a considerable saving to those who have business transactions there.—Badger Herald-Rustler.

Developers at Crookston.

The summer meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development association will be held at Crookston Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, June 1, 2, and 3, 1910. Wednesday evening the delegates will be the guests of the Polk County Development association at a social meeting. Thursday and Friday will be devoted exclusively to business. Subjects of vital importance to us all will be discussed by speakers of national reputation. This will be the biggest gathering of Minnesota boosters ever held.

The program is now being prepared and will soon be ready for distribution. Apportionment of delegates will be mailed each county development association in a few days.

THE SENIOR CLASS PLAY WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Young Men and Women Did Themselves Proud Friday Evening.

The Senior's class play, "The Braino Man" which was presented in the new auditorium last Friday evening, was a decided success, and all who took part deserve special mention. Much of the success of the play was, of course, due to those who had leading parts, and among those were Ward Sharbach, Louis Iverson, George Rice, Lena Lonson, Josie Weeks and Lillian Mussey. The capacity of the new auditorium was nearly taxed to its limit to accomodate the large crowd that turned out to witness the performance and all felt that they had received the full value for their money. The following are those who took part in the play:

The Old Minnesota Home.

Occasionally a good man grows dissatisfied with his community. The milk is too yellow and the honey too sweet, and he doesn't like to have them flow over his land anyway.

So he parts with his farm, sells his live stock and "other articles to numerous to mention" and moves to Oklahoma.

There he takes his good Minnesota money and buys a farm which today is and tomorrow is not, because the wind has blown it away.

Or he tries it in the west slushing around in the mud irrigating a strip of bottom so narrow that a cow could jump over it.

Then he hears of Texas and goes down there to hunt the bag of gold at the end of the rainbow. In the daytime he scratches the sandburs out of his flesh and in the night centipedes crawl over his face.

When his money is all gone he begins to feel like he did the first night he ever stayed away from home.

He yearns back to his old Minnesota home till tears come into his eyes and he almost chokes with sobs. He would give a months work to see the cows stand by the bars of his old Minnesota home.

He remembers the corn silking in the field he once owned, the wheat turning yellow for harvest, the clover stretching away in a carpet of red and green, richer than the rugs of Persia.

He thinks of the large shade trees where the children used to play, the huge mass of roses bushes in the corner of the lot and a thousand of other things that touch the heart and prove the whimsical power.

Happy is the man who wakes from sleep to find that he has wandered from his community only in his dreams.—Ex.

Contract Is Let.

The general contract for the construction of the new German Lutheran Church on the East Side was awarded to C. M. Wilson last week. Mr. Wilson's bid was $2,278.

Some More Facts.

Some time ago, there was an article handed us about the mail order houses, and we have got another one for you:

We have often heard people make this remark about a town:

Gee! this is a bum town; no money in circulation and there isn't any work that we can get to do around here at all. I am going to go to a town that is something. Now how many of you ever stopped to answer this question—What makes a town? Is it the people that live there, or is it the people that come there to do their business? What would a town amount to if every one of us living there would send every penny that they got, away to some mail order house?

It is like this, the property owners have to pay taxes. They can't very well get out of paying them, and this money in turn is used for a great many purposes. It pays our public officers and build good public buildings, and is used in so many ways that we haven't space to tell about them. In fact, any one that has a reasonable amount of intelligence dont need to read about it, they can figure it out for themselves.

We will recite one instance. Here are our public schools, one of the grandest institutions in the United States. And who supports them, is it the mail order house? Not much! It is the man that owns some property and has a certain amount of taxes to pay annually, and we have been informed by good authority that the merchant is the one that has got a good big tax to pay every year. And how is he going to pay them if the people send all of their money out of the country. They will send away for an order of goods and never give the home merchant a chance at the order at all. And then look at the freight they pay when they get the goods. When you come to think of all of these things you are not very much ahead in the end, and you are not giving the home merchant a fair deal at all.

A POLISH SETTLEMENT FOR EASTERN MARSHALL COUNTY

So Says Hon. Frank Grygla and He Should Surely Know.

Hon. Frank Grygla, better known as the "Father of the Polish National Alliance," and Commissioner of the Alliance for Minnesota and Nebraska, in whose honor the town of Grygla, in eastern Marshall county, is named, was at Fram over Sunday to confer with A. W. Clark, President of the Settler's Drainage Association, on matters of the highest import to Northwestern Minnesota.

Mr. Grygla comes of one of the ancient and noble families of Poland, his father being Count Gryglaszzewski. In the revolution of 1863-4 young Grygla, a mere boy, took an active part and was left for dead on the battlefield and fell into the hands of Russians. Desperate as were his seven wounds he recovered, was tried and transported for life to Siberia. In making his escape from Siberia he walked 14000 miles, probably the longest authentic journey on foot ever made and under the most perilous circumstances.

To shorten up a most interesting story of peril and suffering, overcome by a castiron will, young Grygla landed in the United States, where his patriotism and services for his country were at once recognized and honored by his election to the high office of president of the Polish National Alliance, comprising at this time near three millions of people.

Entering trade in Minneapolis Mr. Grygla soon became known in the politics of the city and state, heading the Hennepin county delegates to the Chicago convention that nominated Garfield and again when McKinley was nominated the first time.

After serving his countrymen for ten years as president of the Alliance Mr. Grygla resigned and was elected Honorary President for life. He is also Commissioner for the Alliance for Minnesota and Nebraska, the only one who has two states.

Being of an agricultural nation, the organization has accumulated a fund of over two million dollars to assist their countrymen on to farms, usually in small colonies. The first requisite of membership in a colony is United States citizenship or a declaration to become a citizen. The second is that the family has accumulated capital to the amount of $1500.00

Mr. Grygla has been active in this work and has himself located several of these colonies, one at Stephens, Minn. For several months the drainage works in eastern Marshall and western Beltrami counties have been under the eye of the leading men of this organization, and feeling that he should do some honor to the town which took his name, Mr. Grygla proposed to settle a colony of 200 families around the town of this name in eastern Marshall county, and at a conference last winter succeeded in having $1,000.00 set aside for the purpose.

It would be unbecoming in us to say more than that, after searching investigations, Mr. Grygla's unexpected visit was, principally to engage Mr. A. W. Clark, to take charge of the location, both on vacant lands and on improved farms of this number of people. There is a vast amount of work in this and Mr. Clark is nearing 70, he has not decided as it will involve some changes in his own plans and location, whether to accept the responsibility or not. So the matter was left open awaiting an agent from the cities with plans and specifications.

That Grygla will get the colony there is little room for doubt and we hasten to congratulate the pioneers of that city on its bright prospects.

There Will Be Something Doing.

The effort to secure telephone communication with Crookston over the Tri-State lines has incidentally brought forth a movement to remove the U. S. Land office from Crookston to Thief River Falls. The project of removing the land office was probably used as a bluff but the northern counties have taken it seriously and there will be something doing to make Thief River Falls the land office town.—Roseau Times.

PROBABLY IN THE RIVER

Little Three Year Old Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry, Missing.

Was Last Seen About Three O'Clock on Monday Afternoon of This Week.

The three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry, who reside up the Red Lake river about fifteen miles, near Kratka postoffice is missing and it is believed that she is in the bottom of the Red Lake river. She was last seen about three o'clock Monday afternoon and a diligent search has been made for her since that time by the neighbors and friends of the girls parents.

It is almost certain that the girl is in the bottom of the Red Lake river, as she was last seen playing near to the bank of the river, but, although the river has been dragged for some distance, no trace of the girls body can be found and it will probably be several days before it will float to the top. All of the country in the vicinity of the Henry home has been searched.

Locals Win First Game.

The local ball tossers "did" the Red Lake Falls bunch to the tune of 2 to 0 in a fast and exciting game at the fair grounds last Sunday. Altho the down river bunch was at no time in any great danger of scoring, the game was an exciting one throout, and both teams did some excellent work. On account of the inclement weather the attendance was considerable smaller than that which generally greets the first game of the season.

TO BUILD SEWERS

Council in Favor of Establishing Two New Sewer Districts in City.

Ordinance Governing Closing of Saloons Passed its Second Reading.

At a meeting of the city council held Tuesday evening, it was decided to establish three new sewer systems in the city, and this will be done as soon as a competent engineer can be engaged to do the work.

One of the systems will run north on Horace avenue and will be dug deep enough to give service to the residents of North LaBree and Main avenue residents. Another system will run north on either Horace or Knight avenue will serve all the residents of the city living between the business portion of the city and the Great Northern tracks. The other systems will be on the East Side and run from the Knox school house to the river.

The ordinance requiring that all blinds, curtains, or other obstruction in the windows of saloons be removed from eleven o'clock in the evening until five o'clock in the morning and on Sundays and election days passed its second reading and will be a law as soon as published. The enforcement of this ordinance will give the saloons no opportunity to violate the state law as to closing.

Did Not Resign.

Last week Milton Forder announced that he would resign as alderman from the Second ward, giving as his reason that there was too much work for a small remuneration. The story was at once started that Mr. Forder was resigning because certain parties had made attack upon his record as a member of the city council, and this put the fighting spirit into the Second ward member. The result was that Mr. Forder did not resign at the regular meeting held Tuesday evening, and he asks those who criticise his actions as a member of the city council to state their objections. He says that he does not want to serve, but does not desire to make any retreat if placed on the firing line.

Thompson May Be Candidate.

A. L. Thompson, of Mahnomen, was in the city Tuesday, being enroute from a trip to Roseau county to his home. It is quite likely that Mr. Thompson will become the candidate for the legislature from the Mahnomen-Norman county district, and if he does the people to the south of us are to be congratulated. Mr. Thompson is a "live wire" and would make an excellent representative, and one that would have much influence in the legislature. He should be nominated without opposition.

Miss Godward to Locate Here.

Miss Ruth Godward, a sister of Miss Blanche Godward a teacher in the local high school, and a graduate student of music of Minneapolis, has decided to locate here permanently and has opened up a studio in the Dobner-Meehan block. In regard to a recital given some time ago, in which Miss Godward played a prominent part, the Minneapolis Tribune says the following:

"Ruth Godward, a pupil of James A. Bliss, was heard in recital assisted by Marion Baernstein, violiniste, and Rose Baernstein, accompaniste, Tuesday evening, April 26th, at the Joseph Frank building, 49 Eight St. South.

Miss Godward gave a scholarly reading of Bach's "Bourree," which was followed by the first movement of Schumann's "Vienna Carnival Scene" brilliantly executed.

In her second group which included the two McDowell numbers "In Autumn" and "Improvication Op. 46, No. 4," and Prelude in C sharp minor" by Rachmaninoff, she showed technical excellence, colored with warmth and feeling. Great Brilliancy, dash and verve characterized the interpretation of her final number, Mendelssohn's "Rondo Brilliant Op." of which the orchestral part on the second piano was played by Mr. Bliss.

Miss Baernstein, gave with charm and distinction two groups of violin numbers among which were Beethoven's "Minuet" Borowski's "Adoration" "Romance by Vieutemps and "To My Homeland" by Miska Hauser.

If arrangements were not made at the time the icehouse was built and filled for the drainage of the water therefrom, this should be attended to before the warm weather sets in.

Those who have tried it recommend hot soapsuds as an excellent means of ridding cabbage and cauliflower of the green worms which infest them. A strong resin soap and soft water give good results.

Dampness, blight and rot funguses go hand in hand. On this account many irrigated sections of the semi-arid west are almost entirely free from these pests, due to the bright, fine weather which prevails almost uninterruptedly during the growing season.

A dollar a bushel is a good price for wheat, but the first prize bushel which was recently exhibited at the meeting of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment association brought $64. It was of the winter variety and will doubtless be used for seed in the growing of prize wheat for next year.

The spraying of previously untreated orchards can be counted upon to increase the yield of fruit from three to four times as well as to remarkably improve its quality. What it will do for a given orchard can easily be worked out on the above basis. The cost of spraying good sized bearing trees in materials, labor and machinery should not exceed 20 cents annually for three or four sprayings.

The shakes, or long split shingles, which have been used in many sections of the west in place of the ordinary shingle, are cut chiefly from the sugar pine, which possesses a remarkably straight and even grain. The water follows the grooves of the grain very closely, while the method of laying them insures a good circulation of air and tends to check the rot which is so destructive of closely laid common shingles.

The Delicious apple when tasted fully bears out its name, being juicy and of a delicious flavor and possessing a red color that is hardly surpassed by the Spitzenburg. However, it is tender like the Jonathan and of about the same season and should be put on the market by Christmas time if the consumer is to get it at its prime. The Delicious apple has been on the market but a few years, being originated by a southern Iowa nurseryman.

Many a municipality has a bad blot on its reputation because of the wretched condition of the thoroughfares leading thereto when timely work done with a road grader and drag would greatly improve their condition. In too many cases these same "rocky" roads are found in townships and towns whose road supervisors or street commissioners are drawing good salaries for taking care of the highways, while the equipment for keeping them in order is acquiring a coat of rust in some vacant lot or alley.

With a view to doing some advanced work along the line of developing improved strains of standard American varieties of potatoes and to develop new ones the experiment station at Fort Collins, Colo., a state where the Irish potato finds a remarkably congenial home, is seeking to learn the history of well known and established varieties for the purpose of knowing of the inheritance which lies behind them. Blanks will be furnished to any person who is able to give the information, while those who aid in the work will be given copies of the publication on the history of the potato.

Not one of the numerous spring vegetables is more toothsome than asparagus, a small bed of which will be sufficient to furnish all a family will want and some to spare. In starting a bed small plants may be used or portions of the roots of an old bed secured before the sprouts start. The plants should be set to a depth of about eight inches in soil made mellow and enriched with a good supply of well rotted stable manure. Asparagus is a gross feeder, and the ground can hardly be made too rich. The bed should be well watered, and if the rainfall is not enough it should be irrigated during the growing season.

Statistics which have been compiled by the department of agriculture at Washington contain some interesting figures relative to exports of farm products during the past sixty years. They show that these exports, consisting chiefly of cotton, grain and grain products and packing house products, have increased in value from an average of $150,000,000 a year in the five year period from 1851 to 1855 to an average of $875,000,000 a year in the period 1901 to 1905, while in two subsequent years, 1907 and 1908, they have exceeded in value the above average, totaling $1,000,000,000. The statistics show that the increase in the volume and value of agricultural exports has far outstripped the increase in the country's population.

FATE AND ONE MRS. MAGUIRE.

Between Them They Brought the Parted Couple Together.

By M. LOUISE CUMMINS.

Mrs. Maguire looked up from her knitting a second time to meet the same pair of brown eyes. Again a sense of familiarity in their gaze went over her.

"And, sure, there'd be nothing strange in that," she soliloquized, "after me being attendant in this waiting room for the past fifteen years."

Nevertheless her mind went back gropingly trying to place the girl sitting opposite. She gave a quick glance and reached what she sought with such suddenness that she fairly started.

"'Tis the very wan—the very wan," she muttered. "But, Lord love us all, what has changed her so much?"

Presently she rose, holding her knitting in her left hand, and made a little tour of the room, picking up a paper here, straightening a chair there, apparently intent only upon her business. But she paused near the woman who had attracted her attention.

"'Tis tiresome work waiting for trains, ma'am," she hazarded.

"It is, indeed!"

At sight of such woe in her eyes, which she had once seen filled with such blessedness of joy that, as she said, "they were like twin lights on an altar," Mrs. Maguire's heart ached.

"Though there's them that don't mind it," she went on. "Look there, now," with a sidelong nod to where in the outer waiting room a young couple were seated oblivious of time and place.

"They makes me think of a pair that sat in that very spot—let me see, it must be all of four years ago," she continued reminiscently. "They had missed their train and had to wait six mortal hours for the western express. Well, if you'll believe me, I don't think they knew 'twas as many minutes."

Mrs. Maguire saw the hands of the woman come slowly together suddenly in her lap.

"Did you ever see them again?" she asked slowly.

"Not her."

The dark eyes came round in a flash.

"And him?"

"Well, as sure as you live"—Mrs. Maguire had seated herself and was knitting complacently—"'twas only last week. He come in and just sit in that very spot. I took no notice to him at first, but he looked so broke up I had to. It seemed all wrong to see him sitting without her."

The woman at her side sprang up.

"It is suffocating in here!" she panted.

Then she sank back into the chair.

"You recognized me," she said wearily.

"And if I did, a-lanive"—Mrs. Maguire laid a soothing palm on her knee, the soft crooning of her mother tongue coming back to her—"I meant no harm by what I said. Sure, when I looked across the room you made me think of a bit of a primrose you'd see in a boreen at home wilting because the bush that sheltered it was tore away."

"And I thought"—her slender body seemed to contract with the agony of recollection—"God help me! What I thought was not the truth."

"God help us all when we begins to doubt the wan that's dearer to us than our heart's blood. 'Tis well to be sure"—she went on slowly—"sure before you spake the word that can't be onspoken."

"If some one had said that to me then!" Her breathing seemed to tear the delicate throat. "But I would not listen to him, and now—now it is too late!"

"'Tis never that," Mrs. Maguire said, with conviction.

"It is. He said if I left him it would be final."

If Mrs. Maguire's fingers flew her thoughts went at such bewildering pace that she started when her companion rose. She took and patted between her own the hand held out to her, looking beyond with unseeing eyes.

"She'll come back," she thought, with the assurance of one who knew. "And he, mother of God! Isn't it the pity of the world to see them parted? And for nothing at all, most likely!"

It was strange after that on days when a slight figure in dark blue sat in the ladies' waiting room how many excuses Mrs. Maguire found for excursions to different parts of the station, with what eagerness she sat out on these expeditions and with dejection written in every line of her comely face when she returned.

"'Tis watching for him she is herself," she thought, meeting the wistful interrogation of the dark eyes. And never did maiden look for the coming of her lover as did Mrs. Maguire for the tall figure which had imprinted itself on her memory.

It was a matter of genuine importance, however, which called her away one day just as her visitor entered.

"I'll be back in a minute. 'Tis the superintendent himself wants me," she explained, smoothing down a snowy apron in a little bustle of excitement.

Half an hour later in returning she passed by the long line of tracks. A crowd surrounding a woman whose dark head was covered with a cotton handkerchief attracted her attention, and she drew near.

"What's the trouble, Mike?" she asked a uniformed fellow countryman.

"Thim dagoes," Mike jerked a thumb over one shoulder. "Wan of thim lost his mother, and nothin' 'd do the young divil but to skrewge through the gates and try to cross the tracks just as No. 57 was pullin' in. If 'twasn't for that gintleman there there'd be one foreigner less to grow up in the country."

Mrs. Maguire turned to look at the tall figure. One glance was sufficient. A moment later she was hanging to his arm with all the pressure of her 175 pounds.

"Wait, sir!" she panted. "For the love of heaven, don't go!"

He looked down amazed.

"Oh, I'm not mad; don't you think it." And, indeed, the gray eyes raised to his were wonderfully sane behind their steel rimmed glasses.

"She's in there," Mrs. Maguire whispered.

"She! Who?"

"Herself—the little girl you married four years ago. Oh, didn't I see you? Sure, 'twas little else I did that blessed day but look at the picture you made. The curses of the Almighty on whoever came between you, for sure you must have the kind, brave heart to do what you just done."

The man paled as he had not done when looking death in the face.

"Go!" Mrs. Maguire gave him a push toward the waiting room door. "She's in there, I tell you, eating her heart out for a sight of you. And," grasping him again, "don't you say a word, but just take her along home."

As his broad back disappeared Mrs. Maguire laid hold of a newspaper stand for support.

A few minutes later, when, with flushed cheeks, she passed humming a bar of "Eileen Aroon" above a lump which threatened to choke her, they were sitting where they had sat four years before.

"Dear," he said huskily, his head bent over hers, "that we should meet here—it was fate."

"And Maggie Maguire," added that worthy woman as she entered her own domain.

Untold Riches.

Wealth is merely comparative. One's possessions constitute a pittance or a fortune, according to one's point of view. The Rev. Frederic Denison tells a story of one of the inhabitants of old Westerly, R. I., which shows there is no general standard of riches. The young man, prompted by patriotism and desire for gold, had enlisted in the uncertain business of privateering.

On returning home after many and various cruises he was thankfully greeted by his kin and anxious friends. His mother, with maternal solicitude, inquired:

"Well, Harry, how have you made out? Did you get much money?"

"Oh, yes, mother," answered the adventurer, "I had good luck. I am rich. I shall have enough, with prudence and care, to carry me through life, I hope."

"I am glad, my son. How much have you?"

"Well, I don't exactly know yet, but I think when we settle up it will amount to $30."—Youth's Companion.

Curries and Chutneys.

True Indian curry sauce is an invention of unknown antiquity. The Hindoo makes it fresh as used from pounded up various aromatic herbs and nuts, boiling it in ghee, a butter, and cocoanut water. It is very mild and aromatic and only slightly pungent and hot. As a rule, it is poured over heaps of light, snowy cooked rice, to which meat is added, if it is to be had. Mussulmans and Portuguese of later India took it up and added strong cayennes, garlic and onions and other strong spices abhorred by the natives. East Indians also use a chutney sauce made of pickled green mangoes and eat on the side little spratlike dried fishes, to which is given a high flavor by keeping until putrefied, and the chutney and fish are eaten along with curried rice. Curries are antiseptic, kill worms in the insides and are a tonic to the stomach and circulation and no doubt save from sickness in climates of germ laden water and heat of India.—New York Press.

Boasted of His Costly Napkins.

Diego de Torres, the Spanish ambassador, who visited the emperor of Morocco in 1547, found that knives, spoons and forks were unknown at the royal table. Each guest helped himself with his fingers and cleaned his hand with his tongue, excepting the emperor, who performed that office on the head of a black boy whom he retained by his side in readiness. The emperor, observing the ambassador smile, asked him with what Christian kings wiped their hands at meals and what such things were worth. "Fine napkins," replied the ambassador, "a clean one at every meal, worth a crown apiece or more." "Don't you think this napkin much better," said the emperor, wiping his hands again on the black boy's head, "which is worth 70 or 80 crowns?"

Foolish Curiosity.

Many a wild animal has lost its life by its own foolishness. Nearly every creature is anxious to learn something about what is new to it. Of this habit hunters take full advantage. In the chase of the guanaco, a llama that is found in South America from Peru to Patagonia, the hunter invites it to come within range of his gun merely by lying on his back and kicking up his heels in the air. The guanaco draws near to this funny looking object just as curiously as the fly walks into the spider's parlor, and ere it knows who's who or what's what it is killed or wounded by the sportsman. So silly a creature it is that it will not even bolt when the bullet has missed it, for it thinks the flash and the report are part and parcel of the fun.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

One of the most splendid and impressive ceremonies in the history of the Catholic church in America will take place at the St. Paul seminary, Thursday, May 19, when six new bishops, elevated to the plenary power of the priesthood by the nomination of Archbishop Ireland and the approval of Pope Pius X., will be consecrated to their new duties and will receive the episcopal insignia of their new honors.

Demands that the Republicans, Democrats and Prohibitionists place a county option plank in their state platforms were made by the state county option steering committee. A resolution carrying the demand and pledging the county optionists to support only such candidates for state office as are known to stand for county option was adopted at the committee meeting in St. Paul.

Invisible assets of banks, such as territorial bonds, are subject to state taxation, according to a decision handed down by Judge John Day Smith in the Hennepin county district court. He gave judgment against the Farmers and Mechanics Savings bank of Minneapolis for $4,197.19, being an assessment at the rate of 27.75 mills on $151,000 on the surplus stock of the bank.

John Peterson, collector of customs for the Minnesota district, reports that the total collections during March, 1910, amounted to $121,253.67, against $115,569.44 in March, 1909, showing an increase of $5,684.23, or more than 4 per cent. This increase is due to an increase in the general volume of business.

The fifty-second annual convention of the Minnesota Sunday School association was held last week at Minneapolis. After considerable discussion and the receipt of invitations from members of the commercial clubs of several cities Mankato was chosen as the place for the 1911 convention.

The anti-saloon people of Detroit have secured an order from Judge Baxter, returnable in Fergus Falls, citing five members of the city council of the former city to show cause why they should not be removed from office because they voted to grant liquor licenses to four saloon men.

Jacob Johnson was drowned at Swan lake, near Bovey, as a result of being tipped out of a boat into twenty feet of water. His companion, John Anderson, had a narrow escape and was resuscitated only after two hours of work by rescuers.

Mike Auda, a saloon keeper of Chisholm, has received a letter from the old country announcing that an uncle, Laurence Auda, in Visteoro, Italy, is dead, leaving a large estate, of which Auda's share is about $60,000.

Parkers Prairie, Otter Tail county, will receive the highest saloon license fee paid in the state this year. Nels P. Nelson has been granted an exclusive license at $2,700.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Ruth, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Feldman of Northome, was fatally burned at a bonfire, when, in lighting one of the matches, her dress became ignited. Screams from the children attracted several neighbors and when they reached the scene the child was wrapped in flames.

Driving home from his day's work Michael O'Connor, teamster for the Thompson-McDonald Lumber company of St. Paul was thrown from his seat and, striking squarely on his head, his skull was fractured. He died shortly after reaching the city hospital.

Henry Anderson of Battle Lake, sixteen years old, was accidentally shot through the abdomen when a revolver in the hands of Millard Raustad, a playmate, was discharged. He cannot live.

John Zakrazek was instantly killed by a cavein at the Clark mine near Hibbing. His partner, John Debeljak, was injured but will recover.

Thomas King of Cayuga, N. D., died at Rochester as a result of being struck by a freight train in the Northwestern yards there.

John Desbo, an employe of the Oliver Iron Mining company, was killed by a switch engine near Chisholm.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

While a Moorhead street car was rounding the corner one block from his place of business H. W. Waldron, for many years a citizen of Moorhead, fell from the rear step of the car, striking on his head on the pavement. He died in a few minutes. The victim of the accident had suffered for years from frequent attacks of heart disease and it is believed he fell to his death when stricken by one of these attacks.

A. J. Scofield, an old soldier and pioneer resident of Ortonville, is dead. Mr. Scofield served as judge of the probate court for fourteen years and was very prominent in politics; also in G. A. R. circles, having served in the Civil War with Company B, Third Minnesota infantry. He was in his seventy third year.

D. E. Olive, a prominent retired merchant of Rushford, is dead. He was well known throughout Fillmore county.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd, 1910.

Nearly every newspaper in this section of the state has had something to say regarding the proposed removal of the U. S. Land Office from Crookston to Thief River Falls, and everyone has been favorable to the removal with the exception of the Sunbeam.

As will be seen by an announcement published this week, A. L. Hanson, of Ada, has decided to become a candidate for the office of state senator. Mr. Hanson is a man that always stands for legislation that is to the best interest of the people and it is going to give the NEWS pleasure to support him in this campaign.

The Bemidji Sentinel announces that Albert Berg became a candidate for state senator in this district becuse Tom Shevlin, the big Minneapolis lumberman who has two saw mills in Beltrami county, urged him so to do. Albert used to have a mind of his own, and we are anxious to hear what he has to say regarding the matter.

A. C. Weiss, of the Duluth Herald, was last week elected a director of the Associated Press, the greatest newsgathering organization in the world. Mr. Weiss is publishing the best paper in the state of Minnesota, and while the Duluth field is not near as large as that of the Twin Cities, the time is not far distant when it will be, and then great things can be expected from the Herald.

St. Paul is going to have quite a number of candidates before the Republican state convention. It is conceded that Moses E. Clapp will be endorsed for United States senator and that Judge Jaggard will be nominated for associate justice of the supreme court. That had ought to be enough for a city that always goes Democratic, but now Judge O'Brien wants the endorsement for supreme court judge and George Dix wants to be clerk of the supreme court. No wonder the Cambridge Independent says that the bristles of the saint have crowed off his halo.

Worthington Globe: "Down with the politicians and nature fakirs" is the cry of the day. The country is in need of statesman. Men who will stand by the people after election as well as before. Men of integrity and ambition to do something. Men who do not seek the plaudits of the press and people and the "vainglory in foreign wars" but men who are willing to do something for their country's sake and whose soul's ambitionis not "how much is it worth to me?" We want men who do not think they have a job for life because they have held office for several years. Their offices may need investigation and when the bump comes it will be hard to save the pieces. We are in favor of house cleaning.

BUILD UP

in spring and summer, it's the natural time to store up health and vitality for the year.

Scott's Emulsion

is Nature's best and quickest help. All Druggists

About every other day the Crookston Times comes out with a long article telling of the demand of the common people of Northwestern Minnesota that Albert Kaiser be given the nomination for state treasurer. The Times is evidently not seeing things right and is mistaking Andy Stephens for the common people. As a matter of fact a well posted man from Clearwater county, the home of Kaiser, informed us recently that Mr. Kaiser will not control the delegation from his home county. They will vote for Kaiser's nomination in the state convention as long as he does not stand any chance of winning, but will not allow that gentleman to trade the delegation. If that is the strength of Kaiser in his home county, how about the rest of the common "peepul" of this section?

New York Weekly: It is a well understood fact that it is not work that kills, but worry, and from this text some most sensible and profitable discourses have been preached during recent years. The conclusion of the whole matter is this: Brain work is conducive to health and longevity, while brain worry causes disease and shortens life. The truth of this statement, and its application to what we see around us, are evident enough: yet it is well that such subjects should be continually discussed. A life of intellectual labor, although severe like that performed by the judges of our highest courts, or by scholars and persons devoted to literary pursuits; if unmixed with excitement, and followed with regularity is not only a happy life, but it is seen also to promote bodily health and long life. On the other hand, mental cares attended with suppressed emotions and occupations which from their nature are subject to great vicissitudes of fortune and constant anxiety break down the lives of the strongest. Every one has seen a class of men whose early mental training was deficient, and to whom the writing of memoranda was irksome, engaged in middle life in great undertakings, and taxing the memory with a mass of complicated business accounts, simply because they could more easily remember than write. Their power for memory for a certain kind of facts is often truly astonishing; but the strain is at last too much and they die before their time.

To Have Sewerage.

The meeting of East Side citizens held last Saturday evening to talk over the matter of having a system of sewerage established on the East Side was very largely attended and it was decided to establish one system from the Knox school house to the river this summer Next year other systems will be put in.

Curious Street Names.

The list of curious street names is inexhaustible. Bermondsey possesses a Pickle Herring street. Near Gray's Inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden ironically enough in the slums of the east end.

But for really bizarre street names one should go to Brussels. The Short Street of the Long Chariot, the Street of the Red Haired Woman and the Street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The Street of the One Person is, as one might guess, considerably narrower than Whitehall. But the cream of Brussels street names surely belongs to the Street of the Uncracked Silver Cocoanut. This in the original appears as one ponderous thirty-six letter word.—London Chronicle.

He Knew How It Was.

James' mother is one of those unfortunate individuals who "pick up" unconsciously every error in speech that they hear. This failing is a source of much amusement and comment in her family, as are also the habitual and glaring mistakes of Mrs. F., a very estimable acquaintance.

One day James' mother had been out and upon her return committed a grave offense against the mother tongue. Immediately little James confronted her, with upraised forefinger, and exclaimed in accusing tones, "Now, mother, you have been playing with Mrs. F. again!"—Delineator.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The Public Ownership party has filed the following list of candidates for state offices with the secretary of state: Governor, George E. Barrett, Puposky; lieutenant governor, L. M. Ayer, Minneapolis; secretary of state, Torkel Holland, Lengby; state treasurer, J. O. Malley, Two Harbors; railroad and warehouse commissioners, O. W. Sagolin of Minneapolis and L. L. Leith of St. Paul. The party leaders did not seem to remember that only one railroad and warehouse commissioner is to be elected this year.

No further action will be taken by state officials in regard to affairs at the Rochester insane hospital, which have been under investigation by two state boards, resulting in a conflict of opinions. Governor Eberhart has referred the whole matter back to the state board of control, which has already dismissed the charges of mismanagement as trivial.

Twelve St. Paul capitalists, bankers and business men aimed a blow at companies and individuals who lend money at exorbitant rates of interest when they decided to organize a company which will offer money to the poor and needy of the city at the uniform rate of 10 per cent per year.

The state of Minnesota, through the attorney general's office, has just completed negotiations for the purchase of twenty acres lying east of Minneopa state park, near Mankato, to be added to the park, thus rounding it out and preserving the scenic features.

The new council of Litchfield at its first meeting fixed the saloon license fee at $850. The license fee has heretofore been $750. An ordinance was ordered drawn prohibiting free lunches in saloons and dice throwing in any public place.

Governor Eberhart has received the resignations of Dr. Samuel G. Smith and Dr. Charles Lyman Green of St. Paul as members of the state board of visitors. Both gave pressure of other business as the reason for retiring.

Mrs. John A. Johnson, widow of Governor Johnson, has decided to accept the invitation extended her by Mme. Olive Fremstad to take a European trip as the guest of the prima donna.

In addition to $1,500,000 spent the past two years in building a new entrance line, tunnel and terminals, the Soo line will spend $250,000 or more this year in improvements in St. Paul.

The biennial convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen will be held in St. Paul commencing June 6.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Thomas Burke of Minneapolis was murdered and thrown into the river some place in Minneapolis in the opinion of the St. Paul police. The body was found at the St. Paul boom. A deep wound in the head, a crushed skull and the rifled pockets have convinced the St. Paul police that Burke was killed for his money.

In a desperate attempt to escape from the Hennepin county jail David Johnson, charged with grand larceny, attacked Mat Thune, night jailer, with an iron cup and knocked him senseless. The attempt to break jail was foiled by Charles Hillary, deputy night jailer, who struck Johnson over the head with a "billy."

Jacob Jacobson, twenty-eight years old, was found on the Rock Island track near Albert Lea so badly injured that he died in a few minutes. He is thought to have ridden on the northbound freight and, in jumping off before the train reached the station, fell under the wheels and lost his life.

Miss Mary Gohmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Gohmann of St. Augustine, Stearns county, is in a critical condition, having sustained serious injuries in a runaway. She was thrown against a tree and received internal injuries and it is feared that she will die.

Margaret Brown, the year-old daughter of Mrs. Anne Brown of St. Paul, fell from a porch at her home and fractured her skull, dying four hours later.

Gustav Kendal, a janitor at the Great Northern depot at St. Cloud, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

One veteran of the Civil war was overlooked in his extremity of age and disease and was allowed to die in the St. Louis county poorhouse. His name was August Strobel. His presence in the poorhouse was not known to the Duluth veterans until only a few hours before his death and he passed away before they could remove him.

Dr. Theodore Secor, last survivor of Wisconsin's constitutional convention in 1847 and a member of the committee which notified Abraham Lincoln of his nomination in 1860, died last week in Minneapolis at the age of ninety-six.

J. C. Woodworth, for twenty years a member of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce and president of the Hollister-Woodworth company, is dead in the Mill City, aged sixty years.

Nicholas Lehnen, a distinguished analytical chemist known all over the Northwest and a resident of St. Paul for twenty six years, is dead.

National Conservation Congress to Be Held There.

St. Paul has been awarded the National Conservation congress. The announcement was made at Washington by Thomas R. Shipp, secretary of the National Conservation association, that, after consideration of the claims of the rival cities seeking the honor of entertaining the congress, that a decision had been reached that it should be held in the Minnesota capital.

During the past week Secretary Shipp made a canvass by wire of the members of the executive committee, representing the congress and the association, whose duty it was to select the city in which the former body shall meet this year.

The replies were examined at the meeting between Messrs. Shipp and Baker. They were found to be almost unanimously in favor of the selection of St. Paul as the city in which the congress should assemble in September.

The holding of the conservation congress will be one of the most momentous events in the Northwest's economic history, and will attract to St. Paul hundreds of men who represent in action and in spirit the best in self-government. The selection of that city also indicates recognition of the attitude of the Northwest toward the modern conservation policy.

Theodore Roosevelt will be the central figure at the congress, and has promised to give the principal address.

FORMER TREASURER IN JAIL

School Board Official Charged With Forging Warrants.

A. O. Wharton, sixty years old, for years respected deacon in the Methodist church at Bruno, is in jail at Pine City charged with the forgery of school warrants amounting to about $6,000.

Mr. Wharton was brought back to Pine City by Cashier Greeley of the Pine City State bank. Mr. Greeley left Pine City several days ago as the result of information put in his possession, going to Parksville, Mo., ten miles north of Kansas City, where he found the object of his trip on a farm three miles in the country. Mr. Wharton was staying at the home of friends. He had gone there to settle the estate of a dead brother, it is said. He returned peaceably.

Mr. Wharton's alleged peculations date back to 1904, although most of the questioned warrants date within the past two or three years.

MINNEAPOLIS MEN STABBED

Angry Bookkeeper Accused of Using Knife on His Employers.

J. K. Elliott, president of J. K. Elliott & Co., grain commission merchants of Minneapolis, and George E. Sanborn, another officer of the firm, were, it is alleged, stabbed by Charles J. Dewey, a bookkeeper, now under arrest, who became frenzied at a reprimand administered by Sanborn.

The trouble occurred in the Elliott offices. The battle was fierce and before Dewey was stopped Sanborn had been slashed three times in the left side, while Elliott received a slash in the left leg while attempting to stop the affair. Both victims are at their homes.

At police headquarters Dewey admitted wielding the knife, but claims to have done so in self defense.

VICTIM OF DISEASED MEAT

Winona (Minn.) Capitalist Dies After Long Illness.

Seymour Brown, a Winona capitalist and prominent Elk, who took an active part in the Upper Mississippi River Improvement association work, is dead, aged forty-six of actenomycosis homonis of the lungs, a diseased condition due to the eating of beef from lumpy jawed cattle last December. He had been ill ever since he ate the meat.

Elliott to Succeed Forbes.

Letters received from the Philippine islands say it is rumored in the islands that Judge Charles B. Elliott, formerly of the Minnesota supreme court and now a member of the Philippine commission, will succeed W. Cameron Forbes as governor general of the Philippines.

Girl Dies From Poison.

Miss Dora Slonim, daughter of Abraham Slonim, a schoolgirl of sixteen years, is dead from self-administered poison at her home in Duluth. It is supposed she thought the carbolic acid was castor oil. Her parents say that she had no cause to commit suicide and never had talked of it.

Twenty three Women Indicted.

Twenty three women, accused of maintaining disorderly houses in Minneapolis, were indicted by the Hennepin county grand jury. Accompanying the indictments was a strong appeal for serious consideration of the cases.

ORGANIZED ON SATURDAY

Red Lake County Development Association Organized Here on Saturday.

Officers Elected and a Strong Set of Resolutions Were Adopted at Meeting.

The Red Lake County Development Association, an auxiliary organization to the Northern Minnesota Development association, was organized in this city last Saturday afternoon. Quite a number of delegates were present from Red Lake Falls and St. Hilaire and the meeting was a very harmonious one. Organizations was perfected by the election of the following officers:

President—Daniel Shaw.

Secretary—C. R. C. Baker.

Treasurer—Daniel Patterson.

Vice President—Dr. Wattson, W. B. Chishire, Julius Pleth, Math Barzen and Daniel Patterson.

The officers of the association were named as delegates to the Crookston convention.

Strong resolutions asking that the state legislature make a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of the state with a view of securing more settlers were passed. The resolutions also declared for re-apportionment of the state.

The resolutions were as follows:

Whereas, we believe that the state of Minnesota has not been alive to its opportunities and has through a policy of inaction permitted a large immigration to pass through and out of the state without making a proper and legitimate effort to place before the people of the nation its many advantages as a desirable place of residence.

Therefore, be it resolved that we urge upon the coming legislature of the state that it adopt a more liberal policy of advertisement of the advantages afforded by Minnesota to homeseekers, and that we hereby pledge ourselves to withold our support from any legislative candidate at the approaching election who does not express himself as entirely favorable to such a policy.

Futhermore, be it resolved that we urge upon the coming legislature of the state that it adopt a more liberal policy of advertisement of the advantages afforded by Minnesota to homeseekers and that we hereby pledge ourselves to withhold our support from any legislative candidate at the approaching election who does not express himself as entirely favorable to such a policy.

Further, we reaffirm the resolution adopted at the Bemidji convention in favor of legislative reapportionment and will refuse our support to any candidate for either the senate or house of representatives who is not known to be in favor of reapportionment.

Further resolved, that at this time we pledge our aid and financial support to the Northern Minnesota Development association recently orgnized at Bemidji and commend the vigorous and business like manner in which its officers have prosecuted the good work there begun.

Strong for Thief River Falls.

A move is now under headway to move the Land Office from Crookston to Thief River Falls. In commenting on the move we would say that the move would be a good one for the benefit of the people now living in this part of the state as well as the many hundreds of settlers that will be taking up homesteads the coming years. As it now is, with the Land Office at Crookston, it is entirely out of the homestead district and very inconvenient as well as expensive for homesteaders to take a home in northern Minnesota. Everything that can be done, should be done to make it as convenient as possible for the homesteaders of northern Minnesota. Settlers are what we want and must have, and the locating of the Land Office right in the homestead territory will have much to do with the settling of the land. Many times a few dollars has a good deal to do with a settler taking up his abode in this part of the state. The moving of the Land Office from Crookston to Thief River Falls will be the means of saving a number of dollars in car fare by each homesteader which the average homesteader can use very nicely in making improvements on his claim. Every farmer within a radius of fifty miles of Thief River Falls should take a special interest in the movement because the more settlers we have in the surrounding counties, the more progressive will be the country.—Newfolden Review.

A New Way To Pay An Overdraft

It was only a dainty little note from a woman depositor, but it caused a gentle merriment among the accountants and tellers of an up town bank. The institution caters to women, and the president has often remarked that the women depositors were in some respects more careful in their business methods than the men.

A few days ago the discovery was made that the account of one of the women depositors had been over drawn a few dollars. The usual notification in such cases was sent to the depositor, with the request that the account be made good. A prompt and polite reply was received from the delinquent. She apologized for the overdraft, thanked the bank officers for informing her of the fact so courteously—and inclosed her check on the same bank for the amount of the overdraft. It is needless to say that an explanationary note was sent to this depositor reminding her that an over draft was not a credit to be drawn upon. — Bede's Budget.

Dr. Cummings to Live in the East.

Dr. J. C. Cummings, who has been in New York City the past few months taking a post-graduate course in surgery, arrived in this village last week to close up his business interests and bid his friends farewell. The doctor was a resident of St. Hilaire for about six years and was always indentified in all matters of progress. The office equipment which he possessed was modern to the minute and is seldom seen in a village of this size. Mr. Cummings sold his residence here to Gust Fellman, who secures one of the finest properties in town. The doctor left today for Lewistown, Penn., his old home where two of his brothers reside. About June 1st he expects to leave as family physician with a Lewistown capitalist and will visit France, England, Holland, Germany, Italy, the Holy Land and other places of interest, on a seventy day's trip. We wish him a pleasant voyage and a safe return. Mr. Cummings has shipped his furniture and office supplies to Lewistown.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Big Suit Started.

Conductor Hadrath and family this week removed to Minneapolis where they will make their future home. Mr. Hadrath was injured in a wreck out on the Wheatline last fall which has resulted in an injury to his spine and he will be incapable of doing railroad work in the future. He has brought an action in the federal courts against the Soo line for $32,000.00 damages.

Married Monday Evening.

Carl J. Angell and Miss Eva Foss, two very popular young people of the city surprised their many friends by being quietly married Monday evening. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents on the East Side and the young couple left that evening for the twin cities over the Soo line where they will spend several days. The bride is one of the accomplished young ladies of the city, being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rasmus Foss, while the groom is a prominent young business man, being one of the owners of the Lyceum Theatre. The NEWS extends congratulations.

SEEKS TO INVALIDATE SALE

Albert Vystrom, Who Disposed of His Remains to Swedish Anatomical Institute, Wants to Buy Himself Back. Thousands of Fishing Boats at Work Along the Coast of Norway—Spelling Reform Movement in Denmark.

SWEDEN.

Albert Vystrom, who accepted a fee several years ago from the Royal Swedish Anatomical institution for possession of his skeleton after his death and subsequently met with a refusal from the institute when he sought to buy himself back, appealed from the lower courts, which held that the institute had a right to Vystrom's "framework," which it need not relinquish unless it choose. Vystrom was a destitute man when he made the bargain with the institute, but has since come into a fortune. He argues that the agreement is of a nature to put a premium on murder, in case the purchaser should become impatient to possess his skeleton, and, as such, is contrary to public policy. The institute maintains that there are peculiarities in Vystrom's construction, which it desires, in due season, to investigate more closely than is possible except on the dissecting table. Another thing particularly annoying to Vystrom in the lower court's decision was an order that he pay damages to the institute for having had two teeth extracted without the institution's permission, the latter having put in the counter claim when Vystrom began suit against it.

A great Swedish song festival will be held in Stockholm in 1912 in connection with the Olympian games which will be held in that city that year. All the leading singing societies and soloists of Sweden will visit Stockholm on that occasion and the plans are to make it the largest and most representative sangerfest on record. Indeed, it will be the greatest sangerfest ever held in the world and the plans are henceforth of a large order. No efforts will be spared to make it a great affair and King Gustaf himself is said to be willing to serve as chairman of the executive committee. This announcement will practically guarantee the financial phase of it and large sums of money will undoubtedly be contributed by leading business houses all over the country.

The typographers of Stockholm have organized an emigration fund with a view of aiding all of the members of the Typographical union who desire to emigrate to America. There are at least 100 typographers in Stockholm at present who are out of work and this is one reason why the organization has taken such a singular step. This is practically aiding Swedish emigration to America and naturally enough the Anti-Swedish Emigration society is up in arms about the matter.

NORWAY.

The flash of a spark from a motorboat is beginning to mark the presence of fishing fleets and the light, fast pleasure boats, likewise engine driven, are penetrating the fjords of the Scandinavian peninsula and resort-fringed shores everywhere. Up on the west coast of Norway, according to consular reports, is one of the most ideal places in the world for such pleasure craft. There are waterways that run up into mountains and, protected from the ocean by a continuous series of islands, afford the finest sailing and boating amid unsurpassed scenery. The cod fishing far north on the coast of Norway, so much nearer the coast than other cod fisheries, has brought the motor boats into special demand for that purpose. Consul Taylor of Stavanger reports to Washington that there are 5,000 fishing boats altogether on the west coast alone in a comparatively small water area and that the catch of cod between Feb. 1 and the last of the month will exceed 40,000,000 pounds. This opens a market for the motorboat possibilities.

Indications are that the tourist traffic in Norway will assume great proportions this year. The Norwegian Tourist association has been busy this winter and has been doing a great deal of advertising. However, Norway as a tourist country is getting to be so well known that it scarcely needs any advertising. Tourists from all parts of the world have already been there and they have spread the fame of Norway's mountains and fjords over the entire globe. The tourist industry brings lots of money to the country and the Norwegians aim to take care of it and are doing everything in their power to increase it.

There are hundreds of laboring men who are idle throughout the country. The central bureau in Christiania states that at least 7 per cent of the members of the various labor unions are out of work.

DENMARK.

It is interesting to note that a spelling reform movement has been started in Denmark. It seems to have taken hold of people in earnest, as even the newspapers are commencing to give considerable attention to the matter. It is proposed to eliminate the double a and introduce in place of it the Swedish a, with a ring over it. It would seem that this would, from all viewpoints considered, be the more feasible way of using the a, as the double a certainly does seem superfluous. Yet the reform in spelling will of course meet opposition. Some people will take the stand that it will never do to imitate the Swedes, but when it comes to language matters the Swedes claim that they have a few things to teach their Scandinavian brethren. However this may be, the reform movement in spelling in Denmark is assuming interesting proportions.

There has been much trouble with the parcels post system recently in Copenhagen and now it develops that wholesale swindles in this department of the government have been going on for years. One J. C. Larson has confessed to swindling, stating that he has been pursuing this kind of work for a number of years without being discovered. The sum involved amounts to more than 20,000 crowns. It appears that Larson, in the capacity of superintendent, permitted the swindles, which recently assumed such large proportions that he thought the only way was to go and confess it all. He will be tried and sent to prison in the near future, as he himself expressed the wish to go to prison and serve his time.

Danish postal statistics state that about 8,000 persons are employed in the mail service of Denmark. Fifty years ago, there were only 600. About 3,600 persons carry the rural mails and 1,400 the urban mails. The number of pieces carried last year was [illegible], of which 163,000,000 were letters and postal cards. About 15,000,000 letters went to foreign countries, and 17,000,000 came from foreign countries.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING.

Producers as a class have made in late years long strides along the line of more intelligent and systematic methods of marketing their stuff. Time was when they were the luckless victims of commission men, too often unscrupulous, who extracted a fat commission and turned over as little as their generosity dictated. But producers grew weary of the holdup game and organized themselves into co-operative associations whose chief object was the securing of a better market. This movement was fought bitterly by those who had waxed fat under the old system of individual buying, but it was of no use. The co-operative movement is here to stay, and its success is assured. First grain growers organized; then followed the organization of growers of oranges, apples, grapes, small fruits and garden truck, and in almost every instance market and price conditions have improved as a result in those sections where such organization has been effected. Not only does such organization make possible the establishment of a standard of excellence in the grade and quality of the produce marketed, especially true in the case of fruits, but it makes possible the hiring of experienced men whose chief business it is to look after and report on market conditions in the various distributing centers. One may give his stuff the most scientific and painstaking care, but if he is held up when it comes to selling it it avails him little, and it would be decidedly to his interest to organize. Producers in any locality who are still marketing individually should look into the possibilities of this co-operative movement, not for the purpose of exacting extortionate prices from the consuming public, but to insure fair returns for themselves, who endure the sweat and bear the brunt of production.

A TIMELY WARNING.

The Rocky Mountain Husbandman, one of the pioneer agricultural papers of Montana, has lately been publishing some timely words of caution for the benefit of the homeseekers thronging into the state from the east and are filing on the bench lands away from the river valley with the intention of raising wheat. It states that these lands must be worked by dry farming methods, which many of the newcomers know little or nothing about. Of the advice and suggestion which a recent issue of the Husbandman contains the following is worthy of reproduction for the benefit of those who are about to go to the semi-arid sections of the west to make their homes: "The worst mistake it is possible to make is to try to raise a crop of grain on sod land the first season. The man with as much money as our dry land farm experts recommend is all right anywhere, for he can eat and his family will have plenty, but the man who undertakes to build a dry land home without ample funds will find it different from a like undertaking on irrigated land. For the wife and children of the dry land home builder who is short of a year's maintenance our heart bleeds. The dry land home is not meant for such. The proposition is essentially one for the well to do class." The advice which this paper gives is brave and honest, and its suggestions cannot be charged with having been dictated by a selfish interest when the natural tendency would be to minimize rather than give at face value the difficulties with which the settler on the dry lands would be confronted.

CARE THAT COUNTS.

As showing that it is scientific care of orchards rather than an alchemy of soil or climate that is the largely determining factor in raising high quality and prize winning fruit it is worth noting the fact that it was a southwestern Iowa grower who won some of the best prizes offered at the Denver apple show in less than carload exhibits, and that, too, in competition with the best box fruit of the west. It is doubtless true that conditions are better in Colorado, Idaho, Washington and Oregon for the production of apples than in Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Michigan or New York, but notwithstanding this it is the care which the western fruit ranchman gives his trees that is chiefly responsible for his splendid success. Were methods that are at present in vogue in some eastern orchards to be adopted in the western fruit valleys there would not be enough marketable apples produced on the ranches to pay taxes and cost of tillage from season to season. As we have before said in these notes, it is the painstaking care that the westerner gives his fruit ranch, and that as his primary and chief occupation, that makes his labor so profitable. Many an eastern orchard owner has learned this fact and is profiting thereby. Many more should profit by it.

A whole lot of farmers will be pulling off the remarkable stunt of husking two crops of corn in 1910. This does not mean that conditions have changed so that they are producing two crops a year, but only that they got balled up in their husking operations last fall.

Recent investigations into the life habits of the mole show that his chief diet, when he can get it, consists of the large white grub and the larvae of the June bug, which do much damage to lawns, flowers and strawberry plants. On this account alone the mole is entitled to man's protection.

The disk drill is generally recognized as the standard machine for sowing small grain. Not only does it mean economy in the use of seed, but it puts the grain at an even depth, covers all of it and thus insures a uniform germination and even stand, which means uniformity of growth and ripening. The end gate seeder is a relic of a bygone era and should be relegated to the scrap pile.

As a result of the heavy freeze of last December it is estimated that 10,000 cars of oranges were damaged in southern California. This is about one-third of the annual output and will constitute a very heavy loss to the growers. Where the fruit was not entirely ruined its quality was so injured that it not only will not pay for the expense of marketing, but tends to seriously demoralize the prices for good stuff.

As a general rule, sires of merit of either dairy or beef types are high priced. But rather than buy a low priced sire of little or no merit a better plan is for two or three neighbors who are breeding the same type and strain of cattle to unite in the joint purchase of a really good herd animal. When he has been used as long a time as is feasible arrangements could be made to exchange him for another sire equally good, but not related.

In sections where clover and alfalfa are the chief forage crops many horses are lost annually as a result of the feeding of a ration too rich in protein, and the loss is especially heavy during the winter months, when the animals are taking the least exercise. A partial means of obviating this trouble lies in substituting for a good share of the leguminous ration clean, bright straw and timothy or wild hay where available and allowing the horses to have daily exercise.

The agricultural department at Washington, after making tests with them, recommends yantias, taros and dasheens for culture in portions of the south where the land is too wet except for the cultivation of rice. These plants comprise salad plants, tubers which are excellent for table use and as stock feed and roots which are valuable sources of starch and from which alcohol can be made. They have been the staple food of native Hawaiians and an important food crop in Japan, China and a number of other countries.

Nothing is thought of paying from $1 to $1.50 for enough oats or other small grain to plant an acre, yet many a fellow will balk at paying more than $2 a bushel for seed corn. This seems a bit inconsistent, for at the unusual price of $10, a figure which prevails in some sections of the corn belt this season, the cost of seed for each acre would be but $1.25 on the assumption that a bushel will seed eight acres. In determining how much a fellow can afford to pay for his seed corn this spring it is well for one to keep these figures in mind.

As a result of extensive experiments which he has made Professor Bolley of the North Dakota experiment station presents the view that flax does not do well after flax, not because of an exhaustion of the fertilizing elements of the soil, but as a result of the development in the soil of root rots and other blight producing funguses, which attack the plants and greatly reduce their vitality. He holds that the same conditions apply to spring wheat and some other small grains. His remedy for this situation is the planting of the seed of blight resistant varieties of flax and grain, the formalin treatment of seed and a rotation of crops, which will prevent the several funguses from getting a foothold in the soil.

It is generally considered that 343 cubic feet of wild hay will make a ton, 400 cubic feet of timothy and 512 cubic feet of clover or alfalfa, the hay being settled in each case not less than a couple of months. One who has measured much hay in the stack has found a convenient method of measuring to be the following: Take one-third of the over—distance from the ground on one side of the stack to the ground on the other—for the square of the stack. This would give the number of cubic feet in each running foot of the stack. For example, if the over were thirty feet, one-third of this would be ten feet, which, squared, would give 100 cubic feet as the contents per running foot. If the stack were thirty feet long it would contain 3,000 cubic feet, from which figure the number of tons could be easily ascertained by dividing by the number of cubic feet per ton for the different kinds of hay.

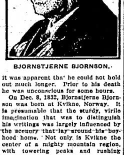
BJORNSON DEAD AT PARIS

Famous Norwegian Poet and Novelist Expires After a Long Illness—Roosevelt to Occupy Room in Palace During Visit to Stockholm—Steamer Excursion From Denmark to North Cape This Season.

NORWAY.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the Norwegian poet, novelist and dramatist, reformer and advocate of universal peace, died at Paris April 26 surrounded by his family. His end was peaceful. The last serious illness of the novelist extended over nearly a year. He was taken to Paris in the early part of last November for special treatment, accompanied by his wife and daughter, a physician and nurses, and during part of the journey traveled with the king of Denmark in the king's private car. In Paris, however, he was unable to receive the treatment for arterio sclerosis, from which he was suffering, but, notwithstanding this, he showed marked improvement for a time, due entirely to his wonderful vitality. Again last February his death was expected momentarily, but the crisis passed, leaving him less able to withstand the next attack. During the week preceding his death it was apparent that he could not hold out much longer. Prior to his death he was unconscious for some hours.



BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON.

On Dec. 8, 1832, Bjornstjerne Bjornson was born at Kvikne, Norway. It is presumable that the sturdy, virile imagination that was to distinguish his writings was largely influenced by the scenery that lay around his boyhood home. Not only is Kvikne the center of a mighty mountain region, with towering peaks and rushing mountain streams, but the vicinity is rich in legendary tales and the quaint, picturesque folk songs that have made remarkable the writings of Ibsen and Bjornson. From 1858 until the early nineties Bjornson was a prolific writer. Poems, plays and novels came with rapidity and artistic effect from his pen. His fame increased with leaps and bounds. Almost immediately he was recognized as the great Norwegian author, the one entirely national figure.

Colonel Roosevelt will deliver his lecture during his coming visit to Christiania in the National theater. There will be parades and other festivities in honor of Mr. Roosevelt and he will be entertained at the royal palace by the king. There will be thousands of people who will flock to Christiania on this occasion from all parts of the country.

The English South polar explorer, Captain Scott, and wife have been spending a number of days in Christiania, doing some very important polar shopping prior to making their contemplated South polar expedition. They have purchased sixty polar sleds and fifty pairs of polar skis.

Theodor S. Haukness, the author, celebrated his seventieth birthday a few days ago. The aged author is still enjoying excellent health and is busy completing one of his most important works.

Dr. Nils Bryhn of Nonefos has presented the Christiania university with his valuable botanical collection. There are 5,000 specimens, all of which are considered exceedingly rare.

There will be the usual May 17 celebration this year, consisting of an immense parade in Christiania and a concert by the university students.

There are 84,000 people in Norway who are receiving aid from charitable institutions and from the government.

SWEDEN.

Colonel Roosevelt, when he comes to Stockholm, will not occupy an apartment at the Grand hotel, as has been previously reported. He will be comfortably quartered at the palace and will occupy the same suite that has been previously set aside for and occupied by the king of England, the czar of Russia and the president of France. In other words, during his visit to the Swedish capital he will be accorded the same honors and receive the same attention as any king or sovereign. Some of Sweden's expert saddlemen, horsemen and troopers will give an exhibition in honor of Mr. Roosevelt and everything will be done to make his visit to Stockholm an entertaining and pleasing one in every respect.

A bag of blasting powder was discovered under the floor of the old riksdags house the other day by some workingmen who were engaged in some repairs there. They brought the package to the detective station, but there it was discovered that the powder bag must have been lying buried at least thirty years. The riksdagsmen who are at present doing service can at least take comfort in the fact that it was not meant for them and that it must have been meant to explode for the fellows who served their country in the long ago.

There is a woman in Stockholm who has been arrested for drunkeness not less than 400 times in twenty years. The woman has good connections and some of her relatives are very wealthy and have done everything in the world to save her from finally drinking herself to death. The unfortunate woman, who is known as Amalia L., is spoken of as a woman of good education. She can speak several languages and is the mother of twelve children, though unmarried.

"Many are called but few are chosen" appears to be the biblical truth that a congregation in Jonkoping wants to apply to its full limit. The congregation, which is without a pastor, has for some time been contemplating selecting some good man as a leader of the flock, but after listening to not less than forty-four preachers, among whom seven were from Stockholm, the congregation has not as yet been able to decide which one to select.

The number of donations that have recently been made for charitable purposes by wealthy Stockholmians is indeed noteworthy. A late donation is that of the wholesale merchant, E. G. Althanitz, who died March 6. In his will he remembered deserving Stockholm institutions with a gift of 400,000 crowns. Another donation is that of Bank Director E. Heckscher, whose aggregate donations to the Stockholm high school will pass the million mark.

King Gustaf, who is still at Cape Martin, on the Riviera, attended the dedication of the Oceanographic museum there recently, after first breakfasting with the Duke of Monaco. On April 4 King Gustaf journeyed to Cannes, where he paid a visit to the Prince of Meiningen.

Emilia Hildegaard Karlsson, twenty-eight years old, was arrested by the Stockholm police the other day in Malmo. She is one of the most notorious women pickpockets in Stockholm and had recently stolen 2,100 crowns from a street car conductor. At the time of her arrest she had 1,113 crowns on her person.

DENMARK.

The steamer C. F. Tietgen will this summer make an excursion trip to North cape and a number of tourists are already booked. The big steamer was to have made this trip last year, but circumstances prevented it. The C. F. Tietgen will start from Copenhagen July 7, sailing via Bergen, where a stop will be made in order to give the tourists an opportunity to take in the Sport and Tourist exposition. The steamer will then move north, via Molde, up to Romsdalfjerden, then on to Forghatten, when the polar circle will be reached; then on to Lofoten and Vesteraalen, to Tromsoe and Hammarfest, Europe's most northernmost point. The return trip will be via Lyngen fiord, Digermulkollen and other interesting points much sought by tourists. The entire trip, including first class accommodations, will cost from 375 to 475 crowns. This trip is said to be one of the finest ever offered in Europe. Owing to weather conditions it will only be possible for the C. F. Tietgen to make one trip to North cape during the course of the summer.

King Frederick will not be at home when Colonel Roosevelt reaches Copenhagen and during the brief time that he will be in the Danish capital he will officially be the guest of the Danish crown prince. Mr. Roosevelt has informed the American minister in Copenhagen, Maurice F. Egan, that although he will only be able to spend about five hours there he will hold an hour's reception at the American legation.

Erna Juel-Hanson, the well known authoress, was seriously injured the other day while paying a visit to her son aboard a ship of which he is captain. While descending a stairway she fell and broke her leg. She was at once taken to the city hospital in Copenhagen and at last reports was doing well.

The city of Aalborg has introduced municipal ownership and will give this system of local government a trial during the next year. The city has recently established a municipal gas light plant and is also planning extensive local improvements.

LOSS FROM FIRE IS HEAVY

Factory and Warehouse Burned at Minneapolis.

Fire totally destroyed the factory and warehouse of the North Side Sash and Door company at Minneapolis, entailing a loss estimated at about $70,000, covered by insurance. Due to the high wind the blaze was spectacular.

But for a strong northwest gale the factory of the Bardwell-Robinson Sash and Door company would also have suffered, the wind, however, fanned the flames toward the river. The factory was a seething furnace when the fire department arrived and only by hard work were the flames subdued before reaching any of the lumber piles in the yard. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

ADOPTS COMMISSION PLAN

Mankato First City in Minnesota to Vote on Proposition.

At a special election at Mankato for the adoption of the proposed charter based upon the commission form of government there were 969 votes in favor of the charter and 671 against it. This gave a majority of 298 votes, this being thirty-one votes more than the four-sevenths required by the constitution, so that the new charter voted upon will go into force thirty days from date.

Mankato is the first city in Minnesota to adopt the commission form of city government. It is the first city in Minnesota to which the commission form of municipal government has been submitted.

A HANDY SCRAPER.

A very handy scraper—in some sections dubbed "Mormon"—is made by using a plank 2 by 12 inches and about eight feet long. On the front and lower edge of this should be fastened by bolts eighteen inches apart a strong strip of iron three or four inches wide and an eighth of an inch thick, this giving the scraping edge. Into the plank from the back side should be mortised obliquely a couple of two by fours or sixes about three feet apart and a trifle below the center of the plank, so that the ends will be about a foot and a half apart and flat side up. To these should be nailed a cross board or two on which to stand. A chain is the gear which is most convenient in hauling the scraper, and this can be inserted through two inch holes bored a foot from each end and at about the middle of the plank and fastened to strong hardwood pegs running across the grain of the plank, so as to lessen the likelihood of splitting. For short hauls this will handle more earth than three ordinary horse scrapers, works fine in scraping up loose manure in yard or feed lot or will do very effective work as a pulverizer or road drag. When loading as a scraper two men should stand so as to throw the bulk of their weight on the scraping edge. It is dumped easily by stepping off and throwing the platform forward with the hand.

COTTONSEED MEAL AS A STOCK RATION.

Bulletin No. 131 issued by the South Carolina experiment station in 1907 takes up quite fully the feeding of cottonseed meal as a concentrate with corn silage, and the results of experiments conducted indicate that the combination makes a very effective one and that cottonseed meal may be fed in much larger quantities than has been generally supposed was advisable. It was found that from five to six pounds of meal per cow with corn silage could be fed daily without affecting the health of the animals. In fact, with such a feed their health was exceptionally good. The ration was consumed with great relish at the end of a five months' feeding period, the cows continuing to prefer the silage to bright, dry hay, and on no ration which had been given them in previous years did they produce more milk and butter fat. The ration was also the cheapest that could be fed, its value being considered due in a large measure to the fact that well ripened corn rich in grain was used for silage, which furnished the carbohydrates necessary to balance the protein of the cottonseed meal.

PRUNING SHADE TREES.

A reader of these notes living at Muscatine, Ia., writes inquiring what he can do to help the looks of some old and rather scraggly appearing box elders—wants to know if pruning will help them and when it is best to do it. While a first hand inspection would be necessary to give the most valuable detail advice, we should think that such trees might be helped much by pruning provided they are not too far gone and possess reserve vitality sufficient to withstand the pruning operation. From the very nature of the case each tree should be pruned in such way that the new tree will have the best shape possible. The job may be done during the winter months or after the leaves are two-thirds out, but not while the sap is running, as the loss of vitality would be great, as in the case of the maples. Wonders can be done by the judicious pruning of shade trees, and an increasing number of property owners are putting the method into practice, thereby greatly improving the appearance of their premises.

A FELLOW'S CREDIT.

There is probably no respect in which the young man who is trying to get ahead in a business way should exercise greater care than in the protection of his credit. This means, first of all, that he should apply himself and earn some money so as to establish his credit. Later, when he borrows money, he should see to it that his payments are made at the times agreed on—before rather than after. And it is well for him to keep in mind the further fact that in the lending of money the banker not only takes stock of the visible chattels and property of the borrower, his thrift and industry, but the kind of man he is and the reputation he bears in the community. This is where the definite advantage of clean living comes in, and it is a connection that should be emphasized and realized more frequently than is the case, for with the banker it is a factor that is kept always in view. The fellow who earns little and squanders this and more, cannot borrow a shilling of any reputable banking house, and the reason is plain—he neglects his credit.

The English sparrow, the blue jay, the blackbird and crow are essentially marauders so far as other birds are concerned, destroying their nests, breaking their eggs and often killing their young; hence whenever any of this tribe of disturbers make preparations for nests about the premises they should be put to rout. It will mean greater peace and security for the other valuable birds.

Cockleburs, quack grass and a good many other weed pests that might be named are often the direct result of a system of absentee landlordism in which shortsighted, stingy proprietors and shiftless one year renters play the leading roles. In such cases the only effective way to get rid of the pests would be to revolutionize the system and banish or convert to a better agricultural way both landlord and tenant.

One of the largest recorded yields of potatoes is 972 bushels per acre, credited to a grower in the state of Wyoming. This showing will be the better understood when it is remembered that the average annual yield for the whole country is just about one-tenth this amount, or between eighty-five and a hundred bushels per acre. The fellows who are making the most money in the potato business are not the ninety-seven bushel type.

The western mountain quail, while closely resembling in size and habit his eastern cousin, possesses an individuality quite his own. Instead of a whistle which says "Bobwhite!" the western quail has a call which has been interpreted to mean "Sit right here," and the quaint little call is given in a very sharp and authoritative manner. The western bird is very active and gets under wing like a shot, taking one approaching so much by surprise that it is often out of range before one realizes it.

"Potato Culture on Irrigated Farms of the West" is the caption of a valuable bulletin (farmers' bulletin No. 386) which has lately been put out by the department at Washington. The bulletin is prepared by E. H. Grubb, a Colorado potato expert, who incorporates in his treatise his own best experience and that of others in irrigated sections. The bulletin gives directions for the preparation of the soil, planting, cultivation and irrigation. It should be of real value to every potato grower in semiarid sections.

If the currant and gooseberry bushes are troubled with the leaf eating worm which so often plays havoc with them the trouble may be remedied by sprinkling the bushes with a solution made by mixing one teaspoonful of paris green in ten or twelve quarts of water and applying with a common sprinkler or hand sprayer. If the worms should make a second attack when the fruit is partly formed powdered hellebore may be used in place of the arsenical spray, being mixed with an equal weight of slaked lime and sprinkled on the leaves through a piece of burlap when the dew is on.

A coat of tar and feathers and a free ride on a three cornered rail would be too good for the chap we heard of the other day who succeeded in getting the owner of a little ten acre property near where the writer lives interested in a deal for the purchase of his place and finally wound up by paying him a dollar, having him sign a contract for sale which entitled the grafter to a commission if sold to any other party, within a period of ninety days. This deal in effect gave the real estate manipulator an option on the place three months for a dollar, while the advance in the price of the place during that period was easily from $250 to $400. The transaction was the more contemptible because the ranch owner was an honest, simple minded fellow for whom the ways of the agent were "dark." It is tricks of this caliber that tend to put real estate agents and fruit tree peddlers in the shyster-grafter class and tend to bring on them the contempt of all fair minded people.

The only kind of settlement which does a new country any good is that resulting from a representation of the advantages of the section in their true light, as misrepresentation always reacts. Those interested in the permanent progress and welfare of their locality should do all in their power to see to it that the newcomer is not swindled or hoodwinked. The major part of this development dirty work is not chargeable to responsible parties, but usually to grafting real estate agents who deceive and defraud the settler to the limit, and when they have plucked him to the pinfeathers decamp to greener fields, where they may operate on new and easy victims. In view of this situation, so general as hardly to require mention, commercial organizations in new and developing sections would do well to put a damper on this contemptible shark work, for they must realize that, while the contented settler is the best possible automatic advertising agency a community can have, there is no factor tending to put a more effective quietus on progress than a half dozen folks who have fallen prey to the unconscionable land boomer and grafter, as they are sore and can be counted on to knock in season and out, and in view of their experience they can be excused if the rosy tinted prospects held out have become a trifle dimmed.

SETTING FRUIT TREES.

Since trees in crooked rows are unsightly and make trouble in plowing and cultivation of any crop put in rows it is just as well to set them straight. While there is more than one way of doing this, there is no better method than the running of three rows of sighting stakes both ways across the area to be set. Of course if the tract is very large or the surface quite rolling more rows of stakes should be set. It is well to begin at one side, measuring off the distances for the stakes and at the same time sighting them, so that they will set true and straight. A row should then be run in the same way on one of the other sides at right angles to the one already set. Two rows should then be set near the middle of the tract parallel to the rows already set, and, lastly, two other rows should be run through on the two edges of the field not already staked. These last rows may be quickly set by sighting those already in. From this point on no measuring stick is needed, it being possible to quickly determine the location of all the rest of the trees to be set by sighting from the rows of stakes already placed. While the work of planting is expedited if two work together, one person can sight both ways alone and do very good work. Another aid in setting the trees true is a board about four inches wide and four feet long. In the middle of both ends of which notches have been cut about an inch square and a third cut in one edge at the middle and extending half an inch beyond the exact center of the board, so as to make an opening about an inch square at the center. A long straight stake should be used for the center—the one which will mark the location of the tree—while two pegs considerably shorter should be used for the ends.

When the tree stake has been properly set the board described should be slipped on to it so that the stake will be at the middle. The end pegs should then be put in the notches referred to, when the middle stake may be pulled and the board removed while the digging of the hole is in progress. When the hole is ready the frame should be adjusted over the end pegs and the tree held in place in the notch at the center of the board, where the long peg was. This equipment will work best if the three pegs used are rounded somewhat and are made a trifle less than an inch in diameter, so that they will not stick in the notches of the board. If this method is followed carefully straight trees can be set so true that a rifle ball shot from the end row would strike more than half of the trees.

A CORN BREEDING PLOT.

It would be well if every farmer who is seriously engaged in the growing of corn had a few acres of the best soil on the place as a corn breeding plot. On such a plot could be raised the seed needed for the general crop, while valuable tests in determining the productivity of various types of corn could be carried on and would not only give a new interest to the farm operations, but would have a direct bearing on the financial consideration. The field set apart for this purpose should be by itself and separated from the main field of corn by twenty or thirty rods, which would reduce to a minimum a pollination of the breeding plot from the main field. If it is desirable to produce seed of especial vigor by cross, rather than self fertilization of the stalks in the breeding plot, this may be done by detasseling alternate rows and selecting the seed for the ensuing year from those stalks from which the blossoms (stamens) have been removed. Another instructive experiment is planting a given number of hills with kernels from several desirable types of ears, the seed from each ear being in a row by itself. When the corn from such ear rows is measured at harvest time a good idea is obtainable of the vigor and productivity—and this means real value—of given types as well as varieties of corn.

A NEW POTATO DISEASE.

As if it were not enough for the "murphy" raiser to contend with scab and bugs and blight and commission men, a new disease, the potato wart, a fungous disease which causes unsightly warts and in severe attacks completely destroys the crop, has lately attracted much interest. It was discovered in Hungary a number of years ago, is prevalent in many sections of England, has been carried to Newfoundland, and the chances are that it will spread to Ireland and this country before the greatest precautions are taken. Once the fungus gets into the soil it is impossible to grow a crop of potatoes for several years. It is transmitted from section to section by using affected seed, and it is in this respect that great caution should be exercised.

The scrub farmer will do well to confine his attention to scrub stock and not launch into the business of raising full bloods, which, to do well must have first class care.

Light weight in seed grain usually means a shriveled berry and low vitality. Herein lies the justification of the use of the fanning mill in the cleaning of all small grain intended for seed.

While a cypress or cedar hedge about a place has its drawbacks, it furnishes an ideal retreat for many species of interesting birds that frequent it continually, making their nests and rearing their young therein.

The untilled orchard or berry patch means not only a checking of the growth and a reducing of the productive capacity of tree and bush, but it also means an unmolested harbor and place of retreat for their many insect enemies.

The service which birds render to man as insect destroyers can hardly be measured. For this practical service alone, if there were not other grounds, some pains may well be taken to see that nesting places are provided or left for them about the premises.

It would be better for folks' stomachs as well as their pocketbooks if they should reduce their meat ration and substitute therefor as a breakfast ration some of the excellent cereals which are to be had at reasonable prices. One of the results of this change in diet would be a much greater relish for the meat rations of the other meals of the day.

In France on roads which are as good as engineering skill can make them a single horse will haul 3,300 pounds at a load as against 1,400 pounds per horse over the level dirt roads in this country and 1,000 pounds over hilly dirt roads. There would seem to be abundant evidence in these figures that it pays a country or community to have firm and level highways.

Publishers of magazines and the reading public would view in better spirit an increase in pound postage rates (the brunt of which would fall on the individual subscribers) if congressmen and other folks engaged in the public service were not enjoying a franking privilege which makes it possible for them to transport free of charge anything from private correspondence to poodle dogs, fireless cookers, pianos and automobiles.

Until lately pea vines, the byproduct of pea canneries, were a waste product, the handling of which involved a good deal of expense. As a result of experiments which have been conducted by the federal department of agriculture it has been found that these same vines can be made into a hay that is considered better than clover hay and is a satisfactory feed for cattle, horses and sheep, while they may be converted into a silage which makes an excellent ration for dairy cows. The vines may be cured best by spreading them on sod land, giving a forage crop which is worth from $3 to $5 per ton.

The jack rabbit nicely illustrates the protective coloration with which nature has provided certain animals as a partial means of protecting them from their natural enemies through a change in the color of the coat with the change of season to harmonize with the general tone coloring of their surroundings. In countries of snowfall the jack's summer coat is of a brownish dun color which corresponds very closely to the color of the grass and brush and leaves. In winter his coat changes to pure white with the exception of the black tip of his tail, though in sections where there is no snow the winter coat is not materially different from that of the summer.

For planting in northwestern states the Norway poplar gives promise of being a most valuable tree. It is a quick grower, making a diameter of from six to ten inches in eight or nine years; is hardy, does well under a great variety of conditions, possesses a smooth and straight grain and can be used for a variety of outdoor and indoor purposes and for butter workers, berry boxes, wagon and buggy boxes. The tree may be propagated by soaking the cuttings in water for a week before planting. They should be planted large end down about five inches deep and in rows 5 by 7 feet apart in mellow soil and cultivated during the first two or three years, after which the trees will shade the ground and take care of themselves.

In view of the present scarcity of corn of sufficient vitality to justify its use as seed, the farmers in the northern part of the corn belt, which was visited by the severe freeze of last October, are up against a very real proposition. If they cannot secure seed which will give them at least two-thirds of a stand they would better put in small grain in place of the corn. They will be tempted to use seed grown farther south because it will germinate, but this is almost as serious a mistake as using poor seed, for in all probability corn from such seed would not mature in time to escape the fall frosts, in which case they would fare no better. If good seed of the proper type can be secured at a cost of even $12 per bushel it would be better to use this than to use seed that will not germinate or mature a crop of sound corn.

A woman will work her fingers off and be cheerful and light hearted about it if she is now and then made to feel that the service she renders is appreciated. Spoken appreciation costs the one who gives it nothing. In fact, it enlarges his nature and, on the other hand, is as rain to thirsty plants to those on whom it is bestowed.

The state of Minnesota has 10,000 quarter sections of land subject to homestead entry. Much of this land is good for farming purposes, but before being filed on should be carefully inspected when there is no snow on the ground. Information regarding homestead lands over the country may be secured by writing the department of the interior, Washington.

While a calf may have nothing but skimmilk from birth and make a go of it, it will never be the calf it might have been had it been started on new milk and gradually changed to a skimmilk ration re-enforced by a handful of oilmeal at each feed and later by oats and shelled corn. Scrimping the feed of the calf in order to sell a little more cream or butter is not a good plan for any animal which is being raised for profit.

There seems to be an extraordinary demoralization in the spud market, due to last year's unusually heavy crop and a holding of a large per cent of it close to the time when new potatoes will be on the market. Notwithstanding the slump in prices, no good reason will exist for reducing the acreage of the tubers materially, as enough will be led to do this to materially raise the price for those who stay in the business on the same scale.

Before the present year's growth of the shade trees gets well started it will be a good idea to inspect those bordering the public highway and to prune the limbs hanging down over walks and driveways. It is not calculated to induce kindly feelings in the lady next door if she has the feathers on her best hat knocked loose by one of these overhanging limbs nor to promote the religious instincts of the fellow who has his eye punched while riding by on a load of hay or double box wagon.

There is probably no type of farming or ranching that is more remunerative or accompanied with less risk one year with another than the growing of alfalfa. Especially is this true in and near sections whose area is largely devoted to some other purpose—as, for instance, fruit raising, for uniformly high prices can be secured for the hay owing to the limited supply raised. Here is a fine opportunity for many an energetic fellow who likes farming, but doesn't like to put up with the exacting care which the raising of fruit entails.

Where possible a first hand inspection of the nursery stock which one buys is advisable, for in such case one not only has opportunity to size up the general appearance of the stock, but to examine the type of roots which the stuff has, which is of more importance than any other factor. And this holds whether the order be of small fruit, bushes, vines, fruit trees or evergreens. The root of a plant or tree is the capital with which it starts in the business of growing, and if this capital be lacking its operations are bound to be limited and unsatisfactory.

While conditions vary greatly in different sections of the country affecting the care which ought to be given to newly set fruit trees, it is the verdict of the best experience that they should be given most thorough cultivation, with no crop grown close enough to appropriate the moisture which the trees need for their best growth. Too often mistakes are made along both these lines, with the result that the young trees, instead of making a healthy growth, become stunted and never develop as they might have done. That cultivation should be given which will insure loose and mellow soil about the trees, and under no circumstances should it be allowed to become hard and baked.

The University of Wisconsin has of late inaugurated a custom which might well be followed by other institutions a part or the whole of the energies of which as institutions are devoted to the teaching and exemplification of a better type of agriculture. This consists of presenting degrees—testimonials appropriately engrossed—to men who have achieved distinction by service rendered to their fellows through their contributions to the upbuilding of the country's agricultural interests. Three men were honored a short time ago by the university, one of whom was a leader in the organization of farmers' clubs and an able institute leader, the second for the good work he had done as a breeder of fine horses and the encouragement he had given the industry, while the third introduced the culture of Japanese rice in the southwest and has been a pioneer in the work of establishing the very valuable demonstration farms in a dozen southern states, being at present in the employ of the federal government. With agriculture occupying the fundamentally important place that it does in our life as a people the recognition thus of service rendered is becoming indeed and tends to give to agriculture as a vocation the emphasis which it rightly deserves. There ought to be more of these degrees for farmers.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 239 of the General Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

CONVENTION IS CALLED

Republican County Convention to Be Held in Thief River Falls.

Apportionment of Delegates Gives Thief River Falls Eighteen Delegates.

The Republican county committee met at St. Hilaire last Thursday afternoon and issued the call for the Republican county convention. The convention is to be held in Thief River Falls on Friday, June 17, at 11:30 in the forenoon and will be for the purpose of electing ten delegates to the Republican state convention. Each voting precinct will be entitled to one delegate at large and one delegate for each twenty-five votes or fraction thereof cast for the Republican candidate for governor in 1908. This apportionment gives Thief River Falls eighteen delegates, while Red Lake Falls has seven. The following are the delegates allowed each voting precinct in the county:

Value of Publicity.

A merchant in a small town who saw a farmer receive goods at a railroad station from a mail-order house told him he could have sold the same goods for less money and saved the freight besides. The farmer asked him why he didn't let people know. Though he had taken the home paper regulary for years, he never saw a line in it that such goods were to be had. The mail-order house came after the trade and got it. Merchants and manufacturers who fail to advertise what they have should not expect to compete with those who do. The very best articles at the lowest prices will be passed by when people are unaware of their existence. Probably if the merchant had advertised and the farmer had bought from him he wouldn't have known that his advertisement had brot the business, anyway, and so wouldn't have given it credit. Publicity often reaches much farther than is outwardly perceptible.—Exchange.

A VERY NOTED MAN TO DELIVER ADDRESS HERE.

Prof. Bernhard Boeggild, Recognized to Be Greatest Living Authority on Dairying, to Be Here Soon.

Thief River Falls is to be honored the latter part of May or the fore part of June—the exact date to be announced later—by one of the most celebrated citizens of the world.

Under the auspices of the Danish-American Association Prof. Bernhard Boeggild, of the Royal Danish Agricultural College of Copenhagen, Denmark, will visit the United States during May, June and July, delivering a series of lectures at a number of universities and agricultural colleges on Dairying and Milk Supply, at the same time studying American methods and conditions.

Only four lectures are to be delivered in Minnesota by Prof. Boeggild, and that Thief River Falls has been selected as one of the four is due largely to the importance of dairying in this section of of the state.

His lecture course covers a field as broad as the field of dairying itself. Among the English lectures are the following: The Dairy Legislation of Denmark. Danish Cow Test Associations, Denmark's Butter Production and Butter Expert, Hygienic Requirements and Milk Prices.

In addition Prof. Boeggild will deliver popular addresses in New York, Chicago, Omaha and other large cities on "The Milk Supply of Copenhagen." This feature of Prof. Boeggild's lecture trip is bound to arouse a great deal of interest, it being generally conceded that Copenhagen is the one among the big cities of the world where milk is best and cheapest.

Prof. Boeggild is perhaps the greatest living authority on dairying in Europe, his activity having by no means been limited to his own country.

As a scientist, teacher and counselor he has for the last generation been prominently associated with the dairy industry of Denmark. As an author and lecturer his influence has been felt not only in Denmark, but throughout Europe. As an investigator and organizer in his special field he has done more than perhaps any other Dane. His activity no doubt has increased the value of Danish exports by millions of dollars, while he himself has been content with a modest salary.

Since the early 80's, Prof. Boeggild has been the leading spirit in the co-operative dairy movement. Previous to 1880 the Danish peasants made their own butter. In 1886 Boeggild was asked by the Federation of Agricultural Societies of Jutland to investigate, whether the peasants should continue to churn their own butter, or sell their milk to central dairies or themselves establish co-operative creameries. As a result of his investigation Prof. Boeggild published his big work, "Co operative Creameries," which revolutionized the whole dairy industry. He emphasized the importance of co-operation, as yielding the greatest advantages to the smaller farmers. During 1886-1890 he personally assisted in the establishment of 614 co operative creameries.

Since then Denmark's butter export has multiplied eightfold, until it now reaches the imposing total of more than 225,000,000 pounds a year. To England alone Denmark exports almost a million dollars worth of butter a week.

The Danish-American Association, the members of which are American citizens, is arranging for this tour, not for profit, but for purely patriotic purposes. The president of that association is M. C. Madsen of Long Beach, L. I.

So many application for lectures have been received that it will be impossible to accept all. Leading dairy authorities of this country have extended a hearty welcome to Prof. Boeggild, who is well known in scientific circles here.

Adler's Collegian Clothes

THE STORE FOR YOUNG MEN

We have aimed to deserve this title, by showing distinctive apparel for the young man who is not satisfied with ordinary clothes. Our success cannot be doubted. You realize that we are absolute headquarters for "nobby" apparel, and nowhere else in town will you ever find clothes which possess that same air of elegance which you always find in the clothes exhibited by this store.

ADLER'S Collegian CLOTHES

We Specialize
ADLER'S Collegian Clothes
because we are convinced, from actual experience, that no other make possesses the same amount of character, nor the same high standard of quality. It pleases us to so successfully cater to the wants of our particular young men.

You will be delighted with the new Spring suits, which are now being shown by us.

GALICIAN SETTLEMENT

Queer People That Live North of Here on the Canadian Boundry Line.

Lead a Primitive Life and are Not Progressive in Any Way.

One of the most interesting and unique settlements in the northwest is located just across the Canadian boundary on the Canadian Northern line between Emerson and Warroad, where during the past five years the largest settlement of Galicians in America has located.

The settlement starts at Ridgeville, twelve miles west of Emerson, and extends thirty-five miles west to what is known as South Junction. There are a few stops made between the two places by the trains, but there are no villages of any size.

In the entire settlement every house is practically the same, being a small log house, whitewashed, with a hay thatched roof. At every stopping place the train is met by large crowd of men, who are rough looking, and the picturesquely dressed women, who are always attired in gaudy dresses of green, yellow or red, and wear shawls containing every color of the rainbow, over their heads instead of hats.

They have a few head of cows, and use oxen exclusively for the cultivation of their land, where they cultivate any except a garden spot. Many of the men work out during the summer months and the women tend the garden and cows. They are unprogressive and the entire settlement appears to be a section of the Orient picked up bodily and placed in the new world.

Dead Man Found In Red River.

A dead man was found in the Red River near Oslo on Sunday. The discovery was made by Frank Vroman. Coroner Biederman, of Argyle was notified and went there to examine. From papers found on the person of the dead man, his name is Henry Hemsing, of Thief Lake township. It was evidently a case of accidental drowning. Hemsing had hired out to work on a steam boat, and probably met with the accident going to his job.—Warren Sheaf.

Short Course for Teachers.

Beginning on June 20th, and continuing for six weeks, the Department of Agriculture at University Farm, will hold a short course for teachers, principals of public schools, county superintendents, and all others interested in agriculture. College credits will be given all whose work is satisfactory. Board, lodging and laundry will cost $3.50 per week. This course will consist of instruction in agriculture, agricultural chemistry, animal husbandry, and animal nutrition, dairy stock, domestic art, domestic science, entomology, horticulture, forestry, plant diseases, poultry, soils, etc.

High School Team Defeated.

The High School base ball team went down to Bagley last Saturday and played a game with the team in that village, being defeated by a score of 7 to 2. Next Saturday the team goes to Warren and the Saturday following will play a return game with Bagley in this city.

Soo Rushing Work.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 7.—From Medford comes the report that a solid train of graders has reached that place to begin work on the new Soo's Medford-to-Drake line. The first sixty miles have been sublet by Foley Brothers to a contractor from Colorado. It is also reported that surveyors are at work on a line from Medford to this city, and that the plan is to run trains to Medford and from there on to Grand Forks. Persistent reports of a line being surveyed from Thief River Falls to this city are also being received.

Local Club Defeated.

The local ball club was over to Grand Forks Sunday and played a game with the Grand Forks Pickets, being defeated by a score of 4 to 0. The game is said to have been a fast one and up to the 5th inning not a score was made. The paid attendance to the game was over 1,100.

Good Roads.

The question of good roads becomes more and more imperative as the time passes. Next to drainage, good roads comes first.

No other subject is attracting such wide attention as road making. Farmers all over the United States are devoting time and money to building better roads as they realize the saving made by having roads, which can be used at any time of the year, will enable them to pay freight to more remote markets and thus broaden the scope of their market. When competion is close good or bad roads decide the matter as to whether certain products can be marketed or not.

Ball Game Sunday.

The Crookston base ball club is to be here Sunday and play a game with the local club. As the home team is now in good practice, the game promises to be a good one. All should turn out.

Oscar Johnson was down to Crookston last evening.

Nick Nelson is in the city from Minot, N. D., this week visiting old friends.

County Superintendent of Schools Anderson was in the city yesterday.

There will be a social session at the Antlers Club tomorrow evening.

St. Bernerds Society will meet with Mrs. Wm. Herron Thursday May 19th.

Miss Godward is located in the Dobner-Meehan flats and is prepared to give instructions on the piano.

The Ladies Aid of the United Church will meet with Mrs. Olaf Ramstad, May 18. All are welcome.

C. W. Nelson, of Kratka, went up to Roseau yesterday to attend to some business matters.

Mrs. George Jarman is expected to arrive in the city Friday morning from her trip to Missouri.

Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Penney will return from St. Louis the latter part of this week.

Judge Grindeland arrived in the city Tuesday evening from Warren and left yesterday morning for Roseau.

Attorney Mabey was down to Crookston last evening attending to some legal business.

Miss Bergstrom, of Crookston, has accepted a position as stenographer in G. Halvorson's office.

Services in the Synod Church next Sunday, Pentecost day at 11; in Silverton at 3 o'clock p. m. I. T. Aastad.

The Ladies' Aid of the Lutheran Synod meets this afternoon at 3 o'clock with Mrs. Edward Erickson. A cordial invitatation to all.

The members of the Sons of Norway and their families will meet in the Antlers Club rooms on the evening of the 17th of May and celebrate the anniversary of Norway's independence.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Tessum and Miss Olson, of Fairdale, N. D., who have been visiting with the Tessums in this city for a few days, left Sunday evening on a trip to Norway. They expect to return to this country about September and may decide to locate in this city.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will meet at the church parlors tomorrow afternoon, Friday May 13th at 2:30. Everybody is welcome and is requested to be there at 2:30 sharp. Lunch will be served.

A supper will be given in the basement of M. E. Church, next Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock p. m. May 18 by four members of the Aid Society, Mesdames, Hay, Christianson, Rice and Smith:—baked beans, Salad, Buns and brown bread, meat, butter, pickles, cheese, jelly, cake and coffee. Price 25c. Everybody invited.

Beer Can Be Sold at Plummer.

The saloons at Plummer closed up Monday, having been notified by Special Agent Johnson sometime ago to do this. All of the liquors and beer in the saloons had been disposed of, but on Monday evening a telegram received from the special agent informed the saloonkeepers that they could continue to sell beer, but not any liquors. As the Soo railroad refuses to accept shipments of beer billed to Plummer, the only way that the town can be supplied is by having the beer hauled in by teams.

Case Dismissed.

Jim and Torger Torgerson, known as terrors of the southeastern portion of the county, were up before Judge Bishop Tuesday, charged with having assaulted a neighbor. The Torgersons are peaceful citizens except when drinking, and then they always try to "clean out" the neighborhood. In their recent fight, however, according to the evidence introduced, they did not come out on top and Judge Bishop allowed them to go on the promise of good behavior in the future.

Clover Leaf.

The fine weather of the past two weeks has given ye farmer the pleasure of putting in his crops. We only hope it may last a while longer.

The ditch viewers were in this vicinity last week. We hope we may soon be able to sing this this song: "You Never Miss the Water 'till the Ditch Comes 'round."

James Hruby left for Cummings, N. D., last Tuesday. He will be gone during the summer and will busy himself with carpenter work.

A "social hop" was given at Marsho's Saturday evening. It was well attended and all reported a good time.

Johanna Hruby and Lilly Johnson called at Skaar's Friday evening.

Levos Brothers and Anton Kotland were at Hruby's Friday evening.

Halvor Olson will depart from our midst this week. Bachelor shacks look lonely, but without the "Bach," Oh my!

A basket social will be held in the school house, Dist. No. 46, in town of Clover Leaf, on Saturday evening, May 28th. Proceeding the selling of the baskets a program will be given by the pupils of the school. Everybody welcome.

J. Hruby visited at Mr. Topinka's Monday evening.

Charles Ptacek, Jerry and Joe Hruby have all been leading bachelor's lives for a few days. They like it.

Don't forget the basket social Saturday evening, May 28th.

Tile Drainage.

J. E. Gesch, of Kandiyohi County recently put in a complete system of tile drainage on his half-section farm at a cost of $1,200 or about $4 an acre. He used 15,200 tiles. He does not hesitate to say it is the best investment he ever made, for this spring while his neighbor's farms were too wet to work, every acre of his land was in excellent condition ready for early spring seeding. He estimates that the tiling has added $15 an acre to the value of his farm, as it is he will get added crops that will amount to a good interest on that extra $15 valuation. In short, the investment of $1,200 adds $4,800 to his farm.

This is an object lesson in drainage which should interest many Minnesota farmers. There is too much prejudice and ignorance concerning tile drainage. Farmers imagine that tiling can affect only a very limited area around the drain and are slow to realize how wide area a single tile drain affects. Then, too many think they can not drain their farms because they have not sufficient fall to carry off the water, yet good authorities say that a fall of only half an inch per hundred feet is ample if the tiles are accurately laid. When a cost of $3 or $4 an acre will add $10 or $15 to the value of the land it is worth while to cast aside prejudice and be willing to learn from the success of others.

Wheat Production

The United States no longer leads the world as the greatest wheat producer amongst the nations. Last year Russia harvested a wheat crop of 783,000,000 bu. which was 20,000,000 bushels greater than that of the United States, and it was the largest wheat crop ever harvested by Russia by more than 100,000,000 bushels.

Only twice has the wheat production of Russia surpassed that of the United States, the first time in 1901, when the wheat crop of America was a partial failure.

The fact that the United States is no longer the greatest wheat producing country is not at all an argument in favor of smaller wheat acreage; on the contrary it indicates that within the next few years our home markets will demand all the wheat that we are raising. The world's production of wheat last year is estimated at 3,150,000,000 bushels. All countries reported an increased yield except Germany, Hungary, and Bosnia Hersagovina.

MORE ABOUT THE POLISH SETTLEMENT

Work Being Done by Hon. Frank Grygla and Hon. A. W. Clark.

Fram, Minn., May 10—The great Pan-Polish Congress now in session at Washington was largely brot about by the occasion of the unveiling of the monuments to General Pulaski and General Kosciuszko, the Polish patriots who fought so bravely for our independence. The monument to General Pulaski is by act of congress, but that of Kosciuszko is presented to the American people by the Polish National Alliance and other Polish organizations of the United States.

This is the first time that Poles from all over the world will be represented in a congress, and the delegates will include many of the most prominent leaders from the Austrian, Russian and Prussian sections of the old commonwealth.

While here last week Mr. Grygla spoke of this international congress of Polish people and the great results likely to come from it in a world-wide movement of this cruelly-used, subjugated nation of brave and patriotic peoples.

Mr. Grygla is of course now in attendance of the congress at Washington and nothing will be done about the Grygla colony until he gets back to Chicago, which is the headquarters of the Alliance.

"Thirteen thousand square miles of reclaimed, rich land would make homes for a good many people," said Mr. Grygla, "and Polocks are good farmers." Ever since his arrival in the United States Mr. Grygla has devoted his time, his fortune and his energies in the interests of the exiles and refugees of his unhappy country, and the international Polish congress is largely his work. Would it surprise you to see a new Warsaw rise in Northern Minnesota?

Our article last week was somewhat cheapened by the printer.—The amount of the fund set aside by the organization for colonization purposes was just one hundred times what the type made it read.

Breaking in on us in this sudden fashion, one can hardly realize what the friendship and interest of this organization may result in for us. Fifty thousand of their people could be easily drawn from the cities prepared, every family of them, to go on new farms in the drainage district, and it is almost certain that some great things will come of this prospective movement in the very near future.

Mr. Grygla talked freely of his plans while here, showing us some of his decoration and medals,—a box full of them—with which he had been honored, relating some of his experiences till we felt humbled in the great and good man's presence. And the best of all, to find in him a red blooded American who could put to shame some of our own countrymen. A soldier himself, he could enter into the spirit of the sacrifices of our own old soldiers during the civil war and of their devotion to the betterment and uplift of the freest country on earth.

His genuine and hearty expressions of friendship on parting, and his kindly words of encouragement has done Mr. Clark a world of good, at a time, too, when his enemies were trying to discredit him.

"Let your light so shine as to be a challenge to all the world that you are honest," said Mr. Clark, and Mr. Grygla answered, Amen, and these two workers had discovered each other.

The little town of Grygla, nestled off to itself in a beautiful wilderness, is destined, if things go right, to wake up some morning to find itself the center of a movement of peoples which may astonish our easy-going officials into the knowledge that there is something more in Northern Minnesota than pine logs and iron ore. That there are farms and farmers, and votes and voters. That they demand a square deal and will not be put off with gold bricks—and broken promises.

Thirteen thousand square miles of drained land, so rich that the fat is fairly frying out of it, will furnish homes for a heap of people, and who than the decendants of the brave Pulaski, who gave up his life at Savannah, or the noble Kosciuszko, the friend and companion in arms of Washington, has a clearer title.

The Congress convenes at Washington, May 12th.

School Notes.

The commencement exercises will take place at 8:30 p. m. on Friday, May 27th, at the auditorium. The class day program will be presented by the seniors on the evening preceding, Thursday, at the same place. The members of the eighth grades entitled to promotion will present a short program at the assembly room in the high school building at 8 p. m. on Wednesday evening of the last week of school, at which time they will receive diplomas from the board of education, entitling them to admission to the high school. The graduation sermon will be preached by Rev. A. L. Larson in the Zion church on Horace avenue on the evening of Sunday, May 22nd. This constitutes a brief announcement of the exercises connected with the closing days of school.

J. H. Worst, LL.D., president of the North Dakota Agricultural College at Fargo, has been secured to deliver the commencement address on May 27th at the Auditorium building. Mr. Worst is a forcible and interesting speaker and was engaged by the school authorities at no little expense and difficulty, as nearly all his dates are taken in the Dakotas and he is in much demand as a commencement orator. He will deliver a lecture along the lines of the modern tendencies of education towards industrialism. This will be an excellent opportunity to all interested parties who desire to hear a lucid and exhaustive treatment of subjects which have special significance in Thief River at this time, when agriculture and manual training are about to be introduced into the schools of the city.

The senior class has ordered from Boston a statue of Minerva for a memorial. It is a beautiful piece of statuary and will cost in the neighborhood of $80 when laid down here. These class memorials are a means of providing a remembrance of passing classes and they also serve to decorate the school rooms at no expense to the board of education.

A crew of workmen began operations on the new high school basement last week and will have the excavation completed by Saturday.

The St. Hilaire teachers visited the local schools on Tuesday.

The final examinations in the high school will take place on the last three days of the last week. No pupil is exempt from any of these tests and all are expected to attend.

The high shool base ball team was overcome by the jack pine players over at Bagley last Saturday and lost the game by a score 7 to 4. The sand dunes of that section were unfamiliar to our boys and they vow that the score will be reversed when the Bagley boys play the return game on our hard mud field where speed is possible.

It is the custom of the senior classes to request the churches in turn to present the commencement sermons.

A Special Train.

A special train will be run to this city from Crookston Sunday to accommodate the Crookston fans who desire to come to this city and attend the base ball game. Nearly 200 tickets have already been sold in Crookston, it is said.

Preaching, 11:00 a. m.

Epworth League, 6:45 p. m.

Preaching at 7:30 p. m.

Everybody invited.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Colorado Snow Flea.

The observing Colorado miner cannot furnish you scientific names, yet he will tell you at once that red snow is caused by the snow flea. The snow flea is very small. It would require about fifty of them to equal their larger brother of the east in size.

A person walking upright might think the snow covered by a very fine dust, but if your eyes are good and you place your face within eighteen or twenty inches of the snow you can easily discern the snow flea. Although so small as to be almost imperceptible to the naked eye, yet they are most active, jumping from twelve to fifteen inches.

To the naked eye they appear to be dark brown in color, but under a good microscope they would be found to be a reddish brown. During cold weather they stay under the bark of trees, but when it is a nice, warm day and the sun shines brightly you can find them on the southern and eastern slopes of the mountains, where they can get the direct rays of the sun.

During the day they will ascend the mountains, sometimes far above the timber line. When the sun disappears and it gets cold the snow flea freezes to death. During the winter great numbers will be thus frozen, and their dead bodies color the snow.

Fight With a Big Fish.

The whip ray, sea bat or devilfish, as it is variously named, is fairly plentiful in Galveston bay, so the appearance of four of these sea monsters at one time the other day did not excite any special remark. But they were seen by three boys, all under sixteen, and they determined to get one and sell it. So one of the boys borrowed a Winchester rifle, while the other two got a rowboat and a harpoon, and out they went after their prey. The boys rowed around awhile and soon saw one of the fishes and pulled up within forty or fifty feet. One of the boys fired a shot into the ray, which immediately breached, scooting fully twenty feet out and ahead, like a flying fish. Two more shots were fired, and after beating the water furiously it died. Then a harpoon was thrown into the creature, and it was towed to the wharf, where it was slung and hoisted out with a windlass. This fish measured fourteen feet from wing tip to wing tip.

National Salutations.

The other day two little girls met in the street car. They hadn't seen each other for quite a long time, so they shook hands heartily and said, "Why, how do you do?" at the same moment. Had these two met in England the greeting would have been much the same, but in France they would have said, "How do you carry yourself?" In Italy, "How do you stand?" In Germany, "How do you find yourself?" In Holland, "How do you fare?" In Sweden, "How can you?" In Egypt, "How do you perspire?" In China, "How is your stomach?" In Poland, "How do you have yourself?" In Russia, "How do you live on?" In Persia, "May thy shadow never be less."

Which do you like the best?

A Word of Caution.

This is a good time for boys to resolve, says the Youth's Companion, that they will not be drowned next summer. If the resolution is made and then remembered till frost comes in the autumn there will be fewer drownings this year than usual. Last summer nearly 300 children were drowned in New England. Most of them came to their death through going swimming in ponds or streams at times when their parents had forbidden the sport. The boy who decides not to drown will, in the first place, obey his parents and, in the second place, will take no risks when he is in the water.

Who was Illinois' most famous statesman? Abraham Lincoln.—Philadelphia Ledger.

How It Got Its Name.

Two Oceans pass, in Yellowstone park, is so named because whenever there is a shower in the vicinity and a certain small creek overflows its waters spread out over the edge of the continental divide and pass into tributaries of rivers which flow to the Atlantic and to the Pacific.

Conundrums.

What is that which always goes with its head downward? A nail in your shoe.

What is that which Adam never possessed, yet left two to each of his children? Parents.

The Messenger.

Little brown bed, your coverlid white
Melted away in the rain last night.
What do I see just peeping through?
Crocuses yellow, white and blue!
Up above in a leafless tree
A little bluebird sings to me:
"Don't you know when I'm on the wing
What to expect? The happy spring!"

Agents and Operators Meet.

The agents and operators on the Wheatline and from Glenwood to Emerson on the Winnipeg line who are members of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, met in Thief River Falls on Sunday to talk over matters of interest. About thirty were present and the meeting is said to have been a successful one in every way.

Bryan on Advertising.

William Jennings Bryan has answered some thousands of questions and some of them may be considered as compliments. Here's an instance:

While the Colonel was in Reading, Penn. one day a cheerful idiot inquired whether he believed that advertising paid.

In its terseness and wisdom Mr. Bryan's answer might be likened unto the philosophy of one Solomon. Said he, "The fellow who tries to attract business without advertising is like the young man who throws his sweetheart a silent kiss in the dark. He knows what he is doing—but no one else does.

MATTY'S "FADEAWAY."

How the Giants' Star Pitcher Mastered Its Delivery.

"Those persons who imagine that baseball is a snap or some special gift of nature should have been in the training camp of the New York Giants a few years ago and their ideas would have changed," says Hugh S. Fullerton in the American Magazine. "Early in the training season the word had flashed around the circuit, 'Matty's arm is gone.'

"Translated, that means a revision of all the pennant calculations of all the clubs in the National league. If Mathewson's arm really was permanently injured the New York club ceased to be a championship factor. I wandered out on to the training field a few days later, where nearly forty men were hard at work. Over at one side a graceful, handsome, boyish looking man was throwing slowly and with evident caution to a young catcher. Slowly, and studying every move in order to avoid jerking or twisting a damaged shoulder, he kept pitching, trying to 'throw the soreness out.' He had drawn a little cross in the dirt upon which he pivoted his right foot, and two feet in front of that and a foot to the left was a hole in the sand. As he threw he swung 'off his stride,' and, instead of planting his left foot straight in front, he swung it into the hole to the left. He had changed his pitching motion to accommodate the sore shoulder and prevent adding to the strain. Presently he swung his arm slowly overhand. The ball floated away, seemed to hesitate in midair, then dropped downward and to the right with a slow, twisting curve motion.

"'Here! What's that, Matty?' I called to him.

"'That's the fader,' he replied, smiling.

"I had read of the 'fadeaway' and believed it one of the spring nature fakes evolved by imaginative reporters. But it was true. Mathewson, realizing that he might never again be strong enough to pitch the fast jump ball or the wonderful fast curve that had made him the greatest pitching sensation of years, had deliberately set to work and by steady, persistent practice had evolved a new 'system of slants' by which he came near revolutionizing pitching. Hour after hour, despite the deadening pain in his shoulder, he kept at it. Pitching, pitching, twisting his hand a little less, a little more, then ten times to a spot—two inches to the left or the right, to find how the change in stride would affect the ball, he worked until he developed one of the most puzzling curves ever pitched. How many hours of suffering and hard work were required to perfect his fadeaway and make him again one of the greatest pitchers no one knows."

Another Great Peak.

During his recent expedition in the Himalayas Dr. T. G. Longstaff discovered a new chain of the Karakoram range, containing a group of immense peaks, one of which, Teram Kangri, situated in about latitude 35 degrees 30 minutes, longitude 77 degrees, rises, according to his measurements, to the stupendous elevation of 27,610 feet. Only Mount Everest, Kinchinjunga, K2 and Makalu are known to have a greater height than this. The newly discovered peak is said to be the culminating point of a totally distinct massif, which has hitherto appeared on no map. Dr. Longstaff has also discovered that the Siachen (Saichar) glacier is the longest in the Himalayas and probably the largest outside Alaska and the polar regions. Its length is more than forty-four miles.

One Story and a Jump.

The old house which was once the home of Samuel Arnold, the friend of Wilkes Booth, the assassinator of Abraham Lincoln, is no more. It was the popular belief that the Lincoln conspiracy was formed in this house, as it was the home of Samuel Arnold. The house was supposed to be about a hundred years old. It was of quaint architectural design and was one story and a "jump." The first floor contained six rooms and the "jump" two. It was probably built by George Arnold, father of Samuel Arnold. Mr. Trainer bought it about twenty years ago from Mrs. Orlan Jackson of Washington. Several times he started to raze the old building, but refrained on account of its supposed historical value.—Baltimore Sun.

A Son of the Revolution.

Professor Jeremiah Smith of the Harvard Law school, who has presented his resignation, to take effect Sept. 1, 1910, when he will be in his seventy-third year, is actually a "son of the Revolution." His father, likewise Jeremiah Smith by name, ran away from Harvard in 1777 to join the Revolutionary army, being then eighteen years of age. He served in the campaign against Burgoyne and was wounded at Bennington. He finally graduated at Queens (now Rutgers) college in 1780 and was later governor of New Hampshire, congressman from that state and its chief justice.

Baked Potatoes a Foot Long.

Baked potatoes a foot long are the kind served in the new diners of the Northern Pacific. Specially selected potatoes, coming usually from Washington, are kept on hand for baking, which the dining car management has made a specialty. A baked potato on the diner costs 10 cents. Each diner is loaded with 300 to 400 pounds of the mammoth potatoes before leaving a terminal for the trip across the continent from St. Paul to Seattle.—St. Paul Dispatch.

A MOVING PICTURE FEAT.

Making the Scene "The Parting of the Red Sea."

You'd be surprised to know how resourceful some of the photographers are today. There is a film which has lately been sent out all over the country that marks the climax in the art of motion picture faking. I don't believe one man in a thousand who sees it will have the least idea how it was done. It represents the flight of the children of Israel and gives the scene where Moses waved his wand and the Red sea parted.

The man who took the picture spent twelve hours on the Red sea section alone. He singled out a spot on the shore of Long Island where there was a sand bar which was out of water at low tide and under water at high. He started at high tide and took, say, a score of pictures of the sea as it looked then. After fifteen minutes he reeled off another twenty, and fifteen minutes later he did the same. Thus at the end of six hours he had a film showing the changes for every quarter of an hour. At the end of that time the tide had receded so that the sand bar could be seen. Then he called in the supers and had them walk across the bar while he took their picture. That was only half of the work. Later in the day when the tide began to rise he returned and began again to take a few pictures every fifteen minutes. At the end of six hours the water had risen to where it was when he began. We had some doubt as to how the film would come out. We didn't know whether the tide when photographed that way would give the desired effect of a sea parting and then closing up again. But it did. I don't know of any film that looks more lifelike and wonderful. The waves seem to rush apart for a minute and then back again, just as described in the Bible.—New York Post.

Oregon's Lake of the Clouds.

One of the wonders of Oregon is Crater lake, a remarkable body of deep water occupying the immense crater of an extinct volcano in the Cascade mountains of that state. It has been suggested that this mountain was once one of the loftiest in America, but that ages ago its summit fell in. The heart of the mountain is now occupied by a lake of exquisitely blue water whose greatest depth is 2,000 feet. The lake is six miles long by about four and a half miles in width and is completely encircled by precipitous walls varrying in height from 1,000 to 2,000 feet above the water. The greatest elevation of the crater rim above sea sevel is 8,200 feet. Out of the lake rises a volcanic cone called Wizard island, 840 feet high. When it shall have been rendered easy of access Crater lake is expected to rank among the wonders of natural scenery with the Yellowstone and Yosemite valleys and the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.—Harper's Weekly.

Passing of the Attic.

Nobody would deny the picturesqueness of the old time attic. How many stories have been woven about it! What tales of adventure and romance have explored it for its pervasive charm! And how many rainy hours have we ourselves passed pleasantly under its mysterious eaves! The farmhouse attic sheds a peculiarly agreeable glow upon the childish memories of the country bred man. He recalls its dangling ears of corn, its savory herbs, its sense of peace and other worldliness. And yet it is well that the attic, even the farmhouse attic, should go, and it is going fast. In place of it is coming the third story, a light and airy part of the house, an integral portion of the whole establishment.—Providence Journal.

Wages on the Panama Canal.

The West Indian laborer is paid 90 cents for a day of eight hours, with quarters. The European laborer receives $1.80 for eight hours, with free quarters. The standard rate for American mechanics is 65 cents an hour in gold. The average compensation received by American employees is $150 per month. The average monthly compensation of laborers and others who are reckoned with on the silver basis is about $35 a month. There are approximately about 44,000 employees on the isthmus on the payrolls of the commission, about 5,000 of whom are Americans. The Americans are mostly mechanics, skilled artisans, clerks and higher officials.—New York American.

A Comet's Tail.

The tail of a comet is composed of gas, existing in a highly rarefied condition. Little particles of electricity, called corpuscles or ions, are being constantly given off at enormous speed by the sun. Each meteorite in the comet's head is surrounded by its own rarefied atmosphere. When one of these little ions strikes one of the molecules of gas in the comet's atmosphere it carries it off with it to form the tail. The electrical charge makes the gas luminous, and it is by this light and not by reflected sunlight that the tail is made visible to us. A comet's tail, therefore, seems to be merely a very extended aurora.—William H. Pickering in Century.

Picture Postals In 1777.

A long forgotten book entitled "Almanac de la Petite Poste de 1777" has just been discovered, showing that even thus early the picture postcard flourished in France at least. The almanac reports as follows: "Demaulsen, the painter, has introduced pictorial cards containing room for short announcements or letters. These pretty cards are sent through the post like letters at a cheaper rate and are all the vogue."—Baltimore News.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write today.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd, 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

The Northern News, published at Spooner, is of the opinion that Northern Minnesota should send representatives to the legislature who have a conscience that do not hurt them. The News is booming Albert Berg for state senator.

Photographs of the comet indicate that the gas in the tail is harmless. In fact, the spectroscope indicates that the tail will not hurt us any more when we plunge through it than we would be injured by passing through a gentle zephyr.

The cost of living is not advancing in England, because the consumers are getting their food from the producers without permitting middlemen to dip in with both hands. There is possibility that the American consumers will some day wake up, but their alarm clock seems to have been set for a late hour.

The Sunbeam says that people of this senatorial district would be "suckers" to again vote for the return of A. L. Hanson to the state senate. The Sunbeam does not question the honesty of Senator Hanson, but evidently is of the opinion that we should elect a senator that would go to St. Paul and be an understudy for Smith, Calhoun and other members of the senate combine.

It has been pointed out that while St. Paul has less than 10 per cent of the population of the state it has over 50 per cent of the officers listed in the blue book. And now some of the powers that be have signified their desire to defeat the present clerk of the supreme court, Mr Caswell, of Anoka, for the nomination, and secure the place for a St. Paul man. Mr. Caswell was appointed to the position and we believe his conduct of the office entitled him to an endorsement at the coming election.—Hubbard County Clipper.

Reports from Washington state that Congressman Steenerson has won a great victory for the settlers of the eleven towns because he has secured a ruling to the effect that a homesteader out there can make commutation proof after eight months residence instead of fourteen as required on other Red Lake reservation lands. As a matter of fact the actual settlers—and there hundreds of them—did not desire to have any such ruling obtained. What they want are neighbors that cultivate the soil and help build roads and ditches, and not speculators who plow up a small garden, build a small shanty and leave the country as soon as they have made final proof.

ALL DRUGGISTS

IDLE MONEY AS A TROUBLE BREEDER

For a good while it has been tolerably well known that the demand for rubber—owing partly to the automobile industry—is increasing rapidly. But along in February this fact seemed suddenly to impress itself upon the British consciousness. A great speculation in rubber shares sprang up, proceeding with ever-increasing fury. In brokers' offices, we read, bookkeepers work all night to keep the ledgers posted; lines of clerks a block long stand before the registry office, while on the floor of the Stock Exchange brokers fall asleep from sheer exhaustion. Within a month quotations for whole groups of rubber-company shares advanced thirty to forty per cent. One must go back to the great South African gold-mine craze of 1895 to find an equally violent speculative craze—and, perhaps, when the story is told, to find an equally violent collapse.

Why this sudden and amazingly extensive discovery of the merits of rubber? In London the following answer is given: Collection of the income tax was suspended during the long Parliamentary fight over the budget; great sums, destined to pay income taxes whenever the fight should be ended, accumulated in the banks, and these sums mean-while were available for speculative purposes—hence the sudden and tremendous rubber boom. In short, as this country's experience has proved over and over, an idle dollar affords Satan even greater opportunities than an idle hand.

The other day James J. Hill said that the railroads ought to have a billion six hundred millions of fresh capital yearly for six years for permanent improvements in order to avoid chronic and costly traffic congestion. Recently, also, B. F. Yoakum declared, after investigation, that ten million acres of swampy land in Louisiana, worth ten to fifteen dollars an acre and yielding practically nothing, could by expenditure of only five dollars an acre for reclamation, be converted into rich farms, worth from seventy-five to one hundred dollars an acre and yielding annually twenty to thirty dollars an acre. In other words, the investment of fifty million dollars would create over five hundred million dollars of solid wealth. An important difficulty, of course, is to get hold of the initial fifty millions Several times that amount, unquestionably, is constantly employed in speculation that creates not a single dollar of new wealth.

Does It Pay.

An observer who recently visited the big mills in Minneapolis writes the following in Farm, Stock and Home: Floor after floor of machinery! You ride up an elevator, and the eye catches glimpses of belts, and machinery, and men, a great bass of moving things, but after all it is very simple. Here is a cleaner that takes the grain as it comes out of the car. It separates the chaff, the large weed seed, and the wheat goes on. Stop a moment with that large weed seed. Here is a handful of it — just a little handful caught from the tailings of the cleaner — wild oats, speltz, wild buckwheat, smutty wheat kernels, mustard, cockle and several more. A rather poor showing for the man who raised that wheat, don't you think?

You see he paid for threshing it, then he hauled it to town for nothing, the elevator man docked him for growing it, the railroad charged him something like six cents a bushel for hauling it, the miller charges him for cleaning it out of the wheat, and after it goes from our sight it is recleaned, the oats, barley, and the like to be sold in the market for feed, the rest to be ground up, shipped back to the farmer, and sold at $12 a ton as a low grade of mill feed. Thats poor business or so I take it.

If there is cockle, kinghead, or wild peas in the grain, the miller pays from 3 to 5 cents per bushel less than he otherwise would, and so the farmer who will grow dirty wheat, gets what he terms a "dirty deal." Fix it any way you please a weed is a robber, and all this we have charged up to it is little compared to the fertility it takes out of the land, and the lessened yield it brings to the farm.

"THE ROYAL CHEF" AND "A KNIGHT FOR A DAY."

Thief River Falls' Handsome New Auditorum to Be Formerly Opened on Monday and Tuesday Evenings, May 23 and 24.

Dancing Girls in "The Royal Chef," to Be Presented Monday Evening and at Matinee Tuesday Afternoon.

Thief River Falls' new auditorium will be formally opened to the public on Monday and Tuesday evening, May 23 and 24. On Monday evening "The Royal Chef" will be presented by a company of forty people and on Tuesday evening the play will be "A Knight for a Day." On Tuesday afternoon a special matinee will be given. Both are musical comedies and are pronounced successes.

In "The Royal Chef" will be found one of the most delightful musical comedies ever presented and for those who have seen the play there always lingers a pleasant memory. Its comedy is of that vibrating, unctious and richly original sort and its little romance is neat and interesting. In it there is more actual wit, more innocence, mischief, more admirable acting and good singing than in ten of the so called comic operas of the present day.

This season it is supplied with a new equipment of elegant scenery and costumes, while the cast is composed entirely of stage notables supported by the same whirl wind chorus of clever singers and dancers that are never idle during the entire action of the play.

On Tuesday evening the big musical gaity, "A Knight for a Day" will be presented, which had a run of over 300 nights in the Whitney Theatre in Chicago.

The production is one typical of the B. C. Whitney trade mark which means in addition to some of the most unique electrical surprises, a chorus of rare beauty and talent, including a number of miniature maidens in dainty dances devised by that wizard of chorus numbers, Gus Sholke. Those who are forunate enough to have seen "A Knight for a Day" know it to be a gay and girly gee-gaw of particular charm in its score and of uproarious mirth in its comic story and incidents. Mainly it concerns the misadventures of Jonathan Joy and Tilly Day, the first a nervy little waiter who decides to pose as a knight whose credentials he has annexed and failed to return because of the owner's neglect to tip him, the other, a servant girl at a young ladies boarding school. Comic incident runs riot through the piece.

Everyone who follows the theatre has doubtless heard of the elopement scene with Tilly Day, the "servant lady" and Jonathan Joy, the "near knight" escaping from a dormitory window by the light of the moon, only to be caught after a second trip up the ladder to get the powder puff of the "servant lady" which had been overlooked in the hurry. Most people are likewise familiar with the laughable waves generated by the scene at the well where Tilly becomes intoxicated by imbibing of the waters of a champagne charged cistern. In the girl ensembles, Gus Sohlke exceeded all previous efforts and this part of the presentation is perhaps as renowned as anything in the production.

The company will arrive in the city Sunday evening from Calgary, Canada, on the 10:10 and will return to Winnipeg Wednesday morning, where they will finish the week. The prices of admission will be from $1 to $5. The seats will be on sale at Swore's, commencing on Monday, May 16.

McClung, Miss Alice

When calling for any of the above please say, advertised

Frank H. Kratka,

There is many a stiff clay soil that could be made responsive and friable were it given a good supply of humus in the shape of barnyard manure or a good growth of green stuff plowed under. Especially is there need of such humus in sections of short rainfall where manure does not decompose readily and where there is a temptation to use little of it for this reason. Notwithstanding this, manures should be applied where available even if a longer time is required to convert them into usable soil material.

The cost of building a silo has been figured out as $1.50 per each ton of capacity, which would make a 200 ton silo cost in the neighborhood of $300. Two hundred tons of silage properly secured will provide a herd of twenty cows with a silage ration during the year. Both in the matter of securing and storing silage is the cheapest feed produced on the farm, and the wonder is that more dairymen and stock raisers are not awake to the advantages to be derived from its use. As a means of providing a summer ration, when feed is short and flies are bad, the silo is acknowledged by those who have had experience with it to be the best and most economical method that can be used.

There would be greater contentment and happiness for them and a larger amount of sunshine radiating from their lives if more girls acted upon the conclusion arrived at by an interesting little lady of fourteen, whose case came to the writer's attention not long ago, who one day told her mother that since she was persuaded she could never be beautiful in facial appearance she felt she would have to make up for it by being good, unselfish and useful. Already this idea is bearing fruit, and a most winsome and wholesome personality is being developed. Fortunate indeed, also is the girl with the pretty face and attractive bearing who has the wisdom to appreciate that, after all, it is actions rather than looks that make for the best elements in personality and character and make one most prized by his fellows.

Worth Remembering.

Horace Greely used to say that you can never get milk from a cow which is dissatisfied with her lot or inclined to nurse a grouch. The man who tears around the barn like a demented weasel planting a kick here and talking loudly through the basement of his Adam's apple won't stand jack high on a creamery pay day. A kiss on the cold, moist nose of a heifer is a better dividend producer than wharf rat profanity. A cow whose slats are liable to be replated any minute by an irate milker will back her milk away up out of reach of the cheese factory. After you have caressed a milk cow across the breadbasket with a No. 11 boot you might as well try to extract milk from a farrow mule. — Hallock News.

Field Meet at Crookston.

At a meeting of the Red River Valley High School Athletic Assn., held at Crookston Saturday at the call of Prof. J. H. Hay, of this city, it was decided to hold the field meet in Crookston, June 28. There are fifteen high schools in the district and the biggest field meet ever held is now certain.

It is not expected that every school eligible to membership in the association will send track teams, but seven or eight of them will do so, and from other schools there will be several to compete in certain events.

The gathering will be of interest not only to the schools participating, but also to every lover of amateur sports. The Red River Valley Association is now getting on a good sound footing and the annual field meets will hereafter be among the most notable athletic events of Northwestern Minnesota. At the meeting Saturday Thief River Falls, Fosston, McIntosh, Warren, East Grand Forks, Fertile, Red Lake Falls, Argyle and several other high schools were represented.

A USELESS PRECAUTION.

There has been considerable speculation among horticulturists of late as to whether the heavy mulching of the roots of fruit trees will serve to extend the dormant period and thus postpone blossoming beyond the time of killing frosts. Some experiments which have lately been conducted by the directors of the horticultural experiment station at Cornell university, New York, seem to show that there is little or no efficacy in such precaution. With a view to proving the contention that it is the temperature of the air enveloping trunk, limbs and buds rather than the condition of soil surrounding the roots that is responsible for the growth and development of bud and leaf, the directors pulled a limb of a fruit tree which was growing close to one of the laboratory buildings through a window and then battened up the cracks on either side of the limb. This was in the month of February, when the roots were in frozen soil to a depth of several feet. In spite of this, the limb which was in the warm atmosphere of the room developed just as if spring had come and put forth blossoms and leaves of full size, while the buds on the limbs out of doors remained entirely dormant. This would seem to show that the mulching of roots to retard bud development is futile unless it is coupled with such bundling as will also protect the limbs and buds from the warmth and rays of the sun, as is the case in the covering of a strawberry bed.

DAIRYING AND PROSPERITY.

There is no single line of industry or occupation that year in and out will contribute in a greater degree to the prosperity and well being of the section in which it is carried on than dairying. It enriches and builds up and seldom depletes either the soil or financial resources of those who follow it. The reasons for this may be several, but the chief is that under dairying as a system and the type of farming which usually accompanies it there is removed from a farm little or nothing in the shape of soil fertility. In fact, more frequently is the opposite the case, the soil becoming richer from year to year through the large quantities of manure which are scattered over it. While dairying means hard and careful work, it has the added advantage that its returns come in every month in the year. It has brought wealth to impoverished communities, has replaced dilapidated, rundown dwellings and outbuildings with cozy homes and big red barns and has changed folks' poverty to competence and prosperity. There is no section of the country, east, west, north or south, where it can possibly be followed where it ought not to be introduced and no section where it is introduced which will not be enriched and benefited by it. Hand in hand with the growing of clover and alfalfa it will produce more wealth and give a greater endowment of happiness than all the gold and silver mines of the land.

A VALUABLE BULLETIN.

Not in a long time has a more practical or valuable bulletin been put out by the department of agriculture than that issued a short time ago under the caption "Replanning a Farm For Profit." It discusses a rundown Illinois farm which came to grief through a monotonous and uninterrupted rotation of corn and oats, oats and corn and nothing else. It emphasizes the benefits to be derived from the growing of clover in rotation with grain crops and the use of farm and commercial fertilizers with a view to maintaining and, if possible, increasing the fertility of the soil. The bulletin gives six different types of farming that may be substituted for the usual one of corn and oats, so as to increase the income of the farm from two to five times and at the same time increase the fertility of the soil. A copy of this bulletin is worthy of the most careful perusal by tens of thousands of agricultural sinners living in the corn belt, and they can get possession of it by writing to the congressman from their district or directly to the secretary of agriculture, Washington.

THE SMALL BOY IN THE GARDEN

Give that restless, active boy a corner of the garden patch and let him have for his own pocket all the money he can make from the truck he sells from it. Make him keep exact account of his operations so that he will know just how much he has made above expenses at the end of the season. Tending such a garden patch will keep him occupied, give him something to think about besides baseball and going swimming and incidentally it will be a good deal easier to locate him when he is needed for one cause or another. It will be a valuable factor in the lad's practical education and will be helpful to him in many other ways.

Prices are never too high for what a fellow has to sell and never too low to suit for those articles or products he may have to buy.

If the flock of poultry do not have a range which will enable them to get all the green food they need it is well to sow a bed of lettuce, turnips or rape for them so that this lack may be supplied during the summer months. They greatly relish this green food and will respond in a larger egg production.

The beginner in the poultry business often makes the mistake of trying to raise too many chicks and keep too many fowls in the quarters which are available. This overcrowding tends to undermine the health and vitality of the flock and in so far to defeat the very object in view in such overcrowding—namely, the profit to be had in returns.

The cheapest as well as safest fly killer is a teaspoonful of formalin added to half a pint of water, the solution being put in any convenient shallow dish. The flies will be attracted to it more quickly if a little sugar is sprinkled in, as they are fond of sweets. This mixture will kill the flies quickly, but will not seriously affect the little folks should they drink two or three saucerfuls by mistake.

Every gardener and fruit grower, even though operating on a small scale, should equip himself with a small hand sprayer, of which there are several good makes on the market. This can be used in the spraying of berry bushes and potato vines, while it can be used with good results in giving the interior of henhouse or stable a spray with an insecticide or disinfectant. By using a ladder the outfit may also be used quite effectively in the spraying of small fruit trees.

While the ordinary four or six shovel corn cultivator cannot be entirely dispensed with in handling the corn crop, more scientific cultivation of the soil as well as a more thorough killing of weeds can be effected with the knife or surface cultivator. It takes a little time to get the knives to working at their best, but when the operator gets them adjusted once so that they scour and do the work he has little further trouble. Many corn growers will use nothing else for the later tilling of the field, when the soil is dry enough to work.

The dairyman who is wide awake and keeping up with the procession has already eliminated the loafers from his herd of cows by means of the Babcock tester, while those run down with disease he has got rid of by applying the tuberculin test. On the other hand, there are scads of fellows, dairymen, so called, who are still shinning along in the same old slipshod manner, not knowing and seemingly not caring whether their cows are paying their way or not. Little short of an earthquake would wake them up, and it is questionable if they were aroused if they would have gumption enough to take advantage of the opportunity.

A Holstein cow, Princess Carlotta, owned by the Missouri experiment station, gave last year 18,405 pounds of milk, which, with the 618 pounds of butter fat made therefrom, contained more human food than is represented by the complete carcasses of four steers weighing 1,250 each. The quantity of milk in question contained a total of 2,218 pounds of dry matter, as follows: Protein, 552 pounds; fat, 618 pounds; sugar, 920 pounds; ash, 128 pounds. As the carcass of a 1,250 pound steer is 56 per cent water, each would represent 548 pounds of dry matter. In view of such a milk yield as this, one can readily appreciate that a cow is, in fact, a machine, highly organized and sensitive, and that her ration, both as to composition and quantity, is a most important matter.

Now and then one unwittingly of necessity moves into a house that is already inhabited with the notorious bedbug, the bane and object of loathing of every cleanly housewife. A friend who was confronted with just such a situation as this resorted to the sulphur method, which consisted of sprinkling about three pounds of sulphur on half an iron kettle of live hardwood coals. It did the business. The sulphur fumes penetrated everywhere, coming out of the cellar windows and through the cracks in the shingles, where dead bugs were found by the dozen when roof repairs were made later. It is well to set the kettle of coals in a shallow box of earth or on an old piece of sheet iron or zinc to prevent things catching fire in case the sulphur boils over. To make the smudge most effective all the interior doors should be open, and all windows and outside doors should be closed.

A handy trellis on which to train raspberry, dewberry and logan berry vines consists of three wires properly supported by posts and crosspieces, two of the wires which are at the outside being of equal height and about two and one-half feet apart. The third wire is between them, about a foot above. The first season's growth of vines may be trained along the lower side wires, while the following season they may be fastened to the higher central wire and the side wires used as before for the new growth. By this method the fruiting vines may be kept separate from the new growth, while the berries are borne where they can be got at easily without scratching the hands. The posts need not be placed at more frequent intervals than are necessary to support the weight of the vines, as the wires can be stretched taut by proper bracing at each end of the stretch of trellis.

Now and then the sparrow hawk grows so bold that he will invade the house lot in search of small birds that frequent the shrubs and hedges. In case he does he should be given a warm reception, for, while this hawk destroys many mice and the small animals, he also preys extensively upon several varieties of much more useful birds.

The penetrating power of a growing root is realized when one has seen a quack grass root grown entirely through a good sized potato or the root of a mature oak down fifteen feet and penetrating seeming impenetrable bedrock or hardpan. And the marvel in the latter instance is that the roots keep their bark intact and apparently uninjured by the pressure sustained.

The North Dakota experiment station has recently issued bulletin No. 34, which contains a summary of the work of the demonstration farms which have been in operation for the past three or four years. During the interval 1906-9 it was found possible to increase the yield of wheat on these farms from 14.4 to 20.5 bushels per acre by using good seed, giving proper tillage and adopting a sensible system of crop rotation.

With the coming of the warm weather a more careful and frequent inspection of the poultry and poultry quarters should be made to head off the lice and mite pests should they appear. Whitewashing the house, nests and outside coops used for the hens and their chicks, a fumigation of the poultry house with flour of sulphur scattered over a pan of live coals and the spraying of the roosts, nest boxes and, if necessary, the interior of the house with kerosene or a solution containing crude petroleum are three ways in which these poultry enemies may be kept in check.

Much of the fruit grown in eastern and central state orchards would be better colored and fetch a higher price than it does if the central branches of bearing trees were cut out, giving open tops, so that the sun would have an opportunity to give the fruit the red color which is so popular with all buyers. It is in this matter of color chiefly that the western fruit, ripened by the genial caress of many days of sunshine, excels that produced farther east, where clear, bright days are the exception, perhaps, and not the rule. This cutting out the tops of fruit, particularly apple and peach trees, may deform the trees for a season, but it will in the end mean fruit borne lower down, better colored and more easily sprayed and harvested.

In a large sense is it true that "the good (or mediocre) is an enemy of the best," but in few instances is it truer than of just fair fruit on an open market in competition at a greatly reduced price with that which is first class. In many apple markets this spring is this proving the case, inferior—in fact, cull—stuff being lately dumped on the market and selling at so low a price as to seriously affect the sales of really high grade fruit. This situation is primarily the fault of buyers and commission men, who thought a bull market last fall would continue and enable them to sell at a handsome profit really worthless stuff bought for a song. This situation will work hardship in the end chiefly for the growers, who will not only have to stand sponsor for their own but the middleman's sins as well.

A couple of years ago a young man whose home was in New York made a wager with a leading journalist of the state that he could save $200 a year for a period of two years over and above expenses and at ordinary day wages. At the end of the period, during which he served eleven employers and at no job received more than $45 per month, he had in the bank $440. It goes without saying that the young fellow didn't booze or go a-gadding nights. He attended to business and saved every cent possible. The incident simply goes to show that the young man of today can get ahead at manual labor if he will, even if his progress along this line may be a bit slow. Too many young fellows slip along from hand to mouth from year to year and, instead of having money in the bank, are steeped in debt to many of their associates.

Following the recent widespread interest in irrigation as a means of reclaiming lands previously barren for lack of rainfall, attention is now being directed to the principle as a safeguard for some crops in states usually humid, but now and then subject to dry spells at critical seasons in the life of growing vegetables or maturing fruit. An Illinois farmer whose case was reported a short time since has installed a pump, a tank of large capacity and necessary pipes and hydrants and has found the plant a very satisfactory investment, judging from the good results he has been able to secure from having water available when needed. He not only uses the water on his big berry patch and in his vegetable garden in dry times, but has also watered considerable areas of his grain and hay fields. Many is the crop of small fruit, garden truck, potatoes or corn that might be saved were it possible to water it in such dry times. The merits of such an irrigation system, out of place as it may seem in a humid section, are worth looking into.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 299 of the General Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

SAMUEL G. IVERSON, State Auditor.

ROOSEVELT VISITS STOCKHOLM

Intense Interest Displayed by All Classes of People in the Swedish Capital—Bjornson Funeral at Christiania Attended by Imposing Ceremonies—Roosevelt Royally Entertained During Stay in Copenhagen.

SWEDEN.

Intense interest was displayed by all classes of people in Theodore Roosevelt's visit to Stockholm last week and he was received and feted like a king. The American colony welcomed him most heartily and delegations from prominent literary, philosophical and musical societies were on hand to welcome him and do him the highest honors. Stockholm was lavishly decorated in his honor and one of the chief features of the decorative scheme was a huge arch erected at the entrance of Fredsgatan, a short distance from the railway station. The aldermen of the city voted the decoration of several public streets and buildings and thousands of people crowded the cafes, restaurants and parks.

Upon arrival at the Stockholm Central station the Roosevelt party was received by American Minister Graves and the attaches of the American legation. The Swedish government was represented by Baron Trolle, the foreign minister, and several other high officials, while General Varberg, the governor of Stockholm, was present to extend the municipal greetings. The Roosevelt party rode in the royal carriages to the royal palace, where they were entertained at luncheon. The way led through the beautiful Strandvagen, the fashionable promenade in Stockholm, and through other streets which were gaily decorated for the occasion. Colonel Roosevelt found much to interest him in the royal palace, a stately edifice built in the Seventeenth century and little remodeled since then. It is beautifully situated at the head of the lake and its chief approach is from Lyons hill, opposite the North bridge. The crown prince and crown princess occupy one portion of the palace and the king and queen the other. Of especial interest to Colonel Roosevelt and his son was the immense billiard room, occupying a part of one of the upper floors of the palace. This room is filled with trophies of the hunt collected by King Gustaf, who is a great lover of outdoor sport. There are hundreds of deer heads, bears, moose and crocodiles.

Though the duration of their stay was exceedingly brief in Stockholm the Roosevelt party found time to visit many places of interest in and about the city. They inspected the Northern museum, which is famous throughout Europe. Visits were paid to the principal government buildings, all of which are spacious and many exceedingly beautiful. Colonel Roosevelt and son also paid a visit to Skansen, the great open air museum, and here he listened to the Stockholm male chorus, which had gathered there to sing in his honor. The ex-president was enthusiastic over the singing and exclaimed that it was the most magnificent chorus singing that he had heard in all his life.

The Swedish-American society gave its annual dinner on the evening of April 9. The festivities were held at the Radhus restaurant, which had been lavishly decorated for the occasion. Editor Von Koch delivered an animated address entitled "America and the Immigrants," which was illustrated by means of stereopticon views. Madame Bally Hogberg rendered some Swedish folk songs and a quartette sang some American songs.

King Gustaf has left Cape Martin for Nice, where he will be treated by Professor Schweringen, who was at one time Bismarck's physician. From there the king will journey to Vienna. The king, according to all reports, does not appear to be in the most desirable health and some little anxiety is apparent in many quarters.

At the beginning of the present year the state church of Sweden was served by 2,767 ordained clergymen. This makes one clergyman to about 2,000 inhabitants. But it must be remembered that there are clergymen in Sweden who do not belong to the state church and that there are inhabitants that have separated from it.

According to a Stockholm paper there were sixty-five Mormon agents engaged in proselyting work in different parts of Sweden last year. They visited 175,000 Swedish families, held over 20,000 religious meetings, sold and gave away 42,000 Mormon books, besides distributing 277,262 pamphlets.

NORWAY.

A dispatch dated Christiania, May 4, says:

The funeral of the late Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the Norwegian writer, who died recently in Paris, was held yesterday with imposing ceremonies. It was attended by the king and queen, the members of the various legations and many high officials. Great crowds flocked to listen to the addresses, the principal one of which was delivered by Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the explorer.

From early in the morning the streets were thronged. Trinity cathedral, where the services were held, was a compact mass of people. The church was beautifully decorated. The distinguished assemblage included representatives of foreign courts, political, municipal and learned societies, the members of the Nobel committee, the ministers and deputies, military and naval officers and diplomats.

At 2 o'clock the king and queen arrived. The orchestra from the National theater played Grieg's funeral march. Dr. Nansen made the commemorative address and the Swedish author, Karl Heidenstam, and others delivered eulogistic speeches. On leaving the cathedral the funeral cortege was joined by the corporations, bearing banners. The poet was thus followed to his grave by an enormous procession.

Haakon VII, king of Norway, and Queen Maud were the first to greet former President Roosevelt on his arrival at Christiania. Colonel Roosevelt presented Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel and Kermit and the party then proceeded to the palace.

The streets of Christiania were bright with decorations and almost every one was wearing an American flag. A Roosevelt march, Roosevelt photographs and compilations of Roosevelt's sayings were sold in the shops and on the highways.

The king and queen gave a dinner at the palace in honor of their American guests. More than 200 of the most eminent personages in Norway were present, including the premier and cabinet ministers, the leaders of the various political parties, literary people, financiers and the representatives of the most distinguished Norwegian life. Four state chairs were placed at the principal table and, after all the others of the company were standing at their places, the king appeared with Mrs. Roosevelt on his arm, Colonel Roosevelt following with the queen. Both the king and Mr. Roosevelt responded to toasts.

KING HAAKON.

During the first three months of the present year 1,015 persons emigrated from Bergen to foreign ports. More than 75 per cent of the emigrants started for America.

Six hundred and fifty-five children have been confirmed in the various churches in Bergen this spring.

Hotel Boulevard in Christiania will be rebuilt this summer at an expenditure of $200,000.

DENMARK.

A dispatch dated Copenhagen, May 2, says:

The Stars and Stripes floated above the royal palace today for the first time in the history of Denmark, and ex-President Roosevelt, in the absence of King Frederick, is the guest of Crown Prince Christian, one of the palaces being placed at the disposal of Mr. Roosevelt and his family.

The prince, presiding at a dinner this evening as the king's representative, thanked Mr. Roosevelt for coming to their court and proposed his health, which was heartily responded to by those around the table, who included the leading personages in the kingdom, in court, parliamentary and scholarly life.

The colonel in reply said that he had received a cordial message from the king and thanked the prince for his hospitality. He then proposed a toast to the king and the royal family of Denmark.

At the reception given by Maurice F. Egan, the American minister, at the legation, the former president met the diplomatic representatives, the cabinet ministers and many persons prominent in the various departments of public activity.

The crown prince met the party on their arrival from The Netherlands by way of Kiel. He drove with Mr. Roosevelt to the palace and showed him to his apartments. The prince then went to his own residence, which is located directly across the avenue. Half an hour later the colonel visited the prince and had tea, proceeding from there to pay a visit to Prince Waldemar and Prince Hans, the latter being the uncle of the queen of England.

An interesting excursion was enjoyed the following day when the Roosevelt party visited Elsinore, twenty-four miles from Copenhagen, which is the assumed scene of Shakespeare's tragedy of Hamlet.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

In a lecture at Christiania former President Roosevelt entered upon the most difficult field of European politics and in the conclusion of a carefully worked out thesis advocated an international agreement that would serve to check the growth of armaments, especially naval armaments, and the formation of a league of peace by those great powers honestly bent on universal concord, "not only to keep the peace among themselves, but to prevent, by force if necessary, its being broken by others."

Governor J. Franklin Fort of New Jersey has refused the request of Prosecutor Garven of Hudson county, that state, for a requisition upon the governor of Illinois for the extradition of J. Ogden Armour, director of the National Packing company, who is under indictment with other officers and directors of packing companies on a charge of conspiracy to unlawfully enhance the cost of meat through the creation of an artificial scarcity of the same.

Theodore Roosevelt's action in not meeting Pope Pius X. on the former president's recent visit to Rome was called insulting and a violation of Mr. Roosevelt's principle of a "square deal" by Most Rev. William H. O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, at a public meeting of the American Federation of Catholic Societies of that diocese in session at Lowell, Mass.

The United States circuit court of appeals at New York has affirmed the decree of the United States circuit court, in which the Standard Oil company was fined $20,000 by a jury before Judge Noyes, in the Western district of New York, for violation of the interstate commerce act.

The will of the late Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) has been filed for probate at Redding, Conn., and leaves the entire estate to the surviving daughter, Clara Langhorn Clemens, wife of Ossip Gabrilowitsch. The amount of the estate is not given.

William R. Hearst has begun a libel suit against the New York Times because that paper reported the speech of Mayor Gaynor at the American Newspaper Publishers' association dinner. Mr. Hearst demands $100,000 damages.

Through a Louisville (Ky.) attorney William Randolph Hearst has entered suit in the federal court against Henry Watterson individually for $100,000 and the Courier-Journal for the same sum.

FOREIGN NEWS.

An explosion which wrecked the plant of the General Explosives company of Canada, located near Hull, Que., killed fifteen persons and seriously injured fifty others. The force of the explosion was terrific. The country for miles around was laid waste and many small dwellings in the city of Hull on the side nearest the scene of the explosion were flattened to the ground.

A large part of Cartago, Costa Rica, has been destroyed by a powerful seismic movement. At least 500 persons are dead and many hundreds injured. Scores of buildings were thrown down, among them the palace of justice, erected by Andrew Carnegie. San Jose also was shaken, some of the buildings being damaged, but no deaths are reported in that city.

Before a vast audience the Royal Geographical society of London presented Commander Robert E. Peary with the special gold medal of the society and, through its president, welcomed the American explorer as "the first and only human being who ever led a party of his fellow creatures to a pole of the earth."

HELD ON GIRL SLAVE CHARGE

James Vincent Arrested by International Falls Sheriff.

James Vincent, arrested at Port Arthur by Canadian immigration authorities, on complaint that he was engaged in white slave traffic in connection with the case of Lillian Neumann of Appleton, Wis., and Sylvia Graham of Columbus, O., which has recently attracted so much attention, was taken to Fort Francis, opposite International Falls, and deported after a hearing.

Sheriff Ferrer of Koochiching county then took Vincent in charge on a warrant charging him with the felony of bringing women into the state for illegal purposes. He waived examination and was bound over to the July grand jury meeting and in default of $1,000 bonds was taken to the Bemidji jail for safe keeping.

The girls in the case will be held until their relatives furnish bonds for their return to testify before the grand jury. It is expected that they will be liberated in the course of a few days.

BATTLE HERO IS DROWNED

Veteran of European Conflicts Perishes in Rainy River.

Old Mike Stern, living down the Rainy river from Spooner, was drowned in Sensiles creek. How the accident happened is not known. He left Baudette in his rowboat, which was found later floating bottom up. The body was found some hours after by a searching party.

Mike Stern was sixty-eight years old and was born in Germany. He fought in the allied army against Garibaldi, who invaded Naples. He was in seven decisive battles. For bravery he was awarded a medal by Peter X.

Mike Stern and the vegetables he sold were well known. His reputation as a gardener surpassed that of all others.

FOUR ARE POISONED BY GAS

Members of Cass Lake Family Were Near to Death.

Escaping coal gas almost caused the deaths of four persons at Cass Lake. Mrs. E. L. Woods was awakened by a babe at 2 o'clock in the morning and found she could hardly move. She awoke her daughter, Mrs. D. W. Bennington, and told her to go for a doctor. The daughter jumped out of bed, but fell unconscious to the floor. The mother then staggered to the door and crawled to a doctor's office across the street. Members of the family were worked over by physicians several hours before they were out of danger. Investigation revealed the fact that the top of the coal stove had been left open. Doctors state that if one more hour had elapsed the entire family would have perished.

REPUBLICANS ELECT MAYOR

But Democrats Retain Control of St. Paul City Council.

Herbert P. Keller, the Republican candidate, was elected mayor of St. Paul over Henry G. Haas, Democrat, by about 5,000 majority. William H. Farnham, Republican, won the city comptrollership from Edwin J. Bishop, Democrat, by 2,331 votes. S. A. Farnsworth's majority for city treasurer over Albert L. Roth, his Democratic opponent, was 905. Judge John W. Finehout, Republican, heads the list of municipal court judges with 16,5[illegible] votes. Judge Hugo O. Hanft, Democrat, comes next with 15,727.

The Democrats control the city council, electing four of the nine assemblymen and eight of the twelve aldermen.

LOSS FROM FIRE IS HEAVY

Factory and Warehouse Burned at Minneapolis.

Fire totally destroyed the factory and warehouse of the North Side Sash and Door company at Minneapolis, entailing a loss estimated at about $70,000, covered by insurance. Due to the high wind the blaze was spectacular.

But for a strong northwest gale the factory of the Bardwell-Robinson Sash and Door company would also have suffered, the wind, however, fanned the flames toward the river. The factory was a seething furnace when the fire department arrived and only by hard work were the flames subdued before reaching any of the lumber piles in the yard. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

Eminent Engineer Dead.

Walter Craig Kerr, fifty-one years old, of Donjan Hills, L. I., one of the world's most eminent engineers, died of uraemia at Rochester, this state, after an operation for kidney trouble. He died in the town he was reared in and near St. Peter, Minn., where he was born and where he knew the late Governor John A. Johnson from childhood.

Two Minnesota Miners Killed.

Dominick Haryelle, thirty years of age, employed on a steam shovel working in ore at the Hawkins mine near Naswauk, was struck by a dipper stick and killed. Max Santana, twenty-seven years old, a worker at the Monroe Tener mine, was fatally injured. He was astride of a beam which gave way and fell thirty feet.

Kellogg Sails for Europe.

Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul, the government attorney in the Standard Oil and other suits, sailed on the steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm for a rest in Europe. He was accompanied by his wife.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Minneapolis and St. Paul health departments are co-operating in trying to obtain a pure milk supply. Milk dealers have been given until May 15 by both cities to have the herds from which their supply is drawn tested for tuberculosis. Some of these dealers have employed veterinarians and have gone into the country to induce the farmers to make these tests. It is expected that in this way the situation will be improved and the necessity of destroying milk obviated.

Monsignor Abelen of Milwaukee says a mother house and boarding school for girls under the auspices of the German Catholic church will be located in Mankato by the Sisters of Notre Dame in case the city extends the sewer and water mains and constructs roads to the site selected on one of the bluffs overlooking the valley of the Minnesota and in case citizens furnish a site and make a substantial money donation.

Efforts are to be made to secure for St. Paul in 1915 the convention of the international railway congress, comprising the most prominent railroad officials in the world. The association has only met in this country once that was five years ago at Washington, D. C.

The Hibbing Commercial club has adopted a resolution urging the commissioners of St. Louis county to submit to a vote of the people the proposition of issuing $5,000,000 of bonds to be expended for road building at a rate of $500,000 annually.

Governor Eberhart has appointed Thomas H. Hineline of Minneapolis and Dr. L. R. S. Ferguson of St. Paul as members of the board of visitors to succeed Dr. S. G. Smith and Dr. Charles L. Greene of St. Paul, who recently resigned.

With the opening of the new Dyckman hotel in Minneapolis the Twin Cities, with a population exceeding 500,000, have now probably the finest group of modern hotels in the country.

The iron ore washing plant of the Oliver Iron Mining company at Coleraine is now in operation. The plant cost $1,000,000 and the process is one of separating the sand from the ore.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

All indictments against Joseph U. Barnes, former president of the Minnesota Title Insurance and Trust company of Minneapolis, have been nolled at the request of County Attorney Al J. Smith. The indictments were returned in 1908. They charged Mr. Barnes with using funds entrusted to the company.

In the United States court at Fergus Falls P. J. Feardon, a clerk in the United States land office at Crookston, was indicted on a charge of embezzling government money. He pleaded guilty and Judge Morris sentenced him to a year and a half at hard labor in the federal prison at Leavenworth.

Christie Jackson was accidentally drowned in the Lake of the Woods near Spooner while he and his brother Chester were out in a rowboat to get some firewood for the Bessy Bee, the steamboat on which they were working. Their boat capsized.

Jones Bros.' stone sheds near St. Cloud were burned, causing a loss of $10,000 and throwing twenty-five men out of employment. The origin of the fire is a mystery and the police entertain suspicion of incendiarism.

Suspected of being implicated in the disappearance of $3,500 out of the safe of the M. Philipsborn company of Minneapolis L. S. Critschel, a former bookkeeper, is being sought by the police.

Mary Louise, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Bingham of Winona, fell into a tub of boiling water, receiving burns which may result in death.

William Quigley, twenty-five years old, of Red Lake Falls, was killed instantly near Downey, having been run over by a gravel train.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Levi M. Stewart, multimillionaire and the largest property holder of Minneapolis, is dead at his quaint Mill City residence at Fourth street and Hennepin avenue, in the heart of the business district. Death was due to lung troubles after a year's illness. "Elder" Stewart, as he was known to every resident of Minneapolis, was about eighty-five years of age.

John Scott Beatty, ninety years old, a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, is dead at Anoka. At the age of eight years he was presented to Andrew Jackson and, seated on the knee of "Old Hickory," he pledged himself to always vote the Democratic ticket. He kept his vow and to the last was a staunch Democrat.

David D. Smith, who had been engaged in the contracting business in Minneapolis since 1879 and for the past fifteen years connected with the waterworks department as carpenter, is dead. He was in the Confederate army during the Civil war, serving as a spy for General Robert E. Lee.

Mrs. Julia I. Field, widow of the late Thaddeus C. Field of St. Paul, is dead at Pasadena, Cal. Mrs. Field was a daughter of the late D. W. Ingersoll of St. Paul and had resided there since 18[illegible]. She was seventy-two [illegible]

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

FOREST FIRES CAUSE ALARM

Towns in Northern Portion of State Threatened.

Dangerous forest fires are sweeping towards Duluth from the direction of Colbyville and Arnold with alarming rapidity and the city waterworks pumping station is threatened.

The situation became so alarming that calls for assistance were sent to the Duluth fire department from the pumping station, which was for a time in danger from the flames. The Lakeside department, being nearest to the conflagration, was immediately dispatched to the scene.

Huge volumes of heavy black smoke can be seen rolling over the lake in that vicinity from the city. The flames are not visible, but the seriousness of the fire is apparent to the observer.

The woods are dry as tinder, affording excellent fuel for the flames. The settlers and landholders are praying for rain, but the prospects are not very encouraging.

The Iron Range passenger train had difficulty in getting through. The flames were all about the train and the crew and passengers were doubtful if the train would be able to run the gauntlet in safety. During a lull in the wind they opened the throttle wide and made it without serious damage.

Forest fires on the range are assuming alarming proportions and the gravest fears are entertained for the safety of settlers in isolated sections. In the vicinity of the Duluth and Iron Range road beyond French river the flames are making unopposed progress. There is practically no standing pine remaining in that section, but much valuable cedar and spruce is being destroyed. The fires are even worse between Two Harbors and the Vermillion range. Along the Gooseberry river, twelve miles from Two Harbors, the flames have done considerable damage. Fear is felt for the Hines tract of pine on the Gooseberry.

KELLOGG TO MEET ROOSEVELT

Minnesotan Going to Europe at Ex-President's Request.

It is said at Washington that Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota, who is now on the water on his way to Europe, is making the trip at the special request of Theodore Roosevelt and will join the former president soon after his arrival there, possibly in London.

Mr. Kellogg, it is said, received a letter from Colonel Roosevelt written from Egypt, just after he emerged from the jungle, asking him to meet him. Colonel Roosevelt relies very strongly on the Minnesota man's judgment and knows of his close relation to the Taft regime, through which relation he desires to get an accurate knowledge of conditions at Washington.

Mr. Kellogg informed friends at Washington before leaving that he expected to remain with Colonel Roosevelt a while and return to America with him on the same ship.

ICE PROBE IS THREATENED

Increase in Price of Commodity in Minneapolis Starts Trouble.

Threats of criminal investigation of the conduct of the Minneapolis ice companies, which have announced a raise of about 50 per cent in the price of their commodity, are being made in the Mill City. The dealers say they welcome an investigation to determine whether or not there is an ice trust in that city.

They claim that the price of other commodities has nearly doubled in the last five years, while the price of ice has remained about the same since 1896. The dealers further claim that the price of labor has advanced with the price of equipment.

Farmer Found Dead in Bed.

Thomas C. Spencer, a Pipestone county farmer, was found dead in bed by neighbors who were attracted to the place by the action of Spencer's cattle and horses. The man, who lived alone on his farm, had evidently been kicked by a horse and went into the house, dying soon afterward, as physicians expressed the opinion that he had been dead several days when found.

Minnesota Democrats Meet July 28.

The Democratic convention, to name state officers, will be held at the Minneapolis Auditorium on July 28. The number of delegates at the convention will be 1,047. The time, place and representation for the convention were decided on by the special committee appointed by State Chairman Frank A. Day under authority of the state executive committee.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

John Haskings, One Armed Golf Champion.

John Haskings, who is credited with the one armed golf championship of England, is about to descend upon this country. He is due to arrive within the next two weeks or so, and as he is coming for the sole purpose of trying to arrange a match for the world's championship one armed players had better be preparing to look after their laurels. Haskings is said to have beaten all the one armed golfers of Europe, played around the famous championship links of Hoylake in seventy-eight strokes and done other marvelous things, and all with the one hand.

Olympic Games In Sweden.

Much interest is being taken throughout Sweden in the Olympic games, which are to be revived in Stockholm two years hence, in the month of June. The general arrangements for the meeting have already been made by the International Olympic committee, of which Baron Pierre de Coubertin of Paris is the pioneer and president, and the Swedish Olympic committee, of which the crown prince is honorary president. Colonel Black, chairman, and Kristan Hellstrom, secretary, have nearly completed arrangements for certain games and races.

The great event will be the Marathon race over a course of forty and two-tenths kilometers. The Swedes will enlarge the Greek pentathlon to what is termed the "tiokamp," with ten contests, comprising running, hurdle racing, discus and javelin throwing, putting the shot and jumping. The meeting will be drawn up with the leading idea of preserving the ancient Greek model, and the events associated with the British Olympic—motorboat racing, lawn tennis and archery—will therefore be eliminated. The awards will be made on the point system, so that the competitors of the highest average merit in all the events will win.

How Cheney Became a Pitcher.

An accident to a fellow player was the cause of Larry Cheney of the Cincinnati Nationals becoming a pitcher. Larry broke into baseball when a kid as a first baseman and catcher, but one day, when the pitcher of his team at Bellville, Kan., was injured early in a game, he went into the box and made a good showing. He had nothing but speed and became a winner almost immediately.

Cheney's professional career began in Topeka in 1906. He played with that club about half of that season and was then sent back to Bartlettsville. In 1907 he was secured by the Chicago White Sox; but, as the Sox had won the world's championship the year before, he was not looked over very carefully.

Last year he pitched for the Indianapolis club of the American association and made as good a record as any pitcher in the league. The first game he pitched after recovering from the injury which kept him out of the game for a long time was a one hit battle, the lone hit being made off him in the tenth inning.

European Baseball Invasion.

President Charles A. Comiskey of the Chicago Americans has planned a European trip which may be the forerunner of a veritable baseball invasion if success again should perch on the south side team. Immediately after the close of the present baseball season Comiskey will leave Chicago for New York, sailing for Queenstown

America's Cup Yachts Sold.

Two America's cup yachts were sold in New York recently to be sent to the Caribbean in the turtle fishing trade. They are the Volunteer, the last of the old guard of racing craft, and the Vigilant, the first of the new. Edward S. Betts bought the Volunteer from Captain Charles Barr and the Vigilant from William E. Iselin.

Bresnahan to Be on the Job.

Manager Roger Bresnahan of the St. Louis Nationals states that he will catch as many games as conditions and circumstances will permit this season. He would be able to give his club more service were he to avoid too frequent ejections by the umpires.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Green Manuring on Clay Soils.

By the following method a certain Duluth (Minn.) suburbanite has successfully worked the stiff red clay of his garden plot into a rich loam producing very satisfactory results. The clay was of the stiffest red clay, the kind that abounds in northern Minnesota and Wisconsin. He turned the sod under in the spring and sowed it to rye and cowpeas as soon as practicable. Then in July, when the growth was about eighteen inches high, he turned the green stuff under, sowing the ground again to rye and cowpeas. In the fall the second growth was turned under and the ground manured liberally. The next spring he planted the lot to potatoes, using the Burbank and Rose varieties. From this plot, 60 by 60 feet, he took out last fall thirty-five bushels of the finer sort of potatoes. The tubers were of good size, solid and the quality sound. One of the specimens of Burbank weighed two pounds. The crop will no doubt be even better the second year, for when this soil containing compounds of iron can be manured sufficiently to produce grain and vegetables the iron in the mixture adds greatly to the constitution of the plant.—Cor. Orange Judd Farmer.

Dairy Pointers.

The house where milk is kept should be entirely clean and away from the stable. No foul odors or dust should be allowed.

The water used about a dairy must be absolutely clean. Disease like typhoid fever is often communicated by infected water used in washing the butter or the dairy vessels.

The water which the cow drinks must also be free from all pollution. A pond in which the cows stand and drop their secretions cannot possibly be fit for them to drink from.

A great deal has been said about a dual purpose cow, but it seems doubtful if ever any ideal cow of that kind will be bred.

A good scrub may be a better dairy cow than a poor specimen of the best breed; but, as a rule, the pure bred cow is the best.

Don't neglect to put a ring into your bull's nose about the time he is one year old. Into this a strap or staff can be snapped for the purpose of leading him.

Quality In Cattle.

High class animals always have the most quality. It is shown in a fine, silky coat of hair, in a mellow, elastic skin and in fine bones and neat joints. There is lots of difference in coats of hair. One cow may have hair that is fine and soft and thick. There is a very fine and close undercoat and then longer, coarser hair. Such hair is a great protection in winter. Other animals, and they are the most common, have coarse, long hair. Their bones are also likely to be big and coarse. When an animal has plenty of quality you can easily take the skin in the hand between thumb and fingers and pull it out from the side of the body. It will be mellow and roll up somewhat in the hand. If the cow lacks quality her skin will be thick, tight and not easily taken in the hand. Fine quality as seen in the hair, skin and bone means with the beef animal that when killed there will be much less waste of the carcass than if the conditions show lack of quality.—C. S. Plumb.

Molasses as a Stock Food.

At the Texas station molasses was fed to beef cattle and when added to a ration of cottonseed meal and hulls increased the gain at a lower cost, those receiving molasses, for instance, gaining 3.11 pounds per head a day and those not receiving it 2.59 pounds. The steers in this experiment were about two years old and received one-fifth of a gallon of molasses per head a day. In another trial made at the same station it was found that the addition of molasses to a ration of cottonseed meal and hulls lowered the cost and increased the gain and that the addition of molasses to a balanced ration gave larger gains as well as improving the appearance of the cattle. There were no undesirable results from feeding as much as one gallon of molasses per head a day to yearling steers.—American Agriculturist.

Sheep as Weed Exterminators.

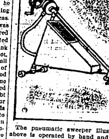
Wonder if a few head of sheep would not help to solve the weed problem. It is a serious problem on some farms to be able to give the orchard the proper attention at the proper time. After the corn is laid by there is sure to be a crop of crab grass and weeds spring up. If you summer fallow a piece of ground it is sure to have weeds in it just when you cannot attend to them. The fence corners and farm lanes are adopted by the weeds as their permanent home. The woods pasture soon fills with underbrush and weeds, and all these mean wasted opportunities for making mutton, raising wool and enriching the land.—Kansas Farmer

Two Classes of Shorthorns.

Nearly all the cattle seen in England are Shorthorns, with now and then a few Herefords, Devons and Jerseys. Most of the milk of England is produced by milking Shorthorns. Several excellent breeders of dairy Shorthorns are breeding for milk alone, paying no attention to beef. In this way two classes are being developed that are almost as different as Holstein-Friesians and Aberdeen Angus.—Illinois Experiment Station.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Pneumatic Sweeper That Is Operated by Hand.



The pneumatic sweeper illustrated above is operated by hand and obviates the need of having a house wired for electricity in order to save the housewife labor. The sweeper consists of a triangular framework with a receptacle for the dirt set inside. The upper bar of the triangle is hollow and terminates at the lower end in a mouth like that on any pneumatic sweeper. At the upper end is a blower device, a handle to guide the machine by and a wheel by means of which the blower is operated. A flexible pipe also runs from this upper portion down into the receptacle. By turning the wheel a suction is caused by the blower, and as the sweeper is pushed along it takes up the dirt through the stationary pipe and deposits it in the car below through the hose. The machine is not so cumbersome as most other types of sweepers that generate their own power.

Washington Apple Pie.

Beat together until creamy and light one-half cupful of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and three eggs. Add half a cupful of sweet milk alternately with two and one-half cupfuls of sifted flour, again sifted with two tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Beat to a smooth batter and bake in three layers. When done fill with following mixture: Pare and grate two large tart apples, adding the juice of a lemon and a cupful of granulated sugar as you grate the apples in order to keep it light colored. Add the grated yellow rind of the lemon. Place over the fire and stir and cook until it looks like jellying. Remove from the fire and while hot beat in the yolk of one egg. Spread between the cake layers and on top under a soft boiled white icing.

Simple Remedies.

For stomach pains a simple remedy is the application of a sponge wrung out of very hot water.

Borax should always be found on the toilet table. A small quantity added to the water will greatly soften it. Too much will dry the skin.

Rash is caused by chill or some error in diet. Keep the patient warm and give a slight aperient at night, and the rash will disappear.

Neglected colds are great detractors from personal appearance. If a cold hangs on take a tonic which will strengthen one to throw off the cold.

Damp hands are a great source of annoyance to their owner. Apply a lotion of one part of eau de cologne and two of rosewater and dust with boracic powder.

Lady's Cabbage.

Take a head of young, hard, white cabbage and cut it up in dice shaped pieces. Throw in cold water, to which add a little vinegar, and let stand an hour. Drain, cover with boiling water and cook, uncovered, until the cabbage grows tender, then drain off the boiling water, pour a little cold water over it and drain again. Make a good cream sauce, and when the cabbage is well drained add the sauce, heat up well and serve in a heated dish. Sprinkle a little grated cheese over the top if you like the flavor of Parmesan.

Almond Icing.

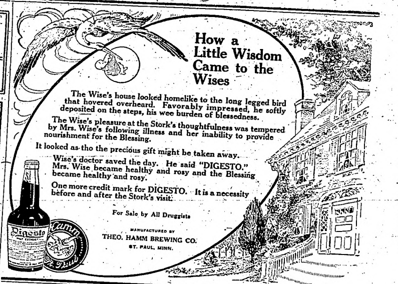
Almond icing on white cake is delicious. First blanch sweet almonds and pound them to a paste. A finer paste is made by adding the granulated sugar during the pounding. Make a boiled fondant, allow it to cool slightly, then pour it over the beaten white of one egg. To this add a teaspoonful of rosewater and the blanched almonds. Spread it between layers and on top and ice the sides of the cakes.

Salt Fish Chowder.

Soak one-half box of salt fish one hour, drain off water, fry five or six slices of salt pork, drain into the fish with a little warm water, two large sized onions cut fine, five or six potatoes sliced, one quart of milk; drop in five or six crackers, pepper and salt.

Boiled Cider Pie.

Beat together until light one egg, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of flour. Add half a cupful of boiled cider and a pint of cold water. This is sufficient for two pies made with a single crust. Spread soft icing over the top.



How a Little Wisdom Came to the Wises

The Wise's house looked homelike to the long legged bird that hovered overheard. Favorably impressed, he softly deposited on the steps, his wee burden of blessedness.

The Wise's pleasure at the Stork's thoughtfulness was tempered by Mrs. Wise's following illness and her inability to provide nourishment for the Blessing.

It looked as tho the precious gift might be taken away.

Wise's doctor saved the day. He said "DIGESTO." Mrs. Wise became healthy and rosy and the Blessing became healthy and rosy.

One more credit mark for DIGESTO. It is a necessity before and after the Stork's visit.

"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof" should not be construed as a Scriptural excuse for a fellow failing to look ahead in testing his seed corn. Rather should one be guided by that secular admonition, "The Lord helps those who help themselves."

The number of bushels of apples ruined annually through codling moth infestation—the moth responsible for the apple worm—is placed at between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000 bushels or nearly one-third of the total crop marketed during the past two or three years. Here is a leak, a leak of the biggest kind, that orchardists ought in good conscience to put an end to.

If cement is used as a stable flooring a generous supply of bedding should be used. This will serve to protect the floor and the horses' feet and will offset the harm that might come from the tendency of such a floor to gather dampness. The same principle will apply in the use of cement as a floor for the henhouse, particularly during the months when the hens are closely confined therein.

To any one who is interested in the project of earning a livelihood by the intensive cultivation of a small area of land a little book lately come from the press of Macmillan & Co., New York city, will prove both entertaining and instructive. Its title is "Three Acres and Liberty" and its author a Mr. Bolton, who was assisted in its preparation by some of the leading agriculturists and horticulturists of the country.

A good neighbor and a road drag that is used are similar in that they are community blessings. Nary a section but would be better off with more of both of 'em.

Excluding British Columbia, Canada's wheat crop in 1909 amounted to 167,000,000 bushels. Of this total Saskatchewan and Manitoba raised 138,000,000 bushels as against 5,000,000 in 1904. The average yield per acre last season was about twenty-four bushels.

If the small boy can in some way be got to swing a hoe handle with one-half the snap and energy that he does a baseball bat a lot of weeds will turn up their toes in the garden. If any reader of this department has a recipe which will effect this result we will be glad to give it publicity.

Growing things in garden and field should be cultivated frequently whether there be weeds to kill or not, and especially is this true during dry spells when there is rapid evaporation of the moisture from the soil. Nothing is more likely to check plant growth than a baking and hardening of the soil, and this frequent cultivation prevents.

The tender barked fruit tree set in the vicinity of the house and outbuildings often receives serious injury from the cat, which seems to take delight in burying its claws in the bark and ripping it down a good length. This sort of damage may be prevented by encircling the tree with several coils of wire wrapped loosely enough so as not to interfere with the growth of the tree.

It is an interesting fact of natural history that small birds are to be found in large numbers now in many sections where there were few or none prior to their settlement by man. While thoughtless men now and then wantonly destroy birds, notwithstanding this the latter have come to look upon man in general as a friend or at least as an enemy of larger birds and animals that view the small birds as their legitimate prey.

Anything from a quart can with a small hole in it to the bleached skull of a cow or a horse will be utilized by the house wren as a home provided it is put in some secure place a few feet from the ground. The spring and summer season, covering the nesting period of these interesting birds, will have additional enjoyment and cheer for all about the place if a pair of these little fellows make their headquarters on the premises.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1910 NUMBER 21

WORK ON NEW LINE IS BEING RUSHED

Railroad Building Means Much to Thief River Falls.

That the Soo line intends to build the line from Medford to Drake, N. D., in short order is very apparent. It was only a short time ago that the surveyors started to work upon that line, and during the past several days nearly one hundred cars loaded with grading outfits, horses and men have passed through Thief River Falls to the scene of operation.

The new line will be some over two hundred miles in length and will pass through a rich section of North Dakota. It will make a valuable feeder for the Wheatline and will double the work upon the road, and consequently be a big thing for Thief River Falls, as it will mean a large increase in the number of railroad men employed here.

Early in July track laying will be commenced and it is expected that the new line will be completed in time to move this year's crop. The track laying crews on the Thief River Falls-Duluth line will be through with their work at about this time and will be put to work upon the new line. The building of these two lines will more than double the railroad population of Thief River Falls, and will result in many promotions.

The road will branch off the Wheatline about a mile west of Medford and goes thence south for several miles and thence west through Devils Lake to Drake.

There will be at least two towns between Medford and Devils Lake but as yet there is no absolute certainty as to where they will be, although it is stated that the first one will be about fourteen miles from Medford.

Two New Ditchers.

Two new ditching machines, the property of Jerry Sherwood, of Litchfield, arrived in the city last week. They will be set up here and towed up the Red Lake river to Highlanding where they will be put to work building ditches this summer.

Soo Ready for Work.

The Soo Line will begin track laying May 16 on the eastern end of its new line that is to connect Thief River Falls and the head of the lakes. The work will start from Moose Lake.

On the western end the work of laying rails will begin about June 15 and will start at Plummer. Every effort will be made to push the work rapidly during the summer, so that the road may be able to handle grain over the new line into Duluth-Superior from the coming crop, during the fall and winter. —Minneapolis Journal.

Leona. In "The Royal Chef."

The Sale of Seats is open for "The Royal Chef."

Interest in this event has steadily increased since the announcement was first made that the famous show was coming, and preparations have been made to handle the rush which is expected at the box office. It is known that this city is to have the original big company which has been identified with the remarkable success of the piece, and that the vast production which was gotten up for the New York and Chicago run will be brought here intact. This is said to be unusually massive and extremely beautiful, exceeding anything of a similar kind which has been offered in this country. There is no doubt whatever of the extraordinary popularity of "The Royal Chef" inasmuch as it is known to have drawn enormous audiences all over the country during the past three seasons. There is always conspicuous merit in a performance which makes such a record and this musical show may safely be anticipated as an entertainment of the most wholesome, enjoyable and meritorious character.

The elopement of a pair of lovers by moonlight in the big musical gaiety "A Knight for a Day" which is presented Tuesday evening is reported to be one of the most laughable situations ever seen in comic opera. The gentleman who is the knight of laughter and song in the piece, helps his lady love, the "servant lady" get away from the first floor of the dormitory of a young ladies' seminary, by means of a ladder—later he has taken her belongings, including a trunk, several packages and a parrot to the ground by the same route. The course of true love is not allowed to run smooth here any more than in real life though, and the elopers are caught as they are about to get away. The supporting company is one typical of the Whitney trade mark, and the chorus which has been rehearsed under the direction of Gus Sohlke is said to offer some novelties in dances that will make even those familiar with the noted stage director's inventive genius sit up and take notice.

It would not be a Whitney production without an electrical display of magnificent grandeur and all those who have seen it are of the opinion that it excels anything this well known producer has ever given the public. The electrical pageants at the end of each of the two acts are said to be a happy commingling of present day electrical science and modern stage craft.

"Marvelous effects in the stage pictures. Nothing more refreshingly beautiful has been conceived than some of the effects," says the Boston Transcript in describing the opening performance of "A Knight for a Day," the big spectacular gaiety from the Tremont theatre, and shortly to be seen here.

Republican County Convention.

A Republican convention for the County of Red Lake, Minnesota, will be held on Friday, the 17th day of June, A. D. 1910, at the Auditorium, Thief River Falls, Minn. at 11:30 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of electing ten (10) delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held at the Auditorium St. Paul, Minnesota Tuesday, June 21st, A. D. 1910, for the purpose of nominating and endorsing a candidate for United States senator to be chosen by the legislature of 1911 and for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following State Officers to be voted for at the General Election of November 10, 1910, viz: four associate justices of the supreme court, (two for the term commencing the first Monday in January, 1912, to succeed Justices Brown and Lewis; two for the term commencing the first Monday in January, 1911 to succeed Justices Jaggard and O'Brien,) Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor, Attorney General, Clerk of the Supreme Court, and one Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner. All Republican voters of Minnesota and all other voters without regard to past political affiliation, who believe in the principles advocated by the Republican party and endorse its policies, are cordially invited to participate in the selection of delegates to this convention.

The basis of representation shall be one at large and one delegate for each 25 votes or fraction thereof cast for the Republican candidate for governor in 1908. The several precincts in the county will be entitled to the following number of delegates in said convention:

George Wilson arrived in the city the first of the week from North Dakota and will settle on his homestead south of the Red Lake river.

SETTLERS ARRIVE FROM BELGIUM.

Locate at Radium, West of Here on the Soo Line.

Last Friday morning a party of thirty-six settlers arrived in the city on the Winnipeg flyer and remained until the departure of the Wheatline passenger at 7:30 in the morning. The settlers came from Belgium and will all locate on farms near Radium, twenty-four miles west of here in Marshall county. They are the first division of a large number of settlers to be brought to this country from Belgium by the Catholic Colonization company, with which Bishop McGolrick of Duluth is prominently identified.

The new settlers, although from Belgium, are very much like the party from the Netherlands that reached Minnesota two months ago and went over the Northern Pacific to New York Mills, Otter Tail county, where they started farms. Like the Hollanders the Belgians are people of means and each family has at least $800. They will be allotted farms of 160 acres each.

They are experienced in dairying and will devote their time exclusively to this branch of agriculture. Later on a large number of others will come from Belgium and join this colony and when it is fairly started it is the intention of the colonization company to bring a large number of poor Catholics from the large cities and settle them upon lands in this section. The Belgians will teach the people from the cities how to farm.

Attempt to Wreck Winnipeg Flyer.

It must have been either a crank or a lunatic that attempted the wreck of the Soo flyer going south last Saturday night. A party of young people on the way to a wedding party in Halma were passing over the crossing that evening about ten minutes before the passenger was due and one of them noticed a heap of white looking material laying on the track. Immediately they stopped the team and upon investigation found that a rock had been laid on the track and so firmly wedged in place with other rocks that the train would have been derailed had the obstruction not been removed. At this point the river comes up close to the track and is very steep and high. The train might have plunged down this embankment into the river with what results can only be imagined. The Halma section crew visited the place for several days at the train time but the attempt was not repeated. The ground was soft from the rain that fell that day and the fresh tracks of a man were traced from Halma to Bronson and back to that pile of stone laid on the track.—Bronson Budget.

ASKS FOR INVESTIGATION

Alderman Milton Forder Asks That Charges Against Him Be Investigated.

City Council Passes the Required Resolution at Meeting Held Tuesday Evening.

At the regular meeting of the city council held on Tuesday evening, Alderman Milton Forder, president of the city council, asked that certain charges that have been made against him be investigated. Accordingly the following resolution was passed by the city council:

"Whereas, it has come to the notice of the city council that certain grevious charges of malfeasance in office has been repeatedly made against a member of the city council, and

Whereas, we believe it the duty of said council to investigate said charges;

Therefore, be it resolved, that this meeting be adjourned to the 31st day of May, 1910 at 4 o'clock P. M. of said day, and the president of said council is hereby instructed to subpoena as witnesses of said meeting Charles Alexander, Ben Christiansson, Charles Shirley, F. H. Gamboll, Fred Lufkin and such other persons as the city attorney may require."

There has been considerable talk upon the streets of late, and the charges made against Mr. Forder are of a serious nature, although only a small sum is involved—two dollars. If they are true, the people of this city are entitled to know it, and if untrue Mr. Forder is entitled to a vindication. The meeting is to be a public one, and all who have any testimony to offer will be given an opportunity to do so. The general public will then have an opportunity to do so. The general puplic will then have an opportunity to judge as to the truth or falsity of the charges, and will be able to listen to sworn testimony and not rumors.

Grace Cameron Coming.

Our people will be happy to learn that petite Grace Cameron, with all her new character songs and a most charming play will return to us for one night, June 8 at the Auditorium. Miss Cameron has never appeared in anything but attractions of the very highest order and the trade mark alone is sufficient to warrent complete assurance of the merits of her offering as being strictly first-class. Mr. C. H. Kerr, who presents this offering is not only a playright of great ability, but a reliable theatrical manager in every sense of the word and the former attractions he has sent to us have been such that we feel the highest confidence in anything he may place his name upon.

The name of this new play and highly diverting comedy which Miss Cameron plays the title role in is "Nancy" and besides Miss Grace Cameron there is a superb cast of well known actors to aid in the presentation of this amusing four act play.

The production is carried by the company in its entirety, including scenery, including scenery, special costumes, electrical and mechanical effects.

School Notes.

No changes will be made in the program as announced last week for the closing days of school, but it might be stated that only the eighth grade classes, their relatives and a few friends can be accommodated at the high school assembly room next Wednesday evening. The class day and graduation exercises for the Seniors will take place at the Auditorium on Thursday and Friday evenings respectively, and will, of course, be free to all who care to attend.

Final examinations take place the last three days of next week in the high school and every student is required to write on these closing tests.

M. A. Schmitt, who has been engaged as manual training teacher for next year, has rented the residence near the Knox school known as the Higgins house. His family will remove to Thief River Falls at the close of this month.

Misses Anderson and Schwalbe attended the senior class play at Red Lake Falls last Friday evening. It is somewhat of a coincidence that the play was the same as the one presented by the senior class in our school this year.

Annoucements were made last week by the state university of further changes in the entrance requirements to that institution. These have been so frequent of late that school authorities have not a little difficulty in arranging consistent four year courses for high school students. The latest changes permit of credits in the manual training and commercial groups of studies.

In compiling the annual report fo the state high school inspector last week, it was discovered that the school tax rate for this city, exclusive of the state one mill tax, is 19.5 mills. This is the lowest rate which has prevailed in this district for a long term of years. It was also learned from the county auditor that the assessed valuation for the district is a little less this school year than it was the year preceding.

President Worst, who has been engaged to deliver the commencement address, is mentioned in the daily press as a probable candidate for the governorship of North Dakota.

Of the local board of education, four members have been absent within the last ten days on more or less extended trips. Dr. Penney returned last from Illinois, D.P.O'Neill is in southern Minnesota, Dr. Gambell is in Missouri, President Lars Backe is out east in the wilds of Marshall county, while Messrs Zeh and Jackson have consistently remained "on the job".

Promotive cards will be issued next week, the last of school. In the grades above the second, promotions are based on the monthly standings, while in the primary grades, particularly the first primary rooms, the child's physical condition, command of English maturity and age in large measures modify the promotions. It is the plan of the organization in the primary grades that the normal child complete first primary, first grade and second grade in two years. With this in view, the first primary pupils have been clasified this year so that the majority of them are now doing B first work and next year they can complete A first and second grade in the one year. Of course, it should be understood that the use of a foreign language at home, weak physical condition or immaturity will tend to prevent such action.

Several of the teachers leave for new fields next year. The changes are all advancements, either of a financial or professional character. Miss Anderson takes goverment school in Alaska, Miss Blexrud goes to Warren Normal department, Miss Johnson to Cloquet, Miss Collins to Crookston, Miss Laughlin teaches music at Crookston, Miss McCabe to East Grand Forks, Miss Paine at Brainerd, her home city, Miss McCrum to Blackduck, Miss [illegible] in primary work at Duluth, And Miss Godward ceases teaches.

A YOUTHFUL FORGER

Young Man from Town of Rocksbury Forged Three Five Dollar Checks.

Admits His Guilt and Will Serve a Term in the State Reformatory.

Carl Swanson, a young man about eighteen years of age who makes his home with Ole Peterson near Hazel in the town of Rocksbury was arrested Tuesday by Sheriff Nelson charged with forging three checks each for the sum of $5. The checks were drawn upon the Merchants State Bank of St. Hilaire, and the name of Andrew Hestekind, a Rocksbury farmer who has an account at that bank was forged. One of the checks was cashed by A. Joe Giller, of this city, and the other two at St. Hilaire.

Before Judge Bishop, young Swanson admitted his guilt and was taken to Crookston last evening and sentenced to the St. Cloud reformatory by Judge Watts. He claims to have found the check book and was intoxicated when he forged the name of Mr. Hesterkind.

No Ball Game Sunday.

The Crookston ball team, which was to have played a game with the local team in this city on Sunday did not arrive until about six o'clock in the evening, owing to a breakdown of the automobile in which they traveled and as a result no game was played. The boys stayed over until Monday and would have played on that day had not rain prevented the game.

Roseau Getting in Line.

Roseau county has fully awakened to the need of good roads and drainage.

Every week this spring delegations of farmers have called at the county seat and inquired how to proceed to get systems of ditches and roads built. The expense necessary on these improvements deters the farmers no longer from urging this work ahead. Plans are under consideration affecting several of the best localities in the county.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The action of Chief Special United States Officer W. E. Johnson, or "Pussyfoot" Johnson, in closing the saloons in a large part of Northern Minnesota, is approved in a special report made to President Taft by Secretary of the Interior Ballinger, a copy of which has been received by Governor Eberhart through F. W. Carpenter, secretary to the president.

William Kinghood, fifty-four years old, was found in a box car in the railroad yards at St. Paul exhausted from starvation. The man had crawled into the car three days previous, when he was taken with an attack of acute rheumatism. The disease made him helpless and he lay in the bare car without covering, food or water.

Major Fred von Baumbach, internal revenue collector of the Minnesota district, reports that the internal revenue collections of this district during April, 1910, amounted to $153,611.41, against $131,086.85 during April, 1909, showing an increase of $22,524.56.

The state dairy and food department secured six convictions in the Minneapolis municipal court the other day for violations of the pure food laws, following the seizure of about 1,200 pounds of alleged adulterated and misbranded maple sugar.

A school of forestry is to be added to the curriculum of the state university and it will be run separately from the school of agriculture, with which it has been associated in the past.

Public Examiner Anton Schaefer, in a report covering an examination of the finances of the State Historical society, shows that the society has a permanent fund of over $125,000.

Bernard J. Mullaney, a former Twin City newspaper man, has been appointed commissioner of public works in Chicago by Mayor Fred Busse. The salary is $10,000 a year.

Joseph A. Wharton of Duluth was elected grand chancellor of the grand lodge of Minnesota Knights of Pythias at the state convention at Minneapolis.

St. Paul will join with Minneapolis in a big Twin City aviation meet to be held at the state fair-grounds at Hamline during the last week in June.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Captain Timothy Murphy, former head of the St. Paul corps, Volunteers of America, must stand trial on the charge of stealing $1,250 which the Volunteers raised for a working girls' home March 17. An indictment charging Murphy with grand larceny, first degree, has been returned by the grand jury.

Faribault has an epidemic of scarlet fever and measles. Nearly all of the cases are of a mild character and no deaths have been reported. A large number of homes are quarantined and the German Lutheran parochial school has been closed. Several other schools may be closed.

Jealousy because his wife danced too many times is believed to have been the cause of an attack by Yatzik Trilutski upon his wife at a dance in Northeast Minneapolis. Trilutski stabbed his wife in the arm. While several men ran to her assistance Trilutski escaped.

Roy Leonhardt fell between two trestles at Mankato, striking on his head in the street below and dying twenty-four hours later without regaining consciousness. He was seventeen years old, a son of Henry M. Leonhardt, and a high school student.

Eli Hull, a prominent citizen of St. Charles, was probably fatally injured on the farm of Fred Roberson, one mile south of Utica, by an unruly stallion. The animal struck Mr. Hull on the head, knocking him down and trampling on him.

A plague has attacked the fish of Square lake, eight miles northeast of Stillwater, and the bodies of thousands are floating on the surface. The disease seems to be particularly deadly to the croppies in the lake.

While playing with a 22-caliber rifle Elmer Pinger of St. Paul shot four-year-old Flamminis Roncone. The bullet lodged in the abdomen and death resulted a few hours later.

The Omaha railway freight depot at Mankato was destroyed by fire, at a loss of about $15,000 to structure and goods in the warehouse.

Injuries resulting from a fall downstairs caused the death of Michael Baker of Minneapolis, fifty-five years old.

The Central German Methodist church of Minneapolis has been destroyed by fire.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Sarah Mobley, aged seventy, was found dead in the kitchen of her home at Minneapolis. Although a woman of wealth she had just finished papering one of her houses in the vicinity of her home and is believed to have died of over exertion.

Ossian E. Dodge, who had lived in St. Paul for fifty years and had been for twenty-five years an active business man, is dead in that city.

Byron P. Dague, who died recently at Daytona, Fla., was one of the pioneer residents of Minneapolis. He was sixty years of age.

Charles S. Sims, a pioneer business man of Minneapolis, is dead at San Antonio, Tex., aged seventy-eight.

WILL FARM IN MINNESOTA

Belgian Count and a Millionaire to Engage in Dairying.

That a good example be set the rest of the nobility of Belgium Count Leopold de Rabiano will take up land in this state and engage in the dairying industry. He and thirty-five other Belgians, including a millionaire, Henry Van Moerdeek, arrived at St. Paul from the East in a special tourist car. After spending a few hours at the Union depot there, where they enjoyed lunch, they proceeded to their future home near Radium.

This party is the advance guard of many settlers which the Minnesota Catholic Colonization society will bring to this state from Belgium. Most of the people who arrived have means, possessing sufficient money to buy farms. The count and the millionaire have brought hired help with them and are fitted out to begin farming operations without delay. What wealth the count has was not disclosed, but he owns a number of quarries in Belgium and lived in a castle.

BUY HUGE TRACT IN OREGON

St. Paul Men Purchase Eight Hundred Thousand Acres.

Transfers recently have been completed in New York city by means of which a St. Paul land corporation which, with its $12,000,000 capital, is said to be four times larger than any other in the world, closes the largest land deal ever made in America, obtaining title to 800,000 acres in Central Oregon. The immense tract is transferred entire and represents a belt 800 miles in length and of varying width. Of the total 660,000 acres is rich agricultural land, much of which will be improved under irrigation, and 140,000 acres is heavily timbered, containing 4,500,000,000 feet of standing pine, fir and cedar. The land transferred includes some of the richest districts in Oregon and will be developed and settled at once.

OPEN TO SETTLEMENT

Quarter Million Acres of Land in Northern Minnesota.

President Taft has signed a proclamation opening to settlement about 233,000 acres of land in Northern Minnesota. A large part of this will be subject to homestead entry at the Crookston land office at 9 o'clock a. m. June 20, next. Eight townships, embracing 185,000 acres in ranges 32 to 35, inclusive, and in townships 157 to 159, are within the jurisdiction of the Crookston office. Tracts on Oak and Garden islands, in Lake of the Woods, which were claimed and occupied by Canadian Indians, will also be open for settlement. The Indians have been removed from the land.

In the Duluth land district parts of townships 63 and 64, range 5 east, on Pigeon river, Grand Portage lands will be opened on the same date; also 12,983 acres on the Fond du Lac reservation in townships 49, 50 and 51, ranges 17, 18 and 19. The remaining lands on the diminished Winnibegoshish, Deer Creek and White Earth reservations to the extent of 33,000 acres, will be subject to entry at the Cass Lake land office June 20.

Subject to Immediate Settlement.

Of the Cass Lake land 26,000 acres are subject to immediate setlement, according to the provisions of the Clapp-Lindbergh act of 1908. Squatters will be given a preference in the matter of entries on lands in the former forest reserve near Cass Lake, but no such preference will be given squatters on lands within the Red Lake, Chippewa, Fond du Lac and Pigeon river tracts.

Announcement was made that while the entire area to be opened to settlement on June 20 is classed as agricultural land the state will not be debarred from presenting further claims for lands which it may be claimed lies within these reservations.

These lands were withdrawn from settlement when the Minnesota national forest was created, with the purpose of permitting Indians who held allotments within the boundaries of the forest reserve to exchange their holdings for lands on the outside. The proposition, apparently, did not appeal very strongly to the Indians, for only comparatively few have made selections in lieu of their lands within the forest. Recently the order of withdrawal was extended for one year from March 13, 1910.

Minnesota Pioneers Meet.

Nearly 500 men and women who were living at a time when Minnesota passed from a territory to a full fledged state met in the old capitol building at St. Paul at the eleventh annual meeting of Minnesota Territorial Pioneers, and discussed the times that used to be and shook hands with old neighbors who had gone to different parts of the state whom they had not seen for as long a period as thirty years.

Eminent Engineer Dead.

Walter Craig Kerr, fifty-one years old, of Denjan Hills, L. I., one of the world's most eminent engineers, died of uraemia at Rochester, this state, after an operation for kidney trouble. He died in the town he was reared in and near St. Peter, Minn., where he was born and where he knew the late Governor John A. Johnson from childhood.

Roosevelt while in Norway managed to become a political issue there. Wherever the colonel stations himself there is the center of political and all other kinds of activity.

The Ada Herald is of the opinion that I. A. Caswell is entitled to an extension of his lease on his position as clerk of the supreme court, and believes that a majority of the citizens living outside of St. Paul think likewise. Of course they do. Why should St. Paul have all of the places on the state ticket? The country is certainly entitled to a few.

The Messenger is the name of a new paper established at Stephen by Seifert & Lovestrom. Stephen already had one excellent paper and we are inclined to believe that establishing a second paper in a town so small will prove a mistake. The first issue of the Messenger, however, demonstrates that the publishers have the ability and outfit to get out as good a paper as is now published in Marshall county and we wish them success.

Eastern Marshall county, thru the efforts of Hon. Frank Grygla and Allen W. Clark, is soon to have a large settlement of Polanders. Having been denied a national life at home, over three million Poles have cast their lot with America and they make very desirable citizens, especially those who have located upon farms. The Poles took an important part in the foundation of this republic and last week at Washington two monuments dedicated to the memory of Polish heroes who helped to lay the foundations of our republic were unveiled at the national capital. The Pulaski statue has been erected by authority of an act of Congress. The Kosciusko statue is the gift to the American nation from the Polish National Alliance of the United States, the greatest Polish organization in the world.

Both of the great men whose memories are honored devoted themselves to the cause of liberty, and both of them rendered during our revolutionary struggle services of the most valuable and definite character. Thaddeus Kosciusko taught the American army the science of fortification. Casmir Pulaski organized its cavalry. Kosciusko planned General Gates' fortified camp in the campaign which ended with Burgoyne's surrender at Saratoga, the turning point of the war and one of the decisive battles of history. Pulaski obtained from the Continental Congress the rank of brigadier general, and his brilliant services were sealed at the siege of Savannah in 1779, where, mortally wounded, he gave up his life to the American cause.

Wool Exhibit at State Fair.

In no department of the entire State Fair is there more genuine interest and enthusiasm than in the sheep and wool department. Mr. Magnus Brown of Farmington, Minn., President of the Minnesota Sheep and Wool Growers' Association, is devoting a great deal of time and attention to the matter and already has affairs arranged so that he is confident the exibition will be not only of great interest to the ordinary observer, but of great benefit to the sheep grower, as well as to the layman, whose only interest in wool is in distinguishing an all wool piece of goods from that adulterated with cotton or "shoddy" goods.

Mr. Brown will act as assistant to Prof. J. A. Hill of the University of Wyoming at Laramie, who is conceded to be the greatest wool authority in the United States. In a letter received from Prof. Hill by Mr. Brown, Mr. Hill states that it will take a large number of samples and that considerable time will be necessary to make the proper kind of a collection. Arrangements have practically been made to engage Mr. F. M. Jennings of Philadelphia to make the selection. Mr. Jennings secured the collection of samples for the recent wool exhibit show held at Ogden, Utah, since which time he has done some work for the government. He is the instructor in the Philadelphia Textile School in wool sorting. As a practical wool sorter he is employed in mills all the time he is not teaching. He has an extensive acquaintance among the wool dealers and manufactures in Philadelphia and has no trouble in getting anything he wants from them.

Among the exhibits already practically agreed upon the following:

1. The commercial classification of wool.
2. The effect of shrinkage on the value of wool.
3. The bad effect of paint, sisel twine, etc.
4. Tariff classification of wool.
5. Combing and clothing wools and their different uses.
6. Shoddy and other wool substitutes and wool substitutes and their origin.
7. Simple methods for the detection of wool adulterations.

The collection of samples will be placarded and arranged so as to illustrate the above mentioned points. Mr. Jennings will ship the samples to the fair, tagged for identification, and Prof. Hill and Mr. Brown will classify and placard them for display.

While as yet it is undecided just where this interesting and educational exhibit will be placed, it is more than likely that space will be provided in the Agricultural building.

The premium list for the coming Minnesota State Fair is now in the hands of the printer and will be ready for mailing within the next 30 days. The fair management announces that these premium lists will be mailed to any one interested in the sheep and wool enterprise, as it is the desire of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society to use every effort to promote sheep raising in the State of Minnesota.

A Square Deal.

To The NEWS:— There has been something said in the papers lately about the Grygla Polish Colony and on the strength of this large movement of peoples, "Cheap John," so-called "real estate agents" have rushed in and listed a large number of farms, expecting to "clean up" from one to two dollars an acre by selling the land to incoming settlers, and speak of "My Commissions" as of something real.

Now, I expect to buy a number of farms for actual settlers, though I may not have anything to do with this part of the work, but if I should have, or if I can exert any influence on those who will be put in charge of the work, I shall buy only of the owner himself. There will be no "commissions" paid to anybody, and farms so listed will not be considered.

I regret to say it, and the settlers have my deepest sympathy, but it is a well known fact that the majority of the present owners of farms in this region are so involved through long waiting for relief measures as to make it not only desirable, but in many cases absolutely necessary to sell out their farms to men of more capital, and these farms will be bought by the colony of the OWNERS only. Men of long experience will be at the head of this work and montebanks and hangers-on, who have never done a day's work for the betterment of the country, will not be allowed to ply their skin-games on the people who are coming to do the real work. Many of these workers will, of necessity, buy their farms through the colony agents and will be protected against tin-horn land men. Nothing hurts a country like these business men who bring in no settlers themselves but prey on those brought in by others. All contracts listing lands, unless some money was paid, are void. Withdraw them and sell your own farms.

BOEGGILD HERE JUNE THE FIRST.

The Famous Danish Authority on Dairying.

Prof. Bernhard Boeggild, of the Royal Danish Agricultural College of Copenhagen, Denmark, recognized as the greatest living authority on dairying in the world, will deliver his address in Thief River Falls on Wednesday, June 1. In company with Creamery Inspector Storvick, Prof. T. L. Haecker and others, Mr. Boeggild will arrive in the city on the Great Northern at 11 o'clock in the morning and remain until 3:50 in the afternoon. It is quite likely that the address will be delivered at 1 o'clock in the auditorium, and an endeavor is to be made to secure a full attendance of farmers from the surrounding villages in this vicinity. The opportunity of hearing this great man is one that will probably never again be the good fortune of the people of this section and all should improve the opportunity. The following is a circular letter that is being sent out by Creamery Inspector Storvick to the managers of the creameries of this section of the state and explains the matter:

You have no doubt learned through the Creamery Journals of the lecture tour being made this summer in this country by Prof. B. Boeggild, of the Royal Danish Agricultural College of Copenhagen, Denmark.

Through the courtesy of Prof. T. L. Haecker, who will accompany the lecturer on his tour in Minnesota, have we been able to secure one of these lecture dates up here in the Red River Valley.

We are fortunate indeed in securing one of these lectures given by Prof. Boeggild, who is recognized as perhaps the greatest living authority on dairying in Europe, and has since early in the 80's been the leading spirit in the co-operative dairy movement in his native country and has lately been secured to give a lecture tour in America, in cities and at our Agricultural Colleges.

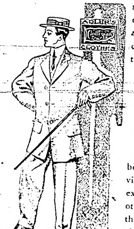
The City of Thief River Falls, having offered us free use of their fine new Auditorium for this occasion, besides being a good railroad center and in the midst of one of our best dairy sections has been selected as the most centrally and easily reached by our dairymen.

You will kindly take this matter up with the officers of your respective creameries and secure a large delegation from amongst your patrons to hear this lecture given at Thief River Falls, Wednesday, June 1st, between the hours of 11 A. M. and 3:50 P. M.

Trusting that you will co operate with us in making this one of the largest gatherings of dairymen ever held in the "North West."

The Sale of Seats.

The sale of seats for the opening of the new auditorium opened Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock and there was considerable of a rush. The choicest seats in the balcony sold for $7.50 or $10 for the two performances. Other seats in the balcony sold for $5 or $7.50 for the two evenings, $3, $2, and $1. On the main floor the prices were $3, $2.50, $2, $1.50 and $1, with reduction if taken for two evenings. While the prices are considered to be somewhat high, it is the desire of the council to make enough for the two opening performances to pay for the decorating. Nearly $1000 worth of tickets were sold the first day, and there still are left a number of choice seats at reasonable prices.



Adler's Collegian Clothes

THE STORE FOR YOUNG MEN

We have aimed to deserve this title, by showing distinctive apparel for the young man who is not satisfied with ordinary clothes. Our success cannot be doubted. You realize that we are absolute headquarters for "nobby" apparel, and nowhere else in town will you ever find clothes which possess that same air of elegance which you always find in the clothes exhibited by this store.

We Specialize

The property known as "Moylan Park" just at the west end of the bridge, is offered for sale in single lots or as a whole. Parties desiring to purchase the same or any part thereof are requested to see P. Moylan. Also lots 23 and 24, block 13, in Porter's addition, will be sold. (7tf.)

Jonas Johnson, of Roseau, was given a sentence of seven days in the city jail last Saturday by Judge Bishop. Jonas admitted that he had drank considerable alcohol, but would not have had any trouble if the employes at the Great Northern depot had understood their business.

The improvements which have been in progress for sometime at the Thief River Co-Operative store are nearly all completed now, and the store presents a very pleasing appearance. The company has rented all of the basement and one portion is being nicely fixed up as a rest room for the customers of the store. This is something Thief River Falls has been in great need for a long time and will be greatly appreciated by the wives of the farmers.

Wm. Moeller, of Rockebury, has a sow upon his farm that realizes pork is high and desires to make money for her owner. Last week she gave birth to eighteen pigs, and when it is taken into consideration that the sow lacked a few weeks of being a year old, it is considered very remarkable.

Certain it is that before another week has passed two new airs will be whistled around Thief River Falls streets. "O'Reilly" and the "Maiden and the Kissing Bug" will be heard on every street corner. These are the two whistled numbers of the "Royal Chef" the musical production which will be seen at the Auditorium Monday evening. The "O'Reilly" number is said to be one of the catchiest airs of the season, while the "Maiden and the Kissing Bug" number is sure to be a favorite with music lovers. Besides these two there are many others in the musical comedy, which are all sure to become popular.

TIDINGS FROM SCANDINAVIA

Interesting News From Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

HIS REMARKS WERE TIMELY

Roosevelt's Anti-Race Suicide Declarations at Stockholm Enthusiastically Applauded—Sensational Incident Attends Ex-President's Visit to Christiania—H. S. Vodskov, Well Known Danish Scientist, Is Dead.

SWEDEN.

At the Roosevelt dinner, in which some 400 men and women of distinction took part, some of them having traveled hundreds of miles to be present, Premier Lindman said: "We are glad to welcome the foremost citizen of the great republic, to which Sweden has sent so many of her loyal citizens. Your motto, Colonel Roosevelt, has been honesty, justice and good character in every citizen. You have sought to promote self-reliance and foster such a spirit in the nation that the stronger would help the weaker, when the weaker was in need and deserved it, and the manner in which you have worked to these ends has made your name respected and honored throughout the world." In his toast Premier Lindman coupled Mrs. Roosevelt's name with the colonel's as a true wife, who had contributed to her husband's success at every step. Colonel Roosevelt, in his response, touched upon the question of the hour in Sweden, the propaganda which has been spread by a faction of love without children. The ex-president did not blame the leader in this propaganda, but strongly denounced race suicide as one of the most unworthy of all time. It happens that the Swedish population, next to France and Spain, has increased more slowly than any other and the speaker was applauded enthusiastically. He was congratulated by the premier and others for his bold declarations.

According to latest statistics the population of Sweden is 5,475,625. The population of the country increased last year by 46,025 people, of which 33,440 belong to the country districts and 12,585 to the cities. During the year there were 32,531 marriages and 139,429 children were born. During the past twelve months 74,575 persons have died. During the year of 1909 the number of persons who emigrated from the country equalled the entire population of the city of Upsala—22,010. The number of persons who immigrated to Sweden from foreign lands totalled only 8,004.

Among the opera stars engaged to appear at the Royal opera in Stockholm next year is John Forsell of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York; the lyric tenor, Alexander Kirchner, from the Royal opera in Vienna, and the Hungarian basso, Pogany. The scenic director will be Jacques Goldberg, formerly engaged at the Stadt theater in Kolmar and as assistant H. Andre of Stockholm. Jarnefelt will remain as concert meister and as assistant concert meister, the Italian, Moransoni, has been engaged. Madame Hesse will be the leading soprano.

The Duke of Vestmanland celebrated his twenty-first birthday a few days ago. His royal brothers arranged a festival for him at the Blasieholmen, which was attended by a number of his most intimate friends in the Capital City.

There is a proposition before the Swedish riksdag to make an appropriation of 6,000 crowns for the purpose of spreading good literature among the younger generation, especially among the country population.

The foreign minister has appointed Mr. Milton Carlson as vice consul in Los Angeles, Cal. The vice consulate in Los Angeles stands under the direct supervision of the Swedish consulate in San Francisco.

Emilia Olson-Dahl and her cavalier, Nils Jonsson, were sentenced to a year's imprisonment for stealing some jewelry at a Stockholm hotel, where they were registered as man and wife.

The Danish Scientific society of Denmark has awarded honorary membership to Royal Antiquarian Montelius of Stockholm and Professor Cederschiold of Gotenburg.

Lieutenant Wilhelm Lilleskold, notorious for his daring bank transactions in Stockholm, is at present employed on a farm in the interior of the Argentine Republic.

NORWAY.

Mr. Roosevelt's visit to Christiania was followed by an incident which has caused a sensation in Norway. Mr Roosevelt has severely censured ex-Premier Gunnar Knudson, who is now vice president of the parliament, for using his name in Norwegian politics. The ex-Premier has been making a campaign and has introduced a bill in parliament for the conservation of natural resources, chiefly the water power, and the opposition party has been fighting this scheme as an infringement on personal rights. At the recent gala dinner at the castle Mr Knudson had a conversation with Mr Roosevelt on this subject. The latter, in the belief that he was speaking on general principles, expressed warm sympathy in the work. Mr. Knudson asked permission to make the former president's remarks public. "Tell it to any one you like," was Mr. Roosevelt's enthusiastic answer. There was considerable stir when the newspapers appeared quoting Colonel Roosevelt's support of the Knudson policy. Mr. Roosevelt summoned Mr. Knudson and insisted emphatically that he issue a denial and he himself wrote a letter to the same effect. The opposition papers are now attacking the ex-premier. The Aftenposten says among other things: "From the denial which Mr. Gunnar Knudson was compelled to make by Mr. Roosevelt it appears that at the conversation in question Mr. Roosevelt was thinking of his own American policy while Mr. Knudson was speaking of his Norwegian policy. We will not dwell upon the want of discretion shown by Mr. Knudson in trying to involve a guest of the nation in our own internal political disputes and trying to turn him to political account. This want of discretion aroused a great deal of indignation. It is an absolutely unprecedented phenomenon that a man holding a position like Theodore Roosevelt should during his visit he paid us be compelled to issue a denial of what the late premier stated regarding his conversation with him."

That Bjornson had given up the idea of a republic long before the Karlstad conference is best proven by a statement that he made to a correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal under date of July 25, 1905, when he said: "I am a republican, yes, always a republican. If we had waited and broken the union peaceably by a plebescitum then we might have had a republic with no one to deny us. But now I fear we must have a monarchy. We must conciliate Sweden by taking a Bernadotte for our king—if Sweden will be wise enough to consent. We must gain our place in the council of nations by having a kingdom." Now that is really what Bjornson really did say and it is published in these columns for the purpose of showing that the recent suggestion made to the effect that a certain adjournment of the Karlstad conference, held to agree on terms for the separation of Sweden and Norway, was taken for the purpose of permitting the Norwegian commissioners to consult Bjornson in Christiania is not in keeping with the truth. And even if a republic had been decided on it is unlikely that Bjornson would have been chosen president. Premier Michelsen was the man most spoken of in that connection. Bjornson was already too old to take on so heavy and responsible a burden, beloved of all the people though he was.

In the vicinity of Bergen silver coins of the Thirteenth century have been found during recent excavations conducted there. The coins, 900 of them, are of two "ore" size and are very well preserved considering their age. The coins have been placed on exhibition in the Bergen museum, whose property they will now become.

According to the Aftenposten the Norwegian government desires a change of ministers at Stockholm. Minister Vogt, who is at present in Stockholm, may be asked to accept the London post and the Paris minister, Bryn, may be asked to fill the Stockholm post.

The Norwegian marine captain, Hovland, has invented a secret wireless telegraph system, which is claimed to be exceedingly ingenious. A stock company has been organized and patents for the invention have been secured in Sweden, Denmark and Germany.

Captain Otto Sverdrup, who soon tired of selling shares in a Cuban land plantation company, has now returned to his favorite avocation, that of traversing Arctic waters.

DENMARK.

The well known Danish scientist, H. S. Vodskov, died the other day in Copenhagen, aged sixty-four years. In 1870 he was offered the chair of natural sciences at the University of Copenhagen, but owing to impaired health and a natural reticence he declined to accept. He built himself a little hut instead on the shores of Lake Mockelin, in Southern Smaland, Sweden, where he has spent the last twenty-two years of his life. About two years ago he left again for the Danish capital, where he remained until his death. He has written a large number of scientific treatises, for which he received a stipend of 1,000 crowns a year from the Danish government, a sum of money which appears to have been more than sufficient for him to exist on.

Bjornsjerne Bjornson's body arrived at Copenhagen a week ago Saturday at noon, where it was met by representatives for the king, crown prince, the Danish cabinet, the mayor of the city and members of the city council. The city was draped in black and the procession from the harbor to the train, which was to carry the body in the direction of its last resting place, was the largest and most impressive parade ever seen in Denmark. In the evening a great memorial service was held at the Royal theater and was attended by thousands.

The Consolidated Northern Telegraph company has during the past twelve months had a gross income of almost [illegible] crowns. A dividend of 18 per cent has been declared among the stockholders and there is [illegible] crowns set aside for the reserve fund, which at present amounts to 24,[illegible] crowns. The assets of the company amount to over 11,000,000 crowns at present.

Sheriff's Sale.

By Virtue of an Execution, issued out of and under the Seal of the District Court, in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, upon a judgment rendered and docketed in the said Court, on the Sixth day of April, 1910, in an action wherein F. H. Gambell is plaintiff, and Margaret M. Elder, is defendant, in favor of the said plaintiff and against the said defendant, for the sum of One Hundred Fifteen and 85-100 Dollars, in an action in the District Court of said County which execution was directed and delivered to me as Sheriff in and for the said County of Red Lake, I have this 14th day of April, A. D. 1910, levied upon all the right, title and interest of the said Defendant Margaret M. Elder in and to the following described real property situated in the County of Red Lake in said State as follows:

All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, and described as Lot numbered twenty-five (25), in block number one (1), of Meehan's Addition to Thief River Falls, according to the owners rearrangement of said block one (1), and also that part of out lot "C" of said Meehan's Addition described as follows to-wit: Commencing at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-five (25), thence in a southerly direction, the line being the same variation as the north line of said lot twenty-five (25) to the reserve line of Red Lake River, thence in a southerly direction to a point where the south line of said lot twenty-five (25) would intersect the said reserve line if continued, thence in a westerly direction to the southeast corner of said lot twenty-five (25), thence northerly to the place of beginning, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Notice is Hereby Given, That I, the undersigned, as Sheriff as aforesaid, will sell the above described real property to the highest bidder, for cash, at public auction, at the front door of the postoffice in the city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, on Saturday the fourth day of June, A. D. 1910, at two o'clock p. m., of that day, to satisfy the said Execution, together with the interests and costs thereon.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

We Also Have Second-Hand Machinery
Established 1879

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

FLAMES THREATEN BEMIDJI

Citizens Appeal to the Governor for Assistance.

Women and children are praying in the churches of Bemidji for rain or some other act of nature, to save them, their husbands and fathers and their homes from impending catastrophe.

Although fought desperately for hours by hundreds of citizens, soldiers and forest rangers a forest fire, four miles wide, has been slowly nearing Bemidji from the south.

After 1,000 volunteer fire fighters had gathered for a last desperate stand at the big state road, which runs across the face of the flames, a few drops of rain fell from an apparently cloudless sky, and hope fills the breasts of the men.

Citizens of the town were convoked at a public meeting and Governor Eberhart was telegraphed information of the peril of the city and a request for help. The governor immediately replied, authorizing State Forestry Commissioner C. C. Andrews of St. Paul, who had arrived there, to direct the Minnesota national guard in the northern part of the state to do what he saw fit to save the city.

The forest fire situation in other sections of Northeastern Minnesota seems to be greatly improved.

FIVE ARE BURNED TO DEATH

Perish in a Fire That Destroyed Their Home.

Five members of a family were burned to death at Faribault.

Bert Sperry, the father, fell into the flames when the upper floor of the home collapsed and his charred body was found with the arms clasping in pitiful embrace two little blackened corpses, the remains of his children. He had entered a blazing room in an attempt to rescue them. The dead are: Bert Sperry, father, aged thirty-five; Mrs. A. N. Kellogg, aged sixty-five years, mother of Mrs. Sperry; Edward Sperry, aged seven; Clarence Sperry, aged three years.

Mr. Sperry arose about 6 o'clock to build a fire in the stove. He went back to bed and about thirty minutes later neighbors saw the entire interior of the house was a mass of flames. All members of the family slept up stairs and their escape was cut off. Mr. Hackett, a neighbor, succeeded in rescuing Mrs. Sperry and the baby. The oldest girl made her escape.

FAIL TO OBTAIN ANY MONEY

Bandits Dynamite Safe of Bank at Dumont, Minn.

Bandits entered the First State bank of Dumont, dynamited the safe, setting fire to the building, and made their escape without securing any money. More than $500 in paper money was destroyed by the overcharge of explosive used.

The citizens were aroused, but made no attempt to enter the bank. Shots were fired into the building by those who were near enough and this may have compelled the robbers to retreat.

The bank was damagd to the extent of several hundred dollars by fire, which followed the explosion.

Leaving their tools on the floor the men left the bank by the rear exit and left town northward. Citizens fired several shots in pursuit of the men, but none of them took effect. No one was hurt.

STATE AWARDED INTEREST

Minnesota Wins Tax Suit Against the Western Union.

The state of Minnesota was awarded $10,000 interest on back taxes from the Western Union Telegraph company in a decision handed down by the state supreme court.

The taxes were about $40,000 for the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905, which were awarded the state in a decision by the same court last December. At that time the interest was denied. In its latest decision the court reverses its former ruling and allows 12 per cent interest.

How Minnesota Members Voted.

On final passage of the administration railroad bill in the lower house of congress every Minnesota Republican, as well as all the Republican representatives from the Northwest, voted for the bill. On Mann's amendment to restore to the bill the merger section, which was defeated, 169 to 160, the Minnesotans voting against the amendment were Davis, Hammond and Lindbergh. Messrs. Tawney, Stevens, Steenerson, Volstead, Miller and Nye voted for the restoration of the merger section.

Minneapolis Politician Ends Life.

Former Judge J. R. Corrigan, a prominent attorney and a well known Democrat of Minneapolis, committed suicide by shooting. Mr Corrigan was judge of the probate court from 1890 to 1892. He was prominent in Democratic state politics and had several times been a delegate to national Democratic conventions. Domestic trouble [illegible]

FOREIGN NEWS.

Mr. Roosevelt's visit to Christiania has been followed by an incident which is making a sensation in Norway. The ex-president, in a statement, severely censured former Premier Gunnar Knudson, who is now vice president of the parliament, for using his name and quoting him as a partisan in Norwegian politics.

Parliament paid a tribute to the memory of King Edward, adopting addresses of condolence and congratulation to the new king. Premier Asquith, in the house of commons, and the Earl of Crewe, in the house of lords, delivered eulogies on Edward VII, and both showed great emotion.

An explosion in the Wellington coal mine at White Haven, Eng., cut off the exit from the 136 miners who were working below the surface. Rescue parties succeeded in saving four men who had been working at the bottom of the shaft, but all the others perished.

In the belief that the death of King Edward and the resultant political confusion may be seized upon as an opportune time for starting an insurrection against English authority the government has stopped the leave of all British army officers in Egypt.

In revenge for the loss of hundreds of their comrades in the campaign for the suppression of the Albanian revolt Turkish soldiers are putting to death all rebel prisoners and are butchering the noncombatants in the undefended towns.

Another terrific earthquake has struck Costa Rica. Telegraph lines are badly crippled, but reports reaching Port Limon say that scores of buildings crumbled in San Jose.

A severe earthquake shock was felt at San Domingo. There was no loss of life or great damage to property.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Judge Smith McPherson, in the federal court at Des Moines, dismissed the complaint filed on behalf of the Western Milling company, asking that the United States district attorney, M. L. Temple of Iowa, be enjoined from seizing bleached flour shipped into Iowa. The court upheld the federal ruling as regards bleached flour.

A charge of $30 per hour, or $300 per day, is considered a reasonable fee for a New York attorney of experience, according to Attorney John B. Gleason, who testified before Referee Blair in bankruptcy at Pittsburg in an effort to establish his right to a fee of $60,000 for services during the Harry K. Thaw trial.

Transfers have been completed in New York by means of which a St. Paul land corporation which, with its $12,000,000 capital, is said to be four times larger than any other in the world, closes the largest land deal ever made in America, obtaining title to 800,000 acres in Central Oregon.

The biggest ship in the American navy slid off the ways at the New York navyyard when the battleship Florida dropped into the water. Later on, when the Arkansas and the Wyoming, now under construction, are afloat they will exceed the Florida in size by 3,000 tons.

Violations of published freight rates have resulted from various practices of railroads and shippers, as outlined in an opinion by the interstate commerce commission in the matter of the substituting of tonnage at transit points.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, March 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named, in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest, will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1911, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years, but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 259 of the General Laws of 1909, as amended by Chapter No. 106 of the General Laws of 1909.

Reasons Why You Should Buy Our Land In the Sunny, Fertile State of DURANGO

MEXICO

WE OWN 190,000 ACRES OF AS GOOD LAND AS YOU CAN FIND IN MEXICO.

We will sell you 40 acres of this land for $350 that will be worth $700 October 1, 1910, and $1,000 before October 1, 1911.

We will give with each 40-acre sale a free lot in the town of Conejos, which is one of the important shipping points on the Mexican Central railroad and the end of a division on a branch road running from Conejos to Escubadora.

This land of ours is covered with the best kind of succulent grass for grazing purposes and cattle fatten on it quicker than in the best grazing sections of the United States.

Adjoining this land of ours Mexican farmers grow wheat harvesting 60 bushels to the acre this year, corn that is 12 to 15 feet high, Irish potatoes 10 inches long, sweet potatoes 7 to 10 pounds, cabbages as big as pumpkins, Bermuda onions of great size and finest quality---in fact, they grow every northern cereal and vegetable, and all southern vegetables and fruits except lemons and oranges.

Peaches, pears, grapes, cherries, apples, apricots, strawberries, canteloupes and peanuts thrive prodigously on our land.

Intensified farming can be followed with amazing success and wonderful profits on our land, which is covered with a volcanic loam soil to a depth of 6 to 18 feet.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine says that American capital exceeding a billion dollars is invested in Mexican industries. Doesn't this fact tell you something?

Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, reports that it has between 6 and 7 million dollars invested in Mexico and that its principal holdings are in the vicinity of Torreon, Merico, which is 56 miles south of our lands. He says: "We think well of our Mexican holdings and as business justifies we will increase them."

American farmers are the logical agriculturists to develope the tremendous resources of the crop producing lands in Mexico. Why not join the band of colonists that is increasing by thousands every year?

In selecting lands we chose the highlands of the state of Durango because there you can grow anything grown in Minnesota and in double and treble quantities.

The climate is the real thing--it is always cool and never gets cold. You require a blanket nights; you never need an overcoat. The air is purity itself. Average yearly temperature less than 70 deg. Fahrenheit

Rain comes in the seasons when the crop grows best. Planting starts in April and crops grow with such rapidity that harvests are two months ahead of Minnesota. Rainfall in four months is between 25 and 30 inches, all that is needed to insure a perfect crop and a bountiful harvest.

You can surely afford 25c an acre a month, and that's all you need to pay per acre on the farm you buy.

Send to us for free literature and pictures on postcards of views on our lands. By arrangement with the Thief River Falls News w are able to offer you a coupon with this ad worth $10. Mail or deliver it to Colby & Davis at Hotel Evelyn.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Fair Association Elected Officers for This year's County Fair.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 3, 4 and 5 the Dates Selected.

At a meeting of the members of the Red Lake County Agricultural society held last Friday evening in the Antlers Club rooms, officers for the year were elected as follows:

President—C. C. Jackson.
First Vice-President—John Morgan.
Second Vice President.—W. J. LaBree
Secretary—Willis Ackre.

The fair is to be held this year the first week in August—Wednesday, Thursday and Friday—and an effort is to be made to have the fair this year a bigger success than ever before. Many new attractions are to be secured and the premiums to be paid for agricultural and stock exhibits will be higher than ever before.

The Red Lake County Agricultural Society for years past has had the reputation of holding the best fairs in the northern part of the state and there is sure to be a large attendance.

Circus Day.

The sun peeps over the eastern hills in a blaze of glory. The world awakens and starts another busy day. The small boy hies him from his bed and hurries from home while the dew is still left on the grass. The country folk arise before the dawn, hurry through their chores, don their Sunday clothes, and start for town, where all about is an air of waiting expectancy and gathering crowds in holiday attire. The anxiously awaited event has come at last. Circus Day is here.

With the coming of dawn the circus train pulls into town, and at once commences a scene of hustle and hurry. Orders sharply given and quickly obeyed by a vast throng of workers who help to unload the train. Even the elephants are called into service. All is noise and excitement, while all about are spectators staring with eager eyes and guessing at the many marvels and wonders still covered with protecting canvas.

On the show grounds the same hurry is going on. Acres of canvas cover the ground, stakes are driven, the big tent pulled to place, and in the twinkling of an eye the large pavilions are raised, while over all many colored banners float in the soft morning breeze. Suddenly the bugle calls, horses in gay trappings appear from nowhere apparently. Scores of people in bright colored costumes, golden mirrored chariots and wagons, elephants, camels, zebras, and other strange animals form in line. The big bands in gay uniforms suddenly blare forth and parade has started down the street, which is lined with eager, smiling faces.

This is the daily experience of a big circus, requiring the most careful generalship to accomplish the seemingly impossible feat of getting ready for the afternoon performance, and such are the scenes to be witnessed Friday June 10th when the Great Dode Fisk Shows will exhibit at Thief River Falls.

Two More Big Ditches.

Surveyor Joseph Baugh, of Warren, with a crew of assistants, is busy surveying for a big judical ditch for Marshall and Roseau counties. The main ditch of the system starts near the head of Tamarac river in East Park and runs in a general easterly direction, bearing north slightly thru the northern part of the towns of East Park, Hunter and Como, where it goes north into Roseau county. A complete set of laterals will be put in, thoroughly draining the towns mentioned. This will mean everything to a number of settlers living in Hunter and Como, as they have been badly handicapped from lack of roads and drainage.

Furthermore, we are reliably informed that the big Moose River-Thief Lake project will soon be established. This comprises about 300 miles of ditches, draining the whole Moose River valley and the country north of Thief lake and lowering and largely decreasing the size of Thief Lake.

These two projects, together with judical Ditch No. 11 and State Ditch No. 83, now under construction, mean the redemption of practially all the overflowed lands in eastern Marshall County and insure a rapid settlement and phenomenal development of all the territory affected.

"Just watch us grow," says the Middle River Pioneer, in commenting on the work.

IRVING A. CASWELL, Who Has the Endorsement of Red Lake County Attorneys for Clerk of the Supreme Court.

All of the attorneys of Red Lake county indorse the condidacy of Irving A. Caswell for the Republican nomination for the office of clerk of the supreme court. Mr. Caswell was appointed to this position last winter by the judges of the court to fill the unexpired term of Carl A. Pigeon, who had resigned, and has made good in every way. The general sentiment of the people is that he is entitled to another term. The following is the endorsement given to him by the attorneys of Red Lake county:

To Whom It May Concern: We, the undersigned, and members of the Bar of the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, do hereby endorse the candidacy of I. A. Caswell as the nominee of the Republican party of the state of Minnesota for the office of clerk of the supreme court of the state of Minnesota for the ensuing term:

Respectfully
Earl W. Mabey.

Coming Soon at the Auditorium.

Miss Grace Cameron, who is the star of "Nancy" which will appear at the Auditorium on Wednesday June 8th is not only known through her previous work in the Metropolitan attractions but to many by her celebrated phonograph records. At a tremendous salary Miss Cameron was especially engaged by the Edison Phonograph Co. to make two records that are great sellers and popular. Persons having her records are especially delighted to see this artiste and hear her sing some of her famous songs and to note the comparison between her own renditions and those heard through the phonograph. Many, who are well acquainted with her great records will be anxious to see just how this dainty prima donna looks and acts so as to better appreciate her records hereafter.

Hay for the Horse.

The agricultural authorities both of North Dakota and of the Minnesota Experiment station agree that a pound of hay per day per hundred pounds of weight of the horse to which it is fed sufficient. Over feeding of hay results in heaves and indigestion. It is advised to limit the amount of hay a work horse is given to avoid serious results consequent upon working on too full a stomach. Colts, however, may be fed all the hay they will eat.

Secures a Good Contract.

C. R. Stowell, of the Northern Culvert company, last week received word that he had been awarded the contract for furnishing the culverts on state ditch No. 91, which drains lands in Roseau county in the vicinity of Greenbush. The ditch is nearly two hundred miles in length and it is going to take in the neighborhood of thirty five car loads of steel culverts. The general contract for this ditch has been awarded to Gleason & Foley, of Aitkin.

Bagley Boys Won.

The Bagley High School Base ball team was here last Saturday and played a game of ball with the local high school team. It took eleven innings to decide the contest, the score being 6 to 6 at the end of the ninth inning. In the eleventh inning, however, the Bagley boys succeeded in making three scores making the final result 6 to 9.

Cultiavtion of Corn.

Corn, like all other vegetation, obtains its food from the soil through its roots. When cultivating it the least disturbance of the roots possible leaves them in the best condition to feed the stalk. Little disturbance of the roots means shallow cultivation. On poorly plowed and carelessly farmed land, experience at the state experiment station at St. Anthony Park shows, the corn roots grow closer to the surface than in well and deeply plowed fields that have been opened to considerable depth by the growth of clover. Such a field cannot be cultivated as deeply as one where the seed bed has been intelligently prepared. Cultivation simply to get rid of weeds is not enough. Corn should also be cultivated to retain moisture in the soil. Wet soil can be opened to evaporation, aeration and warmth by cultivation, and, if the cultivation is not deep enough to injure the roots, corn can be worked in until after tasseling if a one horse cultivator be used.

Good Seed Institutes.

Good Seed Institutes, under the auspices of the Farmer's Institutes, will be held next winter in many places in the state as a result of co-operation of the local business men with the institute department. The object of the good institutes will be to furnish farmers information regarding the production and selection of good seed. These institutes will be of no less interest to the farmers than the regular Farmer's Institutes, and will be conducted by practical institute workers, who, through long experience and study have developed a system of farming and seed selection that should be understood and practiced by every farmer. The improved quality of the grains of Minnesota is as largely dependent upon good seed as an increased yield per acre is dependent largely upon the conservation of soil fertility.

Automobile Convention.

The first annual meeting of the Northwestern Automobile Owners' Association will be held at Grand Forks on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, May 31 and June 1, 2 and 3. Governor Burke, President McVey, of the University, President Worst of the agricultural college, Minnesota State Roads Commissioner Cooley and other conventions on subjects of special interest to automobile owners. Machines cared for free of charge. Come to Grand Forks this spring on that tour you have been planning and add profit to pleasure.

Struck Hard Coal.

While drilling for water on the farm A. M. Landby up near Warroad last week a hard ledge was encountered, and as Mr. Landby desired to go to a greater depth dynamite was used. After the explosion the pump was started, and in the debris pumped up was found a large per centage of black rock, which upon examination and test, proved to be good hard coal. The particles, the size of which were about like a hickory nut, were put on the fire and burned like coal.

It is estimated that the ledge is of considerable thickness, but as to its extent, nothing can be known as yet.

LOTS OF LAND IS SOLD.

State Auditor Iverson Sells 23,300 Acres of Land in This Section

Most of the Land Sold to Actual Settlers and at Good Prices.

At the state land sales held in Red Lake, Clearwater, Marshall, Roseau and Kittson counties last week [illegible] of 23,300 acres of land were sold at good prices.

Auditor Iverson says the most significant part of the sales was the large proportion of buyers from outside the state, men of means and practical farmers who will at once settle on the land they purchased, together with additional lands which they will buy and at once begin systematic diversified farming.

They in turn, will bring others from the particular localities in which they reside, and the result will be a substantial addition to the population of this section. This is shown from many inquiries land agents have received of late from men who made purchases of state land, or who wanted to get prices on adjoining lands. Ever since early spring the land men have been busy showing available lands.

For three years a great change in methods of farming has become apparent. Systematic rotation, the general use of manure spreaders, and corn and potato raising have demonstrated what can be done. Immigration to Canada has been stayed to some extent.

There has been a noticeable return of farmers who went west to engage in the fruit raising business, for while some of them have prospered and made money from the sale of the fruit farms which they improved, owing to the advance in prices, they are satisfied to return where crops are more certain.

PLAYS WERE A SUCCESS.

"Royal Chef" and "Knight for a Day" Pleased Thief River Falls People.

Attendance Was Quite Large and the City Netted a Nice Sum.

The formal opening of Thief River Falls' handsome new auditorium which took place on Monday and Tuesday evenings of this week was a decided success in every way. On Monday evening "The Royal Chef" was presented and it was a success in every way. William Conely, who acted the part of Heinrich Lemphauser from Chicago and was employed by Rajah of Oolong as the royal chef, was the whole life of this comedy, although there were many other star actors and actresses. At a special matinee Tuesday afternoon "The Royal Chef" was again presented and on Tuesday evening "Knight for a Day" was presented. The songs and music in this production were better than in the "Royal Chef," but Mr. Conely did not act the part of Jonathon Joy of well as he did the royal chef, although the other members of the company were better in this production.

All who attended were well pleased with the performances, and after paying the expenses of the company, the city netted a considerable sum.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

SALOONS ORDERED TO CLOSE

Notice Given to Large Number in Northern Minnesota.

Saloons in all of Mahnomen county and in sections of Beltrami, Cass, Clay, Crow Wing, Otter Tail and Wadena counties have been notified by William E. Johnson, chief special officer in the government Indian service, to close their doors by May 10.

The order issued by Special Agent Johnson affects about seventy towns, a majority of them in territory not hitherto affected by the government order. It is the most drastic of the orders issued since the special agent of the government began the campaign to enforce the provisions of old Indian treaties in the northern country and to prevent the sale of liquor to Indians.

Accompanying the order is another order prohibiting the sale of "spirituous liquors" in sections of Norman, Polk and Red Lake counties. The saloons in these districts will be allowed to sell beer and malt, but not whisky.

In an order issued Nov. 8 Mr. Johnson closed the saloons in Becker and Hubbard counties and in sections of Itasca, Norman, Polk and Clearwater counties. In the most recent order these districts are included with the other sections as proscribed territory.

In the order closing the saloons, sixty-two railroad stations are named as within the proscribed territory. Exceptions to the general order are made in four cases. In Backus one saloon will be allowed to operate, in Cass Lake three saloons, in Detroit two saloons and in Walker two.

PRISON POET IS RELEASED

John Carter Pardoned From Stillwater Penitentiary.

John Carter, prison poet, who has been released from Stillwater penitentiary and who owes his release to the national recognition he has gained by his poetic contributions to magazines, will not continue to write poetry. In his cell at Stillwater just before his release he characterized poetry writing as a "pleasant diversion" and said he would seek a future in music or in newspaper work.

After a long session, at which petitions for Carter's release came from all sections of the United States and England, the state pardon board decided to commute Carter's sentence and to release him at once and unconditionally. He has served five years and six months of a ten-year sentence. He was convicted of stealing $26 and a watch from a railroad station at Karlstad and was sentenced to ten years in prison. During his term in prison he has contributed to many of the leading magazines of the country and many magazine editors, including the editor of the Century magazine, appealed to the board in his behalf. In addition to writing poetry Carter has learned to play the clarinet. He is a fine pianist.

MAY CONTINUE IN BUSINESS

Minnesota Supreme Court Decides Trading Stamp Case.

The state supreme court, in a decision written by Justice Lewis, holds that the Sperry & Hutchinson Trading Stamp company has the right to conduct business in Minnesota.

The opinion says that the issue and redemption of trading stamps, as carried on by this company, is not attended by sufficient elements of chance or uncertainty to justify the restrictions of the Minnesota act.

The case was brought in the supreme court on a writ of quo warranto, the company demurring, pleading that the trading stamp act is in violation of the state constitution and of the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution.

DEMOCRATS OF MINNESOTA

Six Hundred Attend Jefferson Day Banquet at St. Paul.

The overthrow of the Republican party in the lower house of congress and in the White House was the topic of the Democrats of Minnesota at the Jefferson day dinner held at the St. Paul Auditorium. State politics were mentioned only incidentally and city politics not at all. The dinner was attended by nearly 600 people from different parts of the state.

Martin J. Wade of Iowa and Governor Burke of North Dakota were the principal speakers, taking the places of Congressman Foss of Massachusetts, John Lind and Representative W. S. Hammond.

Young Women Witness Suicide.

M. H. Honisch, thirty years old, employed by a firm of shirt manufacturers at St. Paul, ended his life in the establishment by cutting his throat with a knife. Death was almost instantaneous. A dozen young women employed in the same room as Honisch saw the tragedy and ran panic stricken from the scene. What prompted Honisch to end his life is unknown.

Citation for Hearing On Petition For Administration.

Estate of Hans Olson, Decedent

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF RED LAKE, IN PROBATE COURT.

In the matter of the Estate of Hans Olson, Decedent.

The State of Minnesota to I. Gronteen, and all persons interested in the granting of administration of the estate of said decedent: The petition of E. H. Hobe, Consul for Norway, having been filed in this court, representing that Hans Olson, then a resident of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, died intestate on the 17th day of January, 1909, and praying that letters of administration of his estate be granted to Eskild Muller; and the court having fixed the time and place for hearing said petition; Therefore, you, and each of you, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this court at the Probate Court Rooms in the City of Red Lake Falls, in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of June 1910, at ten o'clock a. m., why said petition should not be granted.

Witness the Judge of said court, and the seal of said court, this [illegible] day of May, 1910.

NOTED PRELATES TAKE PART

Six Bishops of Catholic Church Consecrated at St. Paul.

A ceremony unparalleled in the United States occurred at St. Paul Catholic seminary at St. Paul when six recently appointed bishops of this archdiocese were consecrated in the presence of a large and notable assemblage. Several distinguished prelates participated in the ceremonies, including the papal delegate, Diomede Falconio, the highest Catholic dignitary in the United States; three archbishops, John Ireland of St. Paul, S. G. Messmer of Milwaukee and Fergus P. MacEvay of Toronto, Can., the official representative of the Canadian Catholics. In addition ten monsignors, twenty bishops, 450 priests and 150 seminarians were in attendance.

Those created bishops were: Right Rev. J. J. Lawler of St. Paul auxiliary bishop of St. Paul; Right Rev. James O'Reilly of Minneapolis, bishop of Fargo, N. D.; Right Rev. Patrick H. Heffron of St. Paul, bishop of Winona; Right Rev. Vincent Wehrle of Richardton, N. D., bishop of Bismarck, N. D.; Right Rev. Timothy Corbett of Duluth, bishop of Crookston; Right Rev. J. N. Busch of St. Paul, bishop of Lead, S. D.

Consecration ceremonies were conducted within St. Mary's chapel in the seminary grounds. The procession to the chapel commenced promptly at 9:30 o'clock. The St. Thomas cadets led the procession, followed by the seminarians, who in turn were followed by the priests, next the bishops, then the bishops who were to be consecrated, the monsignors, the archbishops and finally the archbishop and the papal delegate.

Archbishop Ireland was the consecrator, assisted by Bishop McGolrick of Duluth and Bishop Trobec of St. Cloud.

KILLS GIRL AND HIMSELF

Double Crime Committed in Outburst of Insane Rage.

John McGuire, a farmer of Hegbert, sixteen miles from Appleton, murdered Miss Goldie Cale, a school teacher, by shooting her with a shotgun. Later he hanged himself.

McGuire, who was much older than Miss Cale, had been paying her attentions, which she rejected. This is supposed to have been the cause of the double crime.

When McGuire went amuck Miss Cale fled from the house, fearing for her life. McGuire pursued her into the road and shot her down. Then, telling the hired man that he was going to Appleton to give himself up, he disappeared.

The sheriff at Appleton was notified, and while on his way to Hegbert he noticed a coat lying on a bridge. A moment later he saw the body of McGuire swinging from a rope that the suicide had attached to a beam of the bridge.

MAY SUE HARRIMAN ESTATE

State of Minnesota Wants Inheritance Tax on Certain Stocks.

The state of Minnesota will endeavor to collect an inheritance tax from the estate of the late E. H. Harriman of New York, who is supposed to have owned stock in the Minneapolis and St. Louis and Great Northern railroads. Under the position taken in the John S. Kennedy case the state is entitled to its inheritance tax on all the stock so held, as both these railroad companies are Minnesota corporations.

The attorney general's department will also investigate twenty-five or thirty others admitted to probate since the inheritance tax law was passed in 1905. Attorney General Simpson is elated over his success in the settlement made by the Kennedy estate, under which the state received $345,325.27. The money came in a draft from the executor of the estate in New York.

HELD IN BAIL OF $10,000

Girl Driver Who Caused Death of St. Paul Broker.

Miss Theodora Stark, the eighteen-year-old Minneapolis girl who drove the automobile which ran into and killed Stuart B. Shotwell, the St. Paul copper broker, was released on a $10,000 bond by Judge Hallam, presiding in the criminal branch of the Ramsey county district court at St. Paul.

The complaint lodged formally against Miss Stark by County Attorney O'Brien and sworn to by Louis F. Jessrang, license inspector of the police department, charges manslaughter in the second degree. The prisoner is charged with "culpable negligence," but "without design to effect death."

New Minneapolis Union Station.

Minneapolis will have a new Union station, on the present site, within eighteen months. Definite assurance of this was given by James J. Hill. In a former interview Mr. Hill announced the intention to provide a new Union station building in the near future and now Mr. Hill says plans are progressing satisfactorily.

MRS. LEDBETER GOES FREE

Cannot Be Tried Second Time for Murder of Husband.

The state supreme court declares that Mrs. Emma Ledbeter of Mankato cannot be placed on trial for a second time and judgment will be entered in the district court of Blue Earth county and Mrs. Ledbeter will be released from custody.

Mrs. Ledbeter was originally indicted by a Blue Earth grand jury, Nov. 13, 1909, charged with the murder of her husband, Holland J. Ledbeter, May 4, 1909. The charge was murder in the first degree.

She was placed on trial on Dec. 31, 1909, and was found not guilty by the jury. She was again indicted Feb. 7, 1910, on the charge of murder in the second degree. She refused to plead when arraigned in court on the second indictment, claiming acquittal and previous jeopardy. The state demurred, claiming that the trial judge in the first case was not qualified to sit, as he was the father of the defendant's attorney, A. R. Pfau.

Judge Quinn sustained the demurrer and the defense appealed to the state supreme court, which decided in favor of the defense.

THREE ARE UNDER ARREST

Developments in Assault Case at St. Paul.

Three men, all discharged employes, are under arrest at St. Paul in connection with the assault on Mrs. George T. Harris and Mrs. Mary Brose at the Fort Snelling hotel. They are Ed Keener, thirty-five years old; Chris Engle, fifty-seven years old, and a man known as "Frenchy," about fifty-five years old. Engle and "Frenchy" were released after being in custody over night.

Mrs. Harris is in a serious condition with a fractured skull. Mrs. Brose was less seriously injured.

Mrs. Harris and members of the police department say revenge was the motive for the attempted murder.

STATE WINS ONE ROUND

Rockefeller Concern May Be Ousted From Minnesota.

The Standard Oil company may be ousted from Minnesota. This is one of the possibilities resulting from a decision handed down by the state supreme court.

In an opinion written by Justice T. D. O'Brien, Justice C. L. Lewis dissenting, the order of Judge George L. Bunn of the Ramsey county district court, sustaining the demurrer to the complaint interposed by the oil company's attorney, is reversed and the case remanded back for a new trial.

The case against the Standard Oil company was brought by former Attorney General E. T. Young to revoke the license of the company to do business in Minnesota on the ground that the company was guilty of unfair competition by charging lower prices at competitive points for the purpose of destroying the business of competing companies.

The Standard Oil company demurred on the ground that the law is invalid and unconstitutional, being class legislation, and Judge Bunn sustained the demurrer. This order of Judge Bunn is now reversed by the supreme court.

CHILD FINDS MISSING PAPERS

Father Serving Time in Prison for Destroying Them.

Gerald, baby son of P. J. Fearon, aged twenty-five, former chief clerk of the United States land office at Crookston, now prisoner in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., found, while left by its mother to play, in the debris of the library drawer, misplaced government records, for the charged destruction of which its young father now occupies the barred and melancholy dungeon.

The papers were found on the eve of the departure of the grief stricken wife and her two little babies to the home of her husband's father, Daniel Fearon, stonecutter, pioneer resident and respected citizen of St. Cloud.

Notwithstanding Fearon's protestations he was an innocent man he was sentenced May 5 by Judge Morris to eighteen months in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Frank Day on Operating Table.

Frank A. Day, chairman of the Democratic state committee, was operated on at Cobb hospital, Merriam Park, by Dr. S. G. Cobb, assisted by Dr. James E. Moore of Minneapolis. Dr. Cobb said that it was too early to make any statement as to the result of the operation, but so far as could be judged immediately after Mr. Day regained consciousness recovery would be rapid and permanent.

Epidemic of Disease.

Mumps, smallpox and whooping cough seem to have taken possession of Montgomery. The smallpox is in a mild form. Whooping cough is more serious, especially among the little ones, having been the cause of several deaths.

Woman Assaulted and Robbed.

On a lonely road leading from West Duluth to Hermantown Mrs. Peter Norden, fifty years old, was held up and assaulted. After accomplishing his purpose the fiend robbed Mrs. Norden and escaped through the woods.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The Prohibition party in Minnesota is not off the map and has not made any deal with the county option forces, according to W. G. Calderwood, secretary of the state Prohibition committee. He said that they expect to put candidates in the field for the legislature just the same as two years ago, when they put up a fight in forty-four out of the sixty-three districts.

Some excitement prevails in the southern part of Kandiyohi country and at Willmar owing to the fact that a crew of Milwaukee engineers is surveying lines westward from Hutchinson. It is assumed that this means the realization of plans to build a cut-off from Hutchinson to Appleton to accommodate the through traffic from the coast.

The Faribault city council has passed a curfew ordinance which takes effect at once. A petition signed by a large number of citizens asking for its passage was presented. The ordinance requires minors under sixteen years old to be at home at 8 o'clock from November to June and the balance of the year at 9 o'clock.

The state board of health, after a hearing, ordered the slaughter houses at Waseca, Rockford and Hasty, in Wright county, and Lake Centerville to close within a specified time. The board gave an extended hearing at which a number of witnesses were examined.

Lands in the northwestern part of Minnesota and in Koochiching county have doubled in value where it has become known that the state drainage commission had decided to dig drainage ditches, according to George A. Ralph, state drainage engineer.

The sheriff of Becker county is trying to collect personal taxes from residents of White Earth reservation. The department of justice contends the Indians are not liable to taxation. The matter will undoubtedly be fought out in court.

Rev. Francis Schaefer, for fourteen years professor of history at St. Paul seminary, has been appointed rector of the seminary to take the place made vacant by the elevation of Rev. Patrick R. Heffron to be bishop of Winona.

W. R. McKenzie of Bemidji, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development association, says the meeting to be held in Crookston June 1, 2 and 3 will consider making its sessions semi-annual hereafter.

S. G. Iverson, state auditor, sold 6,800 acres of state school land in Marshall county last week. The courtroom at Warren was well filled with buyers from many states.

The forty-fourth encampment of the department of Minnesota, Grand Army of the Republic, will be held June 14 and 15 in the Princess theater, Minneapolis.

It has cost Minneapolis in the first four months of 1910 $1,038.09 less to run its poor department than in the same period of 1909.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

While men were working on a roof of a dwelling at Faribault the scaffold gave away, wrecking it and pitching three carpenters, Jesse Eckert, Gustave Bollenback and son, Malvin, to the ground, a distance of thirty feet. All men were found unconscious and sustained serious injuries, but will recover.

Fred Drenckhahn, aged thirty-six, plunged from the top of a fifty-foot windmill tower, where he had gone to make repairs, on his farm, four miles northeast of Rollingstone, Winona county. He fell on his chest and face on the concrete base. He died an hour after the accident.

Samuel Thompson, the young farmhand who is said to have got away with $500 from the strong box of John Thompson on his farm near Lewiston, Winona county, in March, is in jail at Winona after having been off on a long and delightful trip abroad to his old home in Norway.

August Leider of Lester, Rice county, was attacked by a vicious bull and seriously injured. His faithful dog went to his rescue, giving him time to crawl through a fence, otherwise he probably would have been killed.

The jury in the Pepoon case at Colville, Wash., returned a verdict of guilty of first degree murder against George L. Pepoon for the murder of his wife, formerly Mrs. Edith Wolcott of Fergus Falls.

John Walsh lost his life by being burned to death in a switch shanty belonging to the Oliver Iron Mining company at Bovey.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Peter Bohland, aged seventy-three, is dead at St. Paul, where he had resided since 1856. Mr. Bohland served two terms in the Minnesota legislature and was for many years a member of the workhouse board.

Martin Hughes Gerry, fleet engineer under Admiral Farragut at the battle of Mobile bay, is dead at Minneapolis. Mr. Gerry, besides serving in the Civil war, also served in the Spanish American war.

Mrs. Margaret Dougherty, eighty-five years old, is dead at Minneapolis. Mrs. Dougherty had resided in Minneapolis more than half a century.

Mrs. Charles Johnson, a pioneer resident of Hastings, is dead, aged seventy-eight.

Closing Out Sale--Going Out of Business!

Having decided to go out of our present line of business we offer our entire stock, consisting principally of crockery, glass-ware, china, lamps, enameled-ware, tin-ware, picture frames, wall paper, window shades, underware, hosiery, jewelry, silverware, laces, embroideries and oceans of notions at closing out prices, just think of our former low prices and what they now must be when we have reduced the price still more. We will make you prices you can not afford to let go by as this advertisement means exactly what it says, we are going out of this business and therefore it is not a question of price but the main thing is to sell the goods in the shortest time possible. Now is the best time while the stock is the most complete, if you delay the particular things you might like most to have may be gone, so be sure to come while you have the best selection. Now is the time to save money by spending it, the goods will keep and pay big interest on the money invested until the time you need them at the price you get them here.

ALL GOODS ON THE TEN CENT COUNTER NOW..........7 CENTS
" " " 7 " " ".......... 3 CENTS

Will sell or trade entire stock and fixtures for a good piece of land not over ten miles from this place or houses here in the city if the price is right. Come in and we will talk it over.

ROBERTSON'S BARGAIN BAZAAR.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

Walter J. Smith, of Eveleth, was the last man to announce his candidacy for office of state treasurer, but according to reports he is going to have strong backing and is making a whirlwind campaign.

Irving A. Caswell is the popular choice of the people of Minnesota for the office of the clerk of the supreme court and certainly is entitled to another term. His nomination will certainly strengthen the ticket.

The old Shuler building in Anoka is being torn down, and it is perhaps one of the oldest structures in Minnesota, certainly the most famous. The building was erected in the early fifties by Edward P. Shaw, an Indian trader, and later became known as the Schuler building. It had been used as a court house for Anoka county and a public school of the city of Anoka. In this building was enlisted the first civil war soldier of the United States according to the official documents at Washington. When the news of the firing on Ft, Sumter was received Governor Ramsey of Minnesota was in Washington conferring with President Lincoln. Lincoln decided to call for 75000 troops. Governor Ramsey at once offered him a regiment and it was accepted. Ramsey telegrahed the offer to Ex Governor Gorman who was a Mexican war veteran and who was attending a session of the district court in the "Shuler building." A messenger brought the telegram up from St. Anthony on horseback. A recess of court was taken and Gorman addressed the people calling for volunteers. Aaron Greenwald was the first man to sign, making him the first man in America to volunteer for the defence of the Union. Many other anecdotes might be related of this historic building, and Anoka will never again look natural without the "old Shuler building."

AN EIGHTY-PER CENT WASTE.

About a year ago Minnesota appointed a committee to study the subject of compensation for personal injuries resulting from industrial accidents. By a search of court records of Hennepin County, in which Minneapolis is situated, the committee discovered that the sum which the people of the county pay out yearly in court costs accruing from the trial of personal-damage cases exceeds the sum of all the verdicts recovered by the plaintiffs in such cases. By paying the damages out of their own pockets, without litigation, taxpayers could have saved money. And rather less than half the amount of the damages named in the verdicts actually reaches the injured persons or their dependants. Contingent-fee lawyers and trial costs absorb the remainder.

Official reports show that employes pay certain insurance companies about twenty million dollars a year to assume the liability for personal damages arising from accidents in their establishments, while in settlement of claims the companies pay out a little less than half as much. The remainder goes for expenses of litigation, and so on.

Based on Minneapolis' experience, and remembering that the insurance companies do not cover the whole industrial field, we may say that to meet claims for damages arising from accidents to workmen employers pay out twenty million dollars a year; to cover the court costs of trying the damage suits taxpayers contribute ten millions more, making thirty millions, while the victims of the accidents actually receive about five millions—a sheer waste amounting to eighty per cent

The unconscionable waste—no less than its monstrous injustice—is condemning the present litigious, contingent-fee system in the minds of all thoughtful persons. New York, Wisconson and Illinois following Minnesota's lead, have appointed committees to study the subject and devise an intelligent, just method of dealing with it.

American Explorer Will Deliver Lecture in Swedish Capital—Chicago Paper Pays Norwegians a Compliment in Its Editorial Columns—Copenhagen Brewer Donates 400,000 Crowns to Rebuild Church Tower.

SWEDEN.

From St. Petersburg comes the definite report that Robert E. Peary will visit Sweden and Stockholm some time this month and will, while in Stockholm, deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Swedish Geographical society. He will be received and entertained by the same society during his visit to the capital city. Mr. Peary will also lecture in Copenhagen and his visit there will create especial interest, owing to the enthusiastic reception which the people there were led to give in honor of Dr. Cook, who falsely represented himself as having discovered the North pole. The Danes are very suspicious now, they are all from Missouri in regard to this matter, and it will be up to Mr. Peary to show his papers, provided he is to count on a genuinely hearty reception in the Danish capital.

Stockholm's only negro committed suicide at the Hotel Kronprinsen the other day because his woman had deserted him. For a long time he had been fearing that he would lose his position and since a white woman whom he appropriated as his companion deserted him life looked so gloomy to him that he decided to commit suicide. His name was George Barnett Start and he was born in 1885.

King Gustaf in the very near future will go to Vienna, where he will pay a visit to the aged Emperor Frans Josef. Prior to his visit there he will meet the queen in Rome, who will accompany him to Austria. If it should be necessary to do so the king will return to Munchen, where he will again take medical treatment from Dr. Schweringen.

The Norwegian residents in Stockholm are very desirous of having Minister Vogt retained in Stockholm and declare in a petition to the Norwegian government that the Norwegian colony in the Swedish capital would sustain a severe loss should Minister Vogt be removed to another post.

The Swedish colony in Berlin dedicated its new clubhouse at Belle-Alliance strasse April 24 in the midst of great ceremonies. The programme consisted of speeches, national folk dances and plays. There was a large audience present, including at least 300 Swedish men and women.

Stockholm is getting ready for the great Olympian games which are to be held there in 1912. A great stadium will be erected in the Idrotts park, with a seating capacity of 22,000. Work on the new stadium will commence during the latter part of this summer.

NORWAY.

The Chicago Tribune pays the Norwegian people the following editorial compliment in one of its recent issues: "Democracy and love of liberty ever have characterized the Norwegian people. These traits, coupled with their industry, their thrift, their vigorous physique, their high intellectual development as a race and their [illegible] of purpose in whatever they undertake, have made the Norwegian immigrants in the United States and their American born descendants among the most valuable of the non-English element in America. Norwegians in all parts of the world are today—the 17th of May—celebrating the birthday of [illegible] liberty in Norway. The day marks the ninety-sixth anniversary of the adoption of the [illegible] Norwegian constitution, [illegible] works of liberty. The [illegible] Norway what the Fourth of July [illegible] United States [illegible] the [illegible] that the advancement of democracy is celebrated by reason of obtaining a greater measure of self-government through a democratic constitution, as Norway, nominally at least, always has been independent and never conquered. There is a lesson for Americans in the manner in which Norwegians, both in this country and their homeland, celebrate their great national holiday. There is no insane use of firearms, cannon, toy pistols and other means of noise and human destruction, such as disgraces our own national holiday. There is no list of dead and injured."

By a great majority the odelsthing has voted to grant universal municipal suffrage to women over twenty-five years of age. The new legislation will become effective at the next election and will increase the present women's vote from 270,000 to 500,000. The odelsthing is the controlling legislative body of Norway. The general assembly of the storthing is elected by popular vote and upon convening annually divides itself into two houses, the lagthing and the odelsthing. The former is composed of one-fourth of the total member of the storthing and the other the remaining three-fourths. The revision of the government belongs exclusively to the odelsthing, in which house new legislation must first be considered. Since 1907 women have been allowed to vote under the same conditions as men only when they, or the husband when the couple have property in common, have paid an income tax of 400 crowns in the town and 300 crowns in the country district.

A few evenings ago two journalists were enjoying a dinner together at the Grand hotel in Christiania. Both of them had about two years ago been employed on a Trondhjem paper, but one of them had recently been employed on the "Orebladet." The other one had been recently employed as a theatrical critic on the "Verdens Gang." During the course of the dinner they engaged in a quarrel, resulting in the "Verdens Gang" critic striking his companion a blow in the face which broke the man's spectacles, causing a piece of glass to lodge in one of the eyes. The injured man was taken to a hospital, where it was learned that he will be blind in his right eye for life. The matter was reported to the "Verdens Gang" and the theatrical critic was at once discharged. He departed for Trondhjem, but shortly before reaching Roros the theatrical critic and journalist had ended his life by shooting himself in the head with a revolver.

King Haakon and Queen Maud departed for London last week to attend the funeral of the late King Edward, in honor of whom the city of Christiania was draped in mourning. The present queen of Norway is, as is well known, the youngest daughter of the late King Edward.

Large game is reported very plentiful in Southern Norway. It is stated that last winer in Upper Sirdalen large numbers of reindeer came down into the settlements and not for many years have they been as numerous as they are now.

American mining experts are busily engaged in investigating a number of mining properties at Spitsbergen. Several deals are reported pending and it looks as though American capital will soon control the entire field there.

DENMARK.

Brewer Jacobsen, who on many former occasions has made generous donations to various charitable institutions in Copenhagen, has expressed his desire to rebuild the large tower on Our Lady of the Saviour's church in Copenhagen in the future. It will cost him in the vicinity of 400,000 crowns to have the work done. It will be remembered that this church edifice was bombarded by the British fleet in 1807 and since its restoration the looks of the tower has, to say the least, not been a very imposing one.

A balloon station will be erected at the Valby gas works, close to Copenhagen, in the near future. There will be several balloon and airship events pulled off at the new station this summer and much interest is evinced from all sides in this new enterprise. Admission will be charged from the large crowds that will be attracted to the station and financially it is very possible that the managers who have the erection of the place in charge will realize a handsome sum of money.

Sheriff's Sale.

By Virtue of an Execution, issued out of and under the Seal of the District Court, in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, upon a judgment rendered and docketed in the said Court, on the Sixth day of April, 1910, in an action wherein F. H. Gambell is plaintiff, and Margaret M. Elder, is defendant, in favor of the said plaintiff and against the said defendant, for the sum of One Hundred Fifteen and 85-100 Dollars, in an action in the District Court of said County which execution was directed and delivered to me as Sheriff in and for the said County of Red Lake, I have this 14th day of April, A. D. 1910, levied upon all the right, title and interest of the said Defendant Margaret M. Elder in and to the following described real property situated in the County of Red Lake in said State as follows:

All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, and described as Lot numbered twenty-five (25), in block number one (1), of Meehan's Addition to Thief River Falls, according to the owners rearrangement of said block one (1), and also that part of out lot "C" of said Meehan's Addition described as follows; to-wit: Commencing at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-five (25), thence in a southerly direction, the line being the same variation as the north line of said lot twenty-five (25) to the reserve line of Red Lake River, thence in a southerly direction to a point where the south line of said lot twenty five (25) would intersect the said reserve line if continued, thence in a westerly direction to the southeast corner of said lot twenty-five (25), thence northerly to the place of beginning, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Notice Is Hereby Given, That I, the undersigned, as Sheriff as aforesaid, will sell the above described real property to the highest bidder, for cash, at public auction, at the front door of the postoffice in the city of Thief River Falls, in the county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, on Saturday the fourth day of June, A. D. 1910, at two o'clock p. m., of that day, to satisfy the said Execution, together with the interests and costs thereon.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Sensation followed sensation at Tuesday's session of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee. Testimony of a startling character was introduced. The president of the United States was drawn directly into the controversy. The lie was passed between witness and counsel and bitter clashes between members of the committee were frequent. Frederick M. Kerby, the stenographer who revealed the genesis and production of the now famous Lawlor memorandum, who was dismissed from the government service by Secretary Ballinger, and Assistant Attorney General Oscar Lawler, who prepared the memorandum at President Taft's request, were the witnesses of the day.

The investigation of the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy has been brought to a close so far as the introduction of oral testimony is concerned and the case has been set for argument. Within fifteen days after the argument counsel will submit brief and the committee will then begin consideration of the evidence looking to a final decision. There is no indication as to when a verdict in the case may be expected, but it is generally assumed that the committee will spend several weeks on the record before reaching a decision.

Frederick M. Kerby, the stenographer who has brought much information as to the manner in which Secretary Ballinger was exonerated and L. R. Glavis was condemned, has been dismissed from the government service by Mr. Ballinger and may fight such action legally. The letter of dismissal was an exceedingly severe arraignment of Kerby and as a result it is understood that Kerby is considering legal action for libel against the secretary of the interior.

United States Minister Calhoun, at Peking, reports a serious situation at Nanking. In a telegram to the state department he says that the consulate at Nanking advises the legation that there are disquieting anti-foreign and and anti-dynastic rumors, not unlike those that preceded the Boxer outbreak.

President Taft has authorized several of the administration senators to deny absolutely stories in circulation in Washington that he recently had denounced the progressives in unmistakable terms and had used language to which these legislators took offense.

Practically all the Republicans in the house have been brought over to the support of the provision in the sundry civil bill enlarging the powers of the tariff board.

Reasons Why You Should Buy Our Land In the Sunny, Fertile State of DURANGO

MEXICO

WE OWN 190,000 ACRES OF AS GOOD LAND AS YOU CAN FIND IN MEXICO.

We will sell you 40 acres of this land for $350 that will be worth $700 October 1, 1910, and $1,000 before October 1, 1911.

We will give with each 40-acre sale a free lot in the town of Conejos, which is one of the important shipping points on the Mexican Central railroad and the end of a division on a branch road running from Conejos to Escubadora.

This land of ours is covered with the best kind of succulent grass for grazing purposes and cattle fatten on it quicker than in the best grazing sections of the United States.

Adjoining this land of ours Mexican farmers grow wheat harvesting 60 bushels to the acre this year, corn that is 12 to 15 feet high, Irish potatoes 10 inches long, sweet potatoes 7 to 10 pounds, cabbages as big as pumpkins, Bermuda onions of great size and finest quality---in fact, they grow every northern cereal and vegetable, and all southern vegetables and fruits except lemons and oranges.

Peaches, pears, grapes, cherries, apples, apricots, strawberries, canteloupes and peanuts thrive prodigously on our land.

Intensified farming can be followed with amazing success and wonderful profits on our land, which is covered with a volcanic loam soil to a depth of 6 to 18 feet.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine says that American capital exceeding a billion dollars is invested in Mexican industries. Doesn't this fact tell you something?

Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, reports that it has between 6 and 7 million dollars invested in Mexico and that its principal holdings are in the vicinity of Torreon, Merico, which is 56 miles south of our lands. He says: "We think well of our Mexican holdings and as business justifies we will increase them."

American farmers are the logical agriculturists to develope the tremendous resources of the crop producing lands in Mexico. Why not join the band of colonists that is increasing by thousands every year?

In selecting lands we chose the highlands of the state of Durango because there you can grow anything grown in Minnesota and in double and treble quantities.

The climate is the real thing--it is always cool and never gets cold. You require a blanket nights; you never need an overcoat. The air is purity itself. Average yearly temperature less than 70 deg. Fahrenheit

Rain comes in the seasons when the crop grows best. Planting starts in April and crops grow with such rapidity that harvests are two months ahead of Minnesota. Rainfall in four months is between 25 and 30 inches, all that is needed to insure a perfect crop and a bountiful harvest.

You can surely afford 25c an acre a month, and that's all you need to pay per acre on the farm you buy.

Class Day Exercises

The senior class of the local high school presented the customary class day program at the Auditorium last Thursday evening before an audience which taxed the seating capacity of the large building to the limit. The various numbers on the program were full of merit and held the interest of the audience throughout the two hours necessary to present it. The class prophecy, poem, will and other well known class stunts, permitted visitors to become acquainted with the foibles and pecularities of the class and gave opportunity for many witty sallies at the expense of some of the class favorites. In place of the ordinary class farce, a couple of shadow plays appeared on the program and created not a little amusement. The convenience of the well equipped stage added greatly to the successful presentation of the exercises.

Commencement Exercises of 1910

Twenty eight students of the Thief River Falls High School, sixteen young men and twelve young ladies, were graduated from this institution last Friday evening at the Auditorium, receiving well earned diplomas, which are the official mark of approval of the state of Minnesota that they have met the requirements of study prescribed by the state high school board.

Every seat in the vast Auditorium was occupied before the time set for beginning the evening's exercises and additional chairs had to be carried in from an adjoining room to accommodate the overflow, the children having been requested to remain at home. The stage was occupied by the graduates, the board of the education and a few others directly connected with the program. The large handsomely decorated interior of the Auditorium, the comfortably seated audience, the group of young graduates attired in beautiful gowns and becoming suits and bearing an abundance of red roses, the stage settings, and the glow of the hundreds of lights all made an attractive and impressive picture which will long remain in the memory of those who were fortunate enough to be present at the ceremonies.

Sharp at eight o'clock, the usual procession of graduates and accompanying officials marched on to the stage and took the seats reserved for them. After an opening number by the Irvine orchestra, Rev. Larson began the exercises by delivering the invocation. Ward Sharbach, as salutatorian, gave the great audience a hearty welcome on behalf of the graduating class, after which superintendent Hay introduced the commencement speaker, President J. H. Worst of the College of Agriculture at Fargo, who for over an hour discoursed on the importance of the latest educational movements and tendencies in a manner which carried conviction to his hearers. The speaker delivered some touching remarks to the class, making comment on the preponderance of young men therein. He then addressed himself to the subject on hand and received the closest attention throughout his interesting speech and frequent bursts of applause showed that the audience was in hearty accord with his views. The subject of industrial education was clearly presented in its relation to the ordinary high school courses. At this particular period in the school history of Thief River Falls, when this study is about to be introduced into the local schools, the value of the address is peculiarly significant. At the close of the address, Miss Ida Ove, the class valedictorian, bid the formal farewells to her classmates and to the faculty and presented the thanks of her class to the citizens and board of education in a short speech which was well worded and excellently rendered. President Lars Backe then with a few well chosen words of commendation presented the diplomas. The benediction closed program and permitted relatives and hundreds of friends to come forward and tender their congratulations and gifts.

The exercises were pronouced the most complete and successful ever held in the city and this, in large measure, was occasioned by the size of the class and superior facilities afforded by the Auditorium for carrying out such an event. In closing it should be added that a large, beautiful statue of Minerva, the Greek goddess of wisdom, occupied a prominent place on the stage during the ceremonies and is a gift from the class of 1910 to the board of education. With other similar pieces of statuary presented by former graduating classes, it will adorn the halls and rooms of the new Lincoln High School now under course of erection.

Will Make Snow Hedge.

The Great Northern has started the distribution of several carloads of trees along the right of way between Dugdale and Ebro which will be planted in a narrow strip about three rods wide the distance to serve as a snow hedge. Golden willow are being used to a great extent, and the experiment will be watched very closely with the intention of using trees more generally in the future if the plan proves successful. Over 200,00 trees will be planted and the work will be finished within a month.

Moose Seen East of City.

Farmers living just east of this city were treated to a rare sight last Thursday. A big bull and a cow moose wandered about apparently unconcerned with a herd of dairy cows. The two animals passed between the homes of Pat Moylan and W. O. Long, situated only a few rods apart and apparently became frightened by the whistling of a railroad engine and departed east.

A. W. Clark Exhonorated.

Department of the Interior, General Land Office Duluth, Minnesota, May 21, 1910.

Hon. Page Morris,
Judge, U. S. District Court,
Duluth, Minnesota.

Dear Sir:

Referring to your letter of April 14, 1910, requesting that an investigation be made of certain charges preferred by R. D. V. Carr and E. C. Williams of Middle River, Minnesota, against A. W. Clark, United States Commissioner at Fram, Minnesota, I have the honor to herewith enclose the original report of Special Agent Frank Grygla addressed to me and dated April 27, 1910, including the original affidavits. Special Agent Grygla makes no recommendation but after carefully reading his report I am satisfied that the charges are the result of spite work on behalf of the complaints, and that Mr. Clark is a thoroughly honest and competent officer and is endeavoring to serve the Government faithfully as a United States Commissioner.

Your original correspondence is herewith returned.

Good Advice from an Exchange.

The mother who allows a 16 year old daughter to float around the township in a buggy until 2 a. m. with a counterfeit sport of weak jaw and weaker morals merely opens the front door to grief and disgrace. If you don't know what company your girl keeps or what time of night she turns in, your roar when the gossips get busy will sound as pathetic as the wheeze from a jewsharp. The girl who insists on spooning with everybody in the corporate limits ought to backed into the woodshed and relieved of her excess affection with a No. 11 slipper laid carelessly across the biplets, we had sooner see a girl kiss a blind shote through a barb wire fence than have her change partners six nights a week in the front parlor with the lights turned low. It is harder to marry off a girl who has been pawed over by every yap in the community than it is to fatten a sheep on pineapple ice. You can't gold brick a sharp eyed suitor with second hand goods any more than you can fit a bathrobe on a goat. There are a lot of weakminded parents who are going up against judgment day with about as much show as a cross eyed girl in a beauty show, and their children will rise up and call them blessed with the enthusiasm of a one legged man at club dance. —Ex.

Governor Does Not Remove Officers.

St. Paul, Minn., May 30.— A. A. Latendresse and C. A. Lindquist, members of the county board of Red Lake county, will not be required to answer charges of malfeasance in office.

This was the decision made by Governor Eberhart after considering the complaint filed by Anton Shaefer, public examiner. This was made about a year ago following an examination of the county books by the public examiner. Governor Eberhart has decided that to ask for a hearing would be a useless formality.

The charges alleged that money belonging to the ditch fund had been used in constructing county buildings contrary to law. As soon as the matter was called to the attention of the board members the funds were transferred back to the ditch fund. A site for a courthouse was bought on auditors' warrants on legal advice. The governor finds that there was no intention to violate the law.

"I am advised that officers elected by the people should not be removed for errors of judgment, but only for willful intention to violate or ignore the law," said the governor.

Grace Cameron at the Regina Theatre

Grace Cameron made a great hit in Regina last night. Her beautiful singing was heard to splendid effect and the audience in the Regina Theatre were very loud in their applause for her great talent and she was repeatedly recalled. But whereas her singing was the great feature of the performance, the company supporting her in "Nancy" was excellent and there is no doubt but that the company fully merited all the praise that had been meted out to them. The scenery also was very elaborate.—Regina Morning Leader.

BIG MEET IS PLANNED

Anti-Saloon League to Hold Field Day Meeting Here on Sunday June 19

Many Prominent Speakers from Abroad to Be Present on This Occasion.

The Anti-Saloon League of the State of Minnesota announce that a big field day meeting is to be held in Thief River Falls on Sunday, June 19th. This meeting is to be similiar to those held in other cities in the state. Morning meetings are to be held in the Methodist, Presbyterian, Norwegian Zion Free Lutheran, and Swedish Baptist churches and in the evening a grand mass meeting is to be held in the auditorium at which all of the churches in the city will unite.

Among the most prominent anti-saloon league speakers in the state will be present and it is the intention of those having the affair in charge to make it a big success.

The speakers sure to be in attendance are P. J. Youngdahl, state superintendent of the anti-saloon league, Hon. Elias Rachie, legislative superintendant, C. W. Stark, editor of the Minnesota Issue, and E. L. Quist, secretary of the anti-saloon league.

Willard Provincher Dead.

Willard Provincher, a brother of Julian Provincher, proprietor of the Hotel Evelyn, died last Saturday morning from consumption at the age of 23. Although a resident of this city only a little over a year, the deceased had made many friends here and, his untimely demise is mourned by all. The funeral services were held Monday morning.

Found No Violations Here.

N. J. Soro of Ashland, Wis., who assists Special Agent Johnson of the United States Indian department to look after the government's wards in this part of the country, arrived in Bemidji from the vicinity of Thief River Falls, where he spent a few days investigating the actions of the saloon men in regard to the department's order prohibiting the sale of liquor to the Indians. Mr. Soro found no violations in the neighborhood of Thief River Falls. He stayed in Bemidji over Sunday.—Bemidji Pioneer.

The Typhoid Fly.

Prof. Washburn, chief of the entomological division of the department of Agriculture at St. Anthony Park, says the house fly, better named the typhoid fly, passing the winter as a perfect insect, or as a pupa, now appearing in alarming numbers, is laying her eggs which will hatch into maggots. These reach mature growth in from six to seven days, and after resting about the same time become a perfect fly. It breeds in manure piles, in decaying vegetables, in sewage, in waste from human intestines and in other filth. The typhoid fly does not bite, but sucks or laps up its food in a liquid state, and, crawling over bread, pastry, candy, vegetables and other articles of human foods, infects it with bacteria, which taken into the human system, causes intestinal disorders, typhoid fever, tuberculosis (consumption), &c. This filthy insect is found to be a serious menace to human health by the discovery of disease germs on its feet and body. One hundred thousand bacteria have been found under the microscope on the body of a single fly, known to have been in contact with matter avoided from the human intestine. These flies, crawling over human food, infect it with deadly germs, and inoculate wounds and abrasions on the skin with loathsome disease. It may be the cause of epidemics suddenly appearing in a community for which no reason can be assigned.

The remedies are screened windows and doors, fly paper, sticky or poisoned, doing away with manure heaps, covering the slops, filth, swill barrels, and thru sterilizing of intestinal discharges from patients suffering with typhoid or other fevers, or infectious diseases, before being emptied into sewer or cesspool or otherwise deposited where flies can have access to them. Prof. F. L. Washburn, University Farm, St. Paul, will send without charge bulletins treating upon the eradication of flies and other household insects to all who apply for them.

Memorial Day Exercises.

Memorial Day was celebrated in a very appropriate manner in Thief River Falls on Monday. The exercises were held in the Moylan grove and Supt. J. H. Hay was master of the ceremonies. After a prayer by Rev. Gilchrist, there was music by the band and a male choir, and Ira C. Richardson was the orator of the day. After the exercises were over a procession was formed which marched to Greenwood cemetery where the graves of the old soldiers were decorated.

The names of the old veterans who partook in the Memorial day service are recorded below:

Peter Newman, 8th Wis.
Rudolph Karlen, 9th Wis.
And. Nelson, 16th Wis.
S. T. Johnson, 71th N. Y.

The Conservation of Nature's Resources.

Applies as well to our physical state as to material things. C. J. Budlong, Washington, R. I. realized his condition and took warning before it was too late. He says: "I suffered severely from kidney trouble, the disease being hereditary in our family. I have taken four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and now consider myself thoroughly cured. This should be a warning to all not to neglect taking Foley's Kidney Remedy until it is too late." Sold by all Druggists.

A Square Deal, No. 2.

(Received too late for last week)

It was not my intention to attack in my last article legitimate dealers in realestate. Men who have invested their money in lands and are holding them for a rise. These men have helped to build up the country by showing their good faith and confidence. But there has within the last few years grown up a class of "Land Agents," whose only capital is a $25 education by mail as "Realestate Dealers," and a typewriter. A few letterheads and some cheap advertisements complete their outfit, and they are ready for "land business." They band together with promises of a division of the spoils and prey on incoming settlers by shifty methods that should not be endured. They "List" all a "rake off" of whatever they can get.

Nearly every town in the west has suffered from this band of "bunko steerers," and it was my object to warn the public against them. They work on commission only and speak of "My Commissions," as of something legitimate, when, in fact, they are pure graft. They bring in no settlers of their own efforts but watch the trains and hotels for landseekers and steer the unsuspecting from one "land agent to another until the homeseeker is either buncoed out of his money or leaves the country in disgust.

It is a well known fact that I have been active in bringing in a large number of settlers to Northern Minnesota within the last year, and they are coming in almost every day, largely through my efforts; yet not half of these ever reach Fram. They are bounced upon by men who, I am told, warn them against me and are led off in some other direction and if they settle at all, it is at the expense of one or two, or more, dollars per acre in "commissions" to men who have had nothing to do in bringing the country to their notice.

I am not selling land; have never sold a farm nor received a cent in commission since I have lived here, 10 years. My sole object is to bring in settlers to again occupy this half deserted country. I have an abiding faith in the healthfulness, productiveness and general usefulness of this entire region when it is once drained and good roads made of dirt taken out of the ditches.

It is too long for publication here but, under the heading: "Getting Back To Eden," the May 15th number of Farm, Stock and Home, attacks these "Shyster realestate men," in this wise:

Of all the multifarious schemers who manage to keep the wolf from the door by parting the fool from his money, the shyster realestate men, the Whirling Dervishes of the 'back to the farm' cult easily carry away the belt." Read the article, it will do you good.

Now, I have a plan to cut out of these useless middle men in every town in the west, but as this is already too long, I will reserve it for my next
A. W. Clark.

A Square Deal, No. 3.

In my remarks last week I promised to disclose my plan for eliminating the bunco steerer from legitimate land exchange and put the business on a higher basis. No town but has suffered from these parasites. They talk in millions and look on every homeseeker as a "Come on." They speak of land in sections and townships as if a modest quarter were to be despised.

There should be in every town a Realestate Exchange where the buyer and seller could be brot together at a small cost. This could be managed or established through the Commercial Clubs where the publicity would promote settlement and investment. A column should be hired in the local papers and should from time to time note the exchanges of the week and mention property listed with the exchange for sale, giving location and price. A small fee should be charged for this and all buyers and sellers given a square deal.

The first town to take this up and advertise it, so that people come to understand it, will reap a golden harvest of incoming settlers and investment. Why should your local papers be expected to do all your advertising free? There are many advantages in having all this made into a system. What is everybodys business is nobodys business. One clear headed man is worth more to a town than a whole bunch of yawpers.

A scheme of this kind, run solely in the interest of the public good would in itself be a great advertisement for a town. It would do entirely away with the snide land agent, who could then go back to his "hoss trading" and be of much benefit to that rundown "profession." A. W. Clark.

GREAT FIRE IN MINNEAPOLIS

Blaze Causes Loss of Three-Quarters of a Million.

Twelve buildings were destroyed, causing a loss placed at $750,000; one square block of property was devastated; one man was probably fatally burned; several people narrowly escaped death and the monstrous milling district of Minneapolis was threatened by one of the worst fires in the history of the Twin Cities early Saturday morning.

The fire broke out shortly after 1 o'clock and burned fiercely for three hours.

With the aid of three companies from the St. Paul department the fire was gotten under control at 4 o'clock, although water was thrown on the smouldering ruins for some hours afterward.

The devastated district is mostly within the block bounded by Washington avenue and Third street and Sixth and Seventh avenues south.

Christ Madison may die from injuries sustained when he was caught by the falling roof of the Sixth Avenue hotel. The losses in detail are:

Northern Rock Island Plow company, $200,000.

Great Northern Implement company, $250,000.

These two firms are located in what is known as the Implement building and the losses above are on the stock of the firms only. The building was owned by C. W. Wright of Saginaw, Mich. The loss on the building is $200,000.

The building of the Waterbury Implement company and stock suffered a loss of $100,000.

The remainder of the loss, estimated at $750,000, is divided among a number of property owners in the burned district.

KILLED BY A FINLANDER

Minnesota Settler Shot Through the Heart.

Joe Dillon, aged forty-five years, was shot and instantly killed at his homestead near Hibbing by an unknown Finlander. The news was learned when Dillon's wife arrived at Hibbing and notified the authorities of the murder.

According to the story told by the woman the Finlander entered Dillon's place, where it is alleged that he has been conducting a "blind pig." She says that the visitor insulted her and it was resented. Her husband drew a revolver and threatened to shoot the alleged intruder. The Finlander also was armed and, getting the drop on Dillon, shot him through the heart, killing him instantly. The woman is held by the authorities pending the coroner's inquest.

GOVERNOR EBERHART RILED

Says Officials Who Permitted Prizefight Must Explain.

Governor Eberhart is distinctly against prizefighting within the limits of Minnesota. He said so when a report of a fight at Hibbing was shown him.

"If the report is correct the sheriff must explain how it happened. These contests cannot be permitted to take place in this state and any official who permits them to be pulled off will have difficulty explaining the offense. I shall ask for an explanation of this fight from the sheriff as soon as I have official knowledge of its occurrence."

The fight at Hibbing was held in a theater and went nineteen rounds.

BOATING TRIP ENDS FATALLY

Young Man and Woman Drowned in Lake Pokagema.

A pleasure trip by four young people of Ely ended fatally for two, M. A. Mulvahill and Miss Ruth Bachus drowning in Lake Pokagema when a rowboat in which they were seated overturned in rough water.

The other members of the party, Harley Caldwell and Miss Anna Becker, clung to the overturned boat and drifted ashore, a short distance from the scene of the accident. Miss Becker was overcome by the excitement and the effect of the cold water, but recovered in a few hours.

Coal Oil Explosion Fatal.

Following an explosion caused by pouring kerosene on a fire in a cook stove Mrs Edna Spangl of St. Paul, twenty three years old, received burns from which she died several hours later. Mrs. Spangl was heating some water in the kitchen of her home for a little son who is ill with diphtheria. The fire was not burning well so she poured some coal oil on it, and an explosion followed enveloping her in flames.

Drowned Trying to Save Hat.

Frank Fitzgerald of Minneapolis, thirty years of age, was drowned at Haffan, Hennepin county. He was fishing and his hat blew off. He jumped in the water after it and got cramps before reaching the hat. He was drowned before boats could reach him.

While not ranking with California or Florida in the production of oranges, Louisiana produced 141,700 boxes in 1909.

There were imported into the United States in 1909 1,470,031 bushels of flax seed as compared with 44,731 bushels in 1908.

Russia is one of the leading sugar beet producing countries, her output for 1909 being 7,562,854 tons as compared with 9,257,854 tons for the preceding year.

The flock of hens appreciate shade in hot weather just as do folks and other animals. If there are no trees in the yard a few sunflowers protected while young from the hens will answer the purpose well.

The slugs that pester the rosebushes may be easily put out of business by sprinkling the vines with white hellebore when the dew is on or with just plain fine road dust, which is cheaper and will insure the same results.

There is hardly any article in common use that is more easily or more often adulterated than paint. In case a make of paint cannot be secured which one knows to be reliable or which a reputable dealer will guarantee as such one has the recourse of buying white lead and oil and doing his own mixing. This will require some care, but it will give a paint which will afford the most possible satisfaction.

Exhaustive investigations which have been made into the matter of tuberculosis among food producing animals by the bureau of animal industry place the annual loss from this one disease to the stock raising interests of the country at $24,000,000. These same investigations prove conclusively that bovine tuberculosis is easily communicated to human beings and that cows which are sleek and apparently healthy may be far advanced in the disease and a positive menace to the health of all who consume their milk.

Carrying out its purpose of protecting the fauna of the country and of making special studies of those birds and animals which may be of economic value to man, the United States department of agriculture has recently issued as farmers' bulletin No. 390 the results of its recent investigations into pheasant raising. The bulletin contains a concise account of the methods used by many pheasant raisers, including propagation, care of the young birds, protection from enemies, housing, feeding and marketing, as well as other interesting and practical phases of the industry. The treatise may be obtained through one's senator or representative or by making request of the department of agriculture at Washington.

"The Economic Use of Meats In the Home" is the caption of a bulletin lately put out by the agricultural department at Washington. The treatise has been prepared for the especial benefit of the housewife, who, with prices for the best cuts of meat which have prevailed, has had a problem on her hands to provide the family with an economic and satisfactory meat ration. It takes up general methods of preparing meats, the utilizing of cheaper cuts in palatable dishes, as well as other matters of interest. At the close of the bulletin are given fifty recipes for savory meat dishes collected from a wide range and suited to the needs of the average home. The bulletin will be forwarded free to any who may make request of the agricultural department at Washington.

That the feeding of silage to dairy cows in large quantities does not seriously affect the quality of milk was demonstrated by a test made by the Illinois experiment station not long ago. Samples of silage and nonsilage milk were tasted by some 300 members of the faculty and student body, including eighty-one ladies. In all 62 per cent preferred the silage milk, 20 per cent preferred the nonsilage milk, while the remainder had no preference. Samples of the silage and nonsilage milk were submitted to five dairy experts in several large cities, and of these one had no choice, one preferred the nonsilage milk, while three preferred the silage milk. The cows which produced the silage milk used in this test were given forty pounds of silage a day, which is considerably in excess of the ration usually fed.

While melons will do well on a great variety of soils, they seem to flourish best on a mellow, friable loam which has been well enriched with barnyard manure. About a dozen seeds should be planted to the hill, the planting being delayed until danger of frost is past. When the young vines have got past the striped beetle stage the plants should be thinned to three or four in a hill. Like all other growing things, melons will do best if given frequent cultivation with both wheel cultivator and with hoe, which will insure a moist and mellow condition of the soil. If the melon patch is so large that it is not feasible to protect the hills from the striped beetle by means of shallow frames covered with mosquito netting the bug may be put out of business by spraying the vines with arsenate of lead at the rate of about half a pound to twelve gallons of water. This may be applied with fair pressure by a hand sprayer, the nozzle of which should be so adjusted that some of the poison will be lodged on the underside of the leaves where the beetle often works. The size of the melons may be increased by restricting those on a single vine to two or three.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd, 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

Ed Smith last week took the oath and was sworn in as lieutenant governor. There has been a suspicion that the genial Ed was governor and we are glad to learn that he is only a lieutenant.

The Ballinger inquiry will not, according to a statement sent out from Washington, cost the country more than $15,000. Still, there are people who will not regard it as a bargain even at that price.

Reports from St. Paul are to the effect that Andy Stephens, of Crookston, was down there last week and made a new slate, deciding to advance what candidates the counties in the Northwestern part of the state would support. Andy is a good slate maker, but he is going to fold down when he attempts to deliver the goods.

Over at Elk River the farmers got to selling their milk and cream to a centralizer, who paid a good price until the creamery was compelled to shut down, says the Delano Eagle. No sooner had the padlock been put on the creamery door than the centralizer put the price down several notches. Then a howl went up and several farmers proceeded to ship to another centralizer, but found they were up against a combination that was hard to beat. Now they are making an effort to get their creamery started again.

A L Thompson, of Mahnomen, was in Twin Valley on business Saturday and made the Times office a pleasant call. Mr. Thompson has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the Republican nomination for representative from Norman and Mahnomen counties, but in his conversation with us stated that he had not fully made up his mind whether to enter the race or not. Mr. Thompson would make a valuable member in the House.—Twin Valley Times.

Inasmuch as Norman county will have the senator, it would be very hoggish to ask for the representative also. Mr. Thompson is the unanimous choice of Mahnomen county and he should receive the nomination and election without opposition. He is a man of ability and would be one of the leaders of the house.

It must tickle a good many farmers to read in the papers they are responsible for existing high prices, and when a little farther down the column the city man tells them they ought to raise more grain and vegetables and sell them for less money, the farmers "haw haw" can be heard from corrall to the far end of the alfalfa field, says the Field and Farm. Let the town merchant accept the same advice. Let him double his stock and sell the $9.98 suits for $7.89. Tell Mr. Hill, the big railroad man, to build more railroads and charge excursion rates every day. Of course, that would not do, but the merchant and railroad owners are becoming richer every day and no one ever heard of a farmer making anything like a million or a half a million or a quarter of a million from the products of his fields. Every sure enough rancher earns the highest price for whatever he has to sell, and if he has reached that place where he can take advantage of the market his house must be on Prosperity avenue.—Frazee Free Press.

LAND CONDITIONS IN THE WEST.

The Public in a late issue makes mention of recent investigations in the state of California, and remarks:

"Only thirty-five owners, it appears, hold one seventh of all the area of that great state. Their holdings range from 20,000 acres to 14,500,000 each. Holdings of 100,000, 200,000 and 400,000 appear in the list between those extremes. This disclosure is only a sample of the land monoply that prevails, not only in California but throughout the west and also in the east. Will the contended apologist for things as they are, kindly reflect upon the condition? what his disinterested posterity will think of him for silently permitting their inheritance to slip away from them before they are born. Let him ask himself, too, what they ought to think of him for this."

"Nor is this all. Less than ten per cent of the entire area of the state, according to government statistics, is actually in use agriculturally, and it is clear to any thinking person that these immense tracts are not the naturally waste land of a mountainous region, but are the desirable agricultural lands of the state, held either in absolute or essential idleness, awaiting the time when the demand for land shall force the would-be-owners to pay a monopolistic price for a home. Let us not be misunderstood. F., S. & H. believes that, all things considered, the large farm is better than the small, because it can be more economically handled. One chief reason for the prosperity of the northwest is its broad acres and large income per family. But when the farm becomes so large that part of it lies idle, or is but partially tilled, as is the case with a majority of our farms at the present day, then the danger line has been crossed. With us the problem of utilizing the waste acres is one that will readily be solved, but that we are spendthrifts of our acreage there can be no denial.

While the size of the farm must ever be a relative matter, dependent upon population on the one hand and the maximum of individual profit on the other, the idle tract of land, whether in Minnesota or California, held by the speculator for a rise in values, is essentially the same thing as the idle body of coal, held out of use in order to enhance the selling price of the present day output.

Viewed from the standpoint of the man who believes land to be scarce, the hue and cry after land is natural enough; but if that now held for purely speculative purposes were thrown onto the market there would be another story. We have taken into private hands more than we can properly handle, either in this generation or the next. The trouble with us as a people is not land-hunger, but land gluttony.

Ex: A town may by a sprut or two acquire a reputation as a live town and all that goes with it, but it is a sure shot that one little season of hustle will not necessarily suffice for all time to come. It is necessary for a town that wants to attract trade and hold it, to keep wide awake every minute of the time and not let anything remain undone that will look to the betterment of the conditions and unless it does this, there will come a reckoning day and the reputation will go abroad that greed has usurped enterprise and hustle. Business men who put only their personal feeling and interests ahead of else, soon kill a town, and there must be some sacrifice on the part of all if things are to be kept moving.

Hunt Gives Candidates Good Advice.

It seems to be awful quiet among candidates for county office. We guess none of them like to mention it for fear some one will ask them, how they stand on county division. Take our advice gentlemen and don't try to play both ends, for if you do you are sure to fall through the middle.—Sunbeam.

New Bank Is Open.

The State Bank of Holt started doing business yesterday. Holt is fast becoming one of the important trade centers on the north line, and will be a great convenience to the business men and farmers of that section. Oscar Sponheim, of this city, is president of this new financial institution and D. B. Bakke is vice-president. S. S. Kolden, the Holt merchant, is cashier, but the actual duties will be performed by Bertile Backe, of this city, who is assistant cashier. A new building has been erected for the bank's home and it promises to be a very successful institution.

What A Summer Cold May Do.

A summer cold if neglected is just as apt to develop into bronchitis or pneumonia as at any other season. Do not neglect it. Take Foley's Honey and Tar promptly. It loosens the cough, soothes and heals the inflamed air passages, and expels the cold from the system." Sold by all Druggists.

Equine Flight.

It has been said, and justly, that wonders never cease—for each day brings to notice something new—but it has been left to the proprietors of the large circuses to scheme and plan, invent and produce novel features that are beyond the wildest dreams of imagination, and to accomplish the seeming impossible.

When the Airship was recently perfected it was thought that the ingenuity of man could devise nothing greater than to make the air navigable—but it was left for Dode Fisk to accomplish a still greater wonder, that of sending a horse on a cruise in an airship.

It is beyond human belief that this is done—but one has only to witness this most sensational of the world's greatest triumph of wonders to be convinced.

Mercury, the Airship horse, Aviating Equine Feature with the great Dode Fisk Shows, makes a sensational ascension twice daily with bewildering pyrotechnic display, making this the most extraordinary feature ever presented by an Amusement Organization in America.—Thief River Falls, Friday June 10th.

Scared Into Sound Health.

Mr. B. F. Kelley, Springfield, Ill., writes: "A year ago I began to be troubled with my kidneys and bladder, which grew worse until I became alarmed at my condition. I suffered also with dull heavy headaches and the action of my bladder was annoying and painful. I read of Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them a few weeks the headaches left me, the action of my bladder was again normal, and I was free of distress."—Sold by all Druggists.

Reasons Why You Should Buy Our Land
In the Sunny,
Fertile State of DURANGO

MEXICO

WE OWN 190,000 ACRES OF AS GOOD LAND AS YOU CAN FIND IN MEXICO.

We will sell you 40 acres of this land for $350 that will be worth $700 October 1, 1910, and $1,000 before October 1, 1911.

We will give with each 40-acre sale a free lot in the town of Conejos, which is one of the important shipping points on the Mexican Central railroad and the end of a division on a branch road running from Conejos to Escubadora.

This land of ours is covered with the best kind of succulent grass for grazing purposes and cattle fatten on it quicker than in the best grazing sections of the United States.

Adjoining this land of ours Mexican farmers grow wheat harvesting 60 bushels to the acre this year, corn that is 12 to 15 feet high, Irish potatoes 10 inches long, sweet potatoes 7 to 10 pounds, cabbages as big as pumpkins, Bermuda onions of great size and finest quality---in fact, they grow every northern cereal and vegetable, and all southern vegetables and fruits except lemons and oranges.

Peaches, pears, grapes, cherries, apples, apricots, strawberries, canteloupes and peanuts thrive prodigously on our land.

Intensified farming can be followed with amazing success and wonderful profits on our land, which is covered with a volcanic loam soil to a depth of 6 to 18 feet.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine says that American capital exceeding a billion dollars is invested in Mexican industries. Doesn't this fact tell you something?

Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, reports that it has between 6 and 7 million dollars invested in Mexico and that its principal holdings are in the vicinity of Torreon, Merico, which is 56 miles south of our lands. He says: "We think well of our Mexican holdings and as business justifies we will increase them."

American farmers are the logical agriculturists to develope the tremendous resources of the crop producing lands in Mexico. Why not join the band of colonists that is increasing by thousands every year?

In selecting lands we chose the highlands of the state of Durango because there you can grow anything grown in Minnesota and in double and treble quantities.

The climate is the real thing--it is always cool and never gets cold. You require a blanket nights; you never need an overcoat. The air is purity itself. Average yearly temperature less than 70 deg. Fahrenheit

Rain comes in the seasons when the crop grows best. Planting starts in April and crops grow with such rapidity that harvests are two months ahead of Minnesota. Rainfall in four months is between 25 and 30 inches, all that is needed to insure a perfect crop and a bountiful harvest.

You can surely afford 25c an acre a month, and that's all you need to pay per acre on the farm you buy.

Send to us for free literature and pictures on postcards of views on our lands. By arrangement with the Thief River Falls News w are able to offer you a coupon with this ad worth $10. Mail or deliver it to Colby & Davis at Hotel Evelyn.

Gustaf Peterson, a Stockholm thief, who was arrested a few days ago for stealing bicycles, has confessed that he has stolen during the past year not less than 200 bicycles. It seems that he has been making a specialty of dealing in bicycles in this style on large scale. As soon as he had stolen a machine of this description he shipped it to some other city, representing himself to be a bicycle manufacturer. He admits that he has been making good money lately. He has also employed other persons to assist him.

Bishop Gezelius von Scheele, a prominent bishop and church leader in Sweden, will visit America next month and will make a tour of the Western cities. He will be present at the fiftieth anniversary of the Augustana synod at Rock Island, Ill., and will also visit Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis and on his way will appear in several cities in the East. This will be the third time that the bishop has visited America. It is not understood that he is coming this time in any official capacity.

General Booth, on his eighty-first birthday, which he celebrated recently in London, was the recipient of the following telegram from Dowager Queen Sofia of Sweden: "As I have just learned that you are celebrating your eighty-first birthday I hereby send you my heartiest congratulations, thanking God for having placed you in a position to perform such a great work, and especially do I thank God for what you have done for Sweden."

The "Helsingborg Dagblad" says in a recent issue: "The other day a representative of this paper met young Kermit Roosevelt in Stockholm. He was a fine young man; bright and unassuming. He seemed greatly interested in the Olympian games that are to be held here in 1912 and said that he would try and be present on that occasion and that he hoped the Americans would carry off the biggest share of the prizes."

Editor Gustaf Gullberg of the Stockholm Tidning, who has been seriously ill, is now very much better and has gone to a bathing resort in Germany, where he hopes to regain his former good health. Mr. Gullberg, who is justly regarded as one of Stockholm's ablest newspaper men, has been in the harness for thirty years and hosts of his friends in Stockholm hope that he will come back in good health.

Princess Ingrid was baptized in the chapel of the royal palace May 5. A number of diplomats and members of the riksdag were present. All the members of the royal family who were in Stockholm attended. The officiating prelate was Bishop Billing. Fifty salutes were given from Skeppsholmen.

The Stockholm breweries have pooled their interests and they are reported to have an aggregate capital of something like 19,000,000 crowns. The breweries which are in the combine are the Munchen, Pilsner, Stora Bryggeriet and Gustaf Piehl brewery.

Count C. A. Ehrensvard, head of the navy department, has tendered his resignation. Count Ehrensvard has held this position since 1907 and has made a good chief of his department. He was born in 1858 and was made a commander of the fleet in 1905.

The busts of Fryxell and Wieselgren were unveiled at Humlegarden, the famous Stockholm park, on May 12. There was a large gathering on this occasion and the address at the unveiling was delivered by the young crown prince.

The German church in Stockholm is undergoing a thorough renovation, which will entail an expenditure of 97,000 crowns. There are a large number of German people in Stockholm who are attending service in this edifice.

Lektor Waldenstrom will not visit America this summer, as he had planned. His advanced age will prevent him from making the long journey.

"The recent action," says the Minneapolis Journal in a recent editorial, "of the Norwegian odelsthing in granting municipal suffrage to all women over twenty-five years of age means that the number of women electors in the kingdom will be increased from 270,000 to 530,000 in the next elections. Since 1907 women have been allowed to vote under the same conditions as men only when they have paid an income tax of 400 crowns in the towns or 300 crowns in the country. The vote in the odelsthing was so heavily for the change that the lagthing is not likely to reject the measure. The practice in the Norwegian parliament, or storthing, is unique. The members are elected by popular vote from the various districts. The storthing, when it convenes annually, divides itself into two houses, the lagthing, made up of one-fourth the members, and the odelsthing, made up of three-fourths. The two houses sit separately, but when a measure passed by one is rejected by the other it is taken up in joint session, where a two-thirds majority may pass it. In the present storthing there is one woman member and it is likely that the next one will see many more. The Norwegian women take far more interest in politics than do the American women. Having proved their interest by taking every advantage of their voting privileges heretofore they have now won complete municipal suffrage.

Two Norwegian-Americans in Chicago were signally honored by King Haakon recently at a banquet held in honor of the Norwegian minister at Washington, Ove Gude. The recipients of the honor, for which it is said a Norseman would give his life, were Dr. Niles T. Quayles and Emil Bjorn. The two were made Knights of St. Olaf by special warrant of King Haakon of Norway—the doctor for philanthropic and charitable works and Bjorn for his work in organizing Norwegian singing and literary societies and in teaching all that is near and dear to the heart of Norway.

The Norwegian plans for an independent American line of steamers are approaching something that is getting to look tangible. Stock amounting to at least 3,000,000 crowns has been subscribed and the committee appointed by the government to investigate the project will report within a short time. As soon as this committee has presented its report there will be something more definite to report in regard to this much talked of enterprise.

The "Aftenposten" and the Central theater of Christiania, in honor of Bjornson's funeral, erected a large arch, which was beautifully decorated with Norwegian flags and other appropriate emblems. Unfortunately the whole thing caught fire from an electric wire and shortly before the funeral procession was to pass the whole thing was destroyed by the flames.

The body of Bjornstjerne Bjornson has been buried in Our Saviour's cemetery in Christiania under a tall poplar about 100 meters from the grave of Henrik Ibsen, right between Ibsen's and Gude's monuments. The grave is surrounded by beautiful shrubberies and flowers. A national monument will be erected over the grave of the famous poet and novelist.

A singular theft was committed in Christiania the other night when thieves broke into the National museum and stole about seventy-five of the most interesting pieces in the large historic collection there, such as old time medals, gold bracelets, rings, etc. The value of the articles are estimated at not less than 5,000 crowns.

Consul General Axel Conrad of Christiania, who recently passed away, had attained an age of sixty years. He became an attorney in 1866 and entered the consular service in 1905. A few years ago he resigned from his position and has not been doing any active work during the past two years.

The Baptists of Norway have arranged to celebrate their golden jubilee. It is just fifty years since they sent their missionaries into Scandinavia. The net results are forty churches and 3,300 members. The Baptist church is making slow but sure progress in both Norway and Sweden.

Norway's representative in Stockholm, Paul Benjamin Vogt, has been appointed Norwegian ambassador at London. The appointment is a popular one and Mr. Vogt goes to London with considerable experience, having been in the diplomatic service for a good many years.

Bjornson has for many years received a stipend of 1,600 crowns. This sum will now be given to his wife as long as she lives.

A daughter of the famous Danish author and poet, Ohlenschlager, died the other day at an advanced age at her home in Copenhagen. At an early age she became the wife of the Norwegian author, Wollert Konow, and lived for a time in Bergen, Norway. After her husband's death, which occurred in Bergen, she returned to Copenhagen. Her only son is the Norwegian secretary of state.

The Danish government has, through its consul in Chicago, Herr Beck, begun to make investigations regarding the export to Denmark of American horse meat. It is claimed that horse meat has been shipped to Denmark in large quantities and that it has been served at the restaurants for years.

The memorial service which was held at the Dagmar theater a few evenings ago was attended by at least 2,000 people. Professor Wilhelm Anderson delivered the address of the evening.

Over 200 bicycles were stolen in Copenhagen last year. It seems that it has grown to be a sort of legitimate theft to have "bikes" change owners in the Danish capital.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

In a fit of insane jealous rage Patrick J. Gibbons, a prominent live stock commission merchant of South St. Paul, shot and instantly killed his wife, Nellie McGowan Gibbons, and a few minutes later also shot and killed Father E. J. Walsh, pastor of St. Augustine Catholic church, South St. Paul, afterward giving himself up to the police. Gibbons, who has been a well known resident of South St. Paul for almost twenty years, had been for the past week in a Minneapolis sanitarium.

Oliver Spitzer, a man whose conscience hurt him, returned to New York like a specter from the grave and, with a pardon from the president in his pocket, gave sensational testimony at the trial of Charles R. Heike, secretary and treasurer of the American Sugar Refining company, who, with five subordinates, is charged with conspiracy to defraud the government out of millions of dollars in underweights of sugar imports.

The startling declaration that Dallas C. Byers, millionaire manufacturer and indicted grafter, who was supposed to have died in France last August and whose funeral was held in Pittsburg months ago, is really alive and enjoying life in a secluded French village, has been made at Pittsburg.

J. Howard Duvall, twenty-seven years old, was arrested at Canton, O., charged with embezzling $5,473 from the Mineral City bank, of which he formerly was cashier. He is alleged to have lost money through unfortunate timber speculations.

Because she refused recently to give her age to the census taker Miss Sarah E. Peck, head of the normal department of Union college, Lincoln, Neb., has been indicted by the United States grand jury.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Twelve buildings were destroyed, causing a loss of more than $750,000, one square block of property was devastated, one man was probably fatally burned, several people narrowly escaped death and the monstrous milling district of Minneapolis was threatened by one of the worst fires in the history of the Twin Cities. The principal losers were the Northern Rock Island Plow company, the Great Northern Implement company and the Waterbury Implement company.

The big steel steamer Frank H. Goodyear of the Mitchell Transportation company lies in forty fathoms of water in Lake Huron, about thirty-five miles off Point Aux Barques, and probably eighteen of its seamen have met watery graves, following a collision between that vessel and the steamer James R. Woods, another steel boat belonging to the Gilchrist Transportation company.

Lydia, aged nine years, and Leila, aged sixteen, daughters of Charles H. Bonesteel of Huron, S. D., and Jessie Broe, aged fifteen, living with her parents on a farm near Lake Byron, near Huron, were drowned in Lake Byron while boating.

Rain has subdued the forest fires in Western Canada which have caused losses to lumber companies and others of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

In a letter to the public calling attention to the reappearance of infantile paralysis in Minnesota the state board of health officially issues a warning to the people of the state and offers suggestions concerning the prevention and treatment of the disease. In the statement of the board parents are urged to watch the diet of children, to see that children do not take excessive exercise, to keep them off the streets and to keep the streets sprinkled, to prevent the exposure of children to the disease and to take steps to care for the sick children.

Minnesota is likely to have ten congressmen to elect in 1912, instead of the present quota of nine. While nothing but estimates are available for the census just taken it is certain Minnesota will show a good percentage of gain in population over ten years ago and if there is any material increase in the membership of the lower house of congress this state will benefit.

Senator Edward T. Smith of Minneapolis was sworn in last week as lieutenant governor of Minnesota. Senator Smith, as president of the state senate, became lieutenant governor in fact upon the death of Governor John A. Johnson, when Lieutenant Governor Eberhart succeeded to the governorship. He did not take the oath at that time.

A wonderful growth of population in the thirty northern counties will be shown by the federal census returns. W. R. Mackenzie, secretary of the Development association, says: "Judging by information received from conservative and reliable sources I expect that the thirty counties will show an increase of 50 per cent over the census of 1900."

Minneapolis and St. Paul municipal finances are cleanly and honestly cared for by the city officials, according to Anton Schaefer, public examiner. The public examiner makes a full investigation of the finances and bookkeeping of both cities once each year and he says the Twin Cities are free from graft.

There were 6,168 fires in Minnesota during 1909, according to the third annual report of State Fire Marshal Edward Peterson. Of this number 863 were in the Twin Cities. The total loss during the year, including the conflagration at Chisholm, was $14,000,000.

The law of 1909, which compels perin the lumber country, is unconstituin the lumber country, is unconstitutional according to a ruling of a justice of the peace in Beltrami county.

A demand for an increase of wages of approximately 8 per cent has been granted employes of the Minneapolis flour mills in all departments.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Samuel Thompson, the farmhand who robbed John Thompson, a farmer residing near Lewiston, Winona county, of $500 hog money in February and who was caught at Pardeeville, Wis., after a trip to Norway, entered a plea of guilty to grand larceny in the second degree. He was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence at the St. Cloud reformatory.

William Capstick, employed as foreman on drilling and blasting at the Adams mine at Eveleth, was drowned at Moon lake. He was with John Peterson in a boat fishing and in some manner fell out. Peterson jumped in to save him. Capstick weighed 225 pounds and Peterson, who weighs only 150 pounds, could give little aid.

Charles D. Hall of St. Paul began a term of eight years in the state prison at Stillwater within a few hours after being found guilty in Stillwater of participating with Louis Spero in blowing the Wildwood pavilion safe last August. Spiro drew six years.

Joseph L. Drey of Breckenridge, this state, was killed on a pile driver west of Wahpeton, N. D. His foot became caught in the wheel of the engine on the driver and he was whirled and pounded to death before the engine could be stopped.

Raymond Cook, four-year-old son of Claude Cook of South Park, a suburb of St. Paul, was run down by a street car and received injuries which may prove fatal.

Severt Hermann, formerly a cutter in a clothing house at Minneapolis, committed suicide at Spring Valley by drowning in a foot of water.

Paul Fournier, on trial at Aitkin for the murder of Miss Aagot Dahl, a homesteader of Beltrami county, has been acquitted.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Word has been received at St. Paul by Stephen C. Cook of the sudden death of his father, John B. Cook, president of Cook's Transfer company and one of the oldest residents of St. Paul, in Alameda, Cal. Mr. Cook, although he was in his ninety-third year, was apparently as healthy as a man of half his age and he made the trip West alone.

Rev. Father Michael Cauley, pastor of the Catholic congregation at St. Wendel, Stearns county, died at St. Cloud following an operation.

Frank W. Farman, senior member of the firm of Forman, Ford & Co. of Minneapolis, is dead. He was seventy-five years of age

W. D. McCall, for fifteen years bread and milk inspector at Minneapolis, is dead after a brief illness.

President Taft has appointed his private secretary, Fred Warner Carpenter of Sauk Center, this state, as minister to Morocco to succeed H. Percival Dodge. No successor has been chosen by the president to succeed Mr. Carpenter, but it is likely he will appoint Rudolph Forster, the present assistant secretary.

KILLS WIFE AND PRIEST

South St. Paul Man Commits Double Murder.

In a fit of insane jealous rage Patrick J. Gibbons, a prominent live stock commission merchant of South St. Paul, shot and instantly killed his wife, Nellie McGowan Gibbons, and a few minutes later also shot and killed Father E. J. Walsh, pastor of St. Augustine Catholic church, South St. Paul, afterward giving himself up to the police.

Gibbons, who has been a well known resident of South St. Paul for almost twenty years, had been for the past week in Minneapolis at the Lawrence sanitarium. He telephoned his wife to go to Minneapolis to return home with him. They made the return trip on a street car in company with one of the attendants from the sanitarium.

At South St. Paul the attendant was left at the hotel, and the couple went to their home in the west part of the town. Within fifteen minutes after they had reached home Gibbons had shot his wife twice, then leaving her body lying on the kitchen floor he reentered the buggy in which they had driven from the street car and drove directly to the residence of Father Walsh, which is immediately in the rear of St. Augustine church.

He called the priest to the door, and after a few moments' excited conversation fired two shots, both of which took effect in the head of his victim. As the priest staggered and fell through the door leading from the hall to his study Gibbons calmly walked out of the house and went to the police station, where he gave himself up.

FIVE FIRMS BURNED OUT

Serious Blaze Near Minnesota State University.

Fire on University avenue, southeast, at Minneapolis, about five blocks from the state university, did $120,000 worth of damage. The firms affected by the fire are the S. L. Mantenfel Refrigerating company, the Russell Grader Machinery company, the M. H. Strand company, the Van Tilbery Oil company, the Harris Store House company and E. J. Kimball, owner of the properties in which the first three companies had their plants.

The flames were fanned by a high northeast wind and spread rapidly. The buildings nearby were dry frame structures and offered no resistance to the fire. In a short time the flames had spread throughout the entire block. The university was alarmed and the entire body of students forsook their classes and rushed to the scene of the fire.

LEDBETER CASES DROPPED

No Further Prosecution of Woman Accused of Murder.

The indictment against Mrs. Grace Ledbeter and William Schwandt and his wife, Goldie Schwandt, are to be dismissed in the district court of Blue Earth county when the June term opens on June 6.

This was decided upon by the county board after consulting with County Attorney Plymat and Special Assistant County Attorney H. L. Schmitt. The two latter advised the board that the decision of the supreme court in Mrs. Ledbeter's cases makes it impossible to proceed against her further under the indictment charging murder in the second degree and that there is a lack of evidence against her to secure a conviction on the charge of being an accessory after the fact.

If the piece of willow grub land continues to send up shoots from the old roots they should be hoed off or mowed down as fast as they appear, preferably the former. If the roots are kept from developing leaf systems during one season they will give no further trouble.

Rundown trees, like rundown folks, now and then need a tonic, and their condition (the trees') can often be materially improved by spading the ground about the roots and applying a good mulch of manure, while during the dry weather an occasional watering will help materially.

Scrub dairy sires have no place on farms where sufficient progress in the dairy business has been made to install the cream separator and the Babcock tester, yet now and then a fellow gets an economical streak and cuts up this very shindy. The scrub sire has no place in any section where brains and prudence are the agricultural guides.

Many of the owners of the big poultry ranches at Petaluma, Cal., where more poultry is raised and more eggs are produced than in any corresponding section of the country, make a business, among other things, of hatching chicks by the thousand and selling them when a few days old. These little fellows are put in a comfortable and safe receptacle and are shipped to their designation by express, fetching about 10 cents apiece.

The painting of the trunks of the orchard trees with a good lime wash in which several pounds of salt and a few ounces of carbolic acid have been mixed will not only improve the condition of the bark and kill insect pests, but by reflecting the rays of the sun will tend to prevent sun scald. Carefully slacked stone lime should be used for the purpose, this being diluted to the consistency of paint after the slacking process is completed.

Size in fruit or vegetable is usually the result of limiting considerably the quantity or number produced. Prize winning tomatoes are secured by growing a thrifty vine and then restricting the fruit it is allowed to produce to two or three. In the same way big melons and squashes are the result of snipping off all but one or two blossoms, fertilizing the vines heavily and covering the joints which touch the earth with soil, when new root systems are developed which aid in the feeding of the plants. As soon as the desired fruit or vegetable is set the vines should be so pruned as to throw the whole strength of the plant into them.

With the price of concentrates—bran, oilmeal and the like—soaring to between $28 and $40 a ton, especial interest attaches to the raising on the home lands of feeds which can take the place of these high priced stuffs. The best substitutes are the legumes—alfalfa for the drier sections west and southwest, the clovers for the northern and eastern states (alfalfa where it will do well) and cowpeas and soy beans for those sections of the south where the rainfall is so heavy as to seriously interfere with the proper curing of alfalfa. The problem of providing a cheaper ration can be simplified if the silo is installed, which will mean the carrying of a maximum amount of stock on a minimum acreage.

The several blights that attack potato vines during the muggy midsummer weather are of fungous origin and may be prevented or checked by spraying the field with bordeaux mixture, which is easily made by taking a small amount of quicklime, slaking it to a fine paste and diluting it in half the volume of water needed for the spraying. With this should be mixed a solution made by dissolving an equal number of pounds of copper sulphate in a like amount of water. For instance, if one wished twenty gallons of the spray mixture two pounds of stone lime should be slaked and diluted to ten gallons of water and two pounds of bluestone in ten gallons and these two mixed. If potato beetles are on the vines they may be disposed of in the same spraying operation by adding about two ounces of paris green to twenty gallons of the bordeaux or a little less than a pound of commercial arsenate of lead.

A Kentucky farmer who has reported his experience recently speaks favorably of the wild sweet clover as a farm crop, the variety so often seen growing in unlikely places along roadsides, railroad cuts or in abandoned stone quarries or gravel pits. He finds it an excellent renovator for wornout soils and for subduing rough places on his farm which have been pre-empted by weeds and briers. He harrows the land in the spring so as to give a good seed bed and sows from fifteen to twenty pounds of seed per acre with half a bushel of oats. To produce seed he sows fifteen pounds per acre on fertile land. For fall seeding he prepares the land and sows in October. To be used for hay he finds that sweet clover should be cut when the first blossoms appear, before the stalks become woody. He also reports that the sweet clover is an excellent crop with which to precede alfalfa, as it keeps the land free from weeds and inoculates the soil with the bacterial life necessary for the best development of the alfalfa plant.

In many markets clean eggs are worth from 3 to 5 cents per dozen more than dirty. In this respect, owing to the failure of so many to gather eggs when strictly fresh, an immense amount is lost by the egg producers of the country.

When the new growth of raspberry canes has reached the desired length it is well to snip or cut off the terminal shoot. This will make a much stalkier bush and will also result in the development of many strong lateral shoots, which will bear much larger quantities of fruit next year as a result of the pruning operation.

The latest thing in the shape of an anti-trust proceeding is a movement which bids fair to be started against the California Fruit Growers' Exchange as an organization in restraint of trade. Considering the fact that the railroads and commission men seem to be back of the proposed action, the affair can hardly be viewed in any other light than highly amusing, whatever the real merits of the situation may prove to be.

Many a high lifed and valuable team of horses has been ruined by coming into the hands of an impatient and hot headed owner, who has not understood animal traits or taken the pains to use kindness when nothing else would serve the purpose as well. A horse should be made to recognize its owner or driver as its master. But there is nothing in this idea that conflicts with using good sense in the handling of it.

It is a pretty dull child that does not know by two years of age whether it or its parent is master of the situation so far as family discipline is concerned. It is not a pleasant thing to have a settlement with a child, but if this is done as it should be it will often prevent a great deal of worry and annoyance as well as be of great benefit to the child. Force of character, dignity and consistency in discipline are the factors that are chiefly needed.

The Danish Co-operative Egg Export association awards annually premiums for the best managed and most profitable poultry flocks. Last season the flock winning first prize consisted of sixty-three Brown Italians. Their feed consisted of wheat, oats, bran, ground bone, beets, hay sweepings and a small amount of barley meal, oatmeal and biscuits. The hens averaged 158 eggs each for the year, and the receipts from all sources were such as to give a net profit per hen of $1.93. Besides a yard and garden, the hens had the range of a pasture and were given liberal feeds of chopped greens.

The other day we saw a pear orchard which its owner had started to head close to four feet high, the trees having the appearance of slender whipstocks with tufts of feathers at the tip. In a section where the prevailing summer winds are from one quarter this will mean that all of the tree will have to be staked up to be kept in an upright position, and this at best will be a boggled up job. Later on as they come into bearing it is questionable if there will be sufficient strength of trunk to bear the fruit without breaking down. In this instance the situation is aggravated because all the lower buds on the trees have been snipped off, so that the growing of a lower headed tree is well nigh impossible.

The chestnut blight, a fungous growth known as the black knot variety, threatens the ultimate destruction of virtually all the groves of native chestnut trees in the north Atlantic states unless methods can be adopted to hold in check or eradicate the pest. This particular blight spreads by means of spores, these being carried by birds, by squirrels and sometimes by the wind. The spores or seeds get a foothold and develop in the cambium layer, which is located just beneath the outer bark. So far no effective means has been discovered for checking the disease, though it has been suggested by those making a study of the question that felling all of the chestnut trees in a five mile zone encircling the affected area might prove a barrier to the spread of the disease, as it would give the fungus nothing on which to subsist. So far as known, the chestnut is the only tree affected by this particular pest.

While a sour soil may be indicated by a refusal of the clover family to grow thereon, the question may be easily and accurately determined by making a test with blue litmus paper. This may be got at any drug store and is inexpensive. A boring should be made with a two inch auger in the part of the field which shows most evidence of sourness and two good sized balls made of the earth obtained near the surface and of that ten or twelve inches down. These balls should be split and strips of the litmus paper laid between and kept there about fifteen minutes. If the paper is turned pink in color the evidence is conclusive that the soil is sour and needs sweetening with an application of lime, which may be applied in the shape of the raw ground stone or the pulverized burned product, there being little choice between the two. The chances are that if the soil is sour it is also run down and would be benefited by an application of stable manure, which will greatly increase its productivity.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL. XXVII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1910 NUMBER 24

THE DIVISION OF RED LAKE COUNTY

A Subject That Will Soon Interest the Voters.

Since it is now an assured fact that the proposition to divide Red Lake county is to be voted upon—the governor having issued the proclamation last week—at the general election next November, steps will soon be taken by those living in the north end of the county interested in the establishing of Pennington county to give the people information as to the advisability of the proposition.

The only argument that has been against the division is that it is going to increase taxes, and if this were true everyone should certainly be against division, for taxes are high enough now. Statistics, which we hope to publish later on will show that the lowest rate of taxation is enjoyed by the small counties and there are many reasons why a small county can be governed more cheaply than a large one. The new county of Pennington will have about twenty townships and will leave Red Lake county less than twelve townships. A large percentage of the population and valuation will be in the new county. If the division is carried, the court house now being built at Red Lake Falls will have to be paid for by the taxpayers in what is left of Red Lake county. We will have to assume our proportion of the bonded debt of the county, but will receive credit for what assets the county has at Red Lake Falls. As it is the intention of Thief River Falls to donate to the county of Pennington the city hall for a court house, those living outside of the city will certainly benefit by the division, as they will not be taxed for the court house built at Red Lake Falls and will come into possession of a court house that will be suitable for many years to come.

The News would be pleased to publish communications from farmers living in this vicinity and learn of their views upon the matter. It makes no difference whether you are for or against the division.

Too Much Sunshine.

The Alberta country in Canada has received a black eye. The extreme dry weather there has destroyed fully fifty per cent of the wheat in that country, and unless rain comes soon the crops there will be almost a total failure. Most of the farmers in that part of Canada sow winter wheat, and many have plowed up their fields and are putting in spring wheat in the hope of getting a crop.

Is Serving Fifteen Days.

Anton Warner, a homesteader living up near Espiee, went to Sam Johnson's boarding house on West Fourth street where he had been stopping one night last week at about midnight. Finding the door locked, he became angry and broke in a window. Mr. Johnson had him arrested and Judge Bishop fined him $10 and costs or fifteen days in jail. Warner chose the latter.

Land Prices and Crops.

Land values in this state vary somewhat widely according to location and development, but when compared with other states and their producing values considered, are cheaper than the lands of other states.

In 1907 by combining corn, wheat, oats, rye, barley and flax, Minnesota produced an average of $12.27 per acre; Illinois $14.60; Nebraska $10.39; South Dakota $10.61 and North Dakota $10.95. In 1909 Minnesota produced from the same crops $15.89 per acre; Illinois $16.51; Iowa $11.99; Nebraska $11.01; South Dakota $12.72 and North Dakota $13.09.

The average of the land upon which these crops were produced in Illinois was $152.68 per acre; Iowa, $70.03; Minnesota $37.97. Figuring interest upon investment on these land values you will notice that Minnesota stands pre-ominently at the head of all states as furnishing the best opportunity for farm workers. Improved farms in the older and more highly developed portions of the state can be purchased at from $30 to $70 per acre, while wild lands in the northern portion of the state can be bought at from $8 to $15.—Farm, Stock & Home.

Red Lake Falls May Have Another Bank.

The fellow who gets his information from the lamp post on the corner says that Red Lake Falls is to have another bank. The yarn spinning has progressed far enough to give the new institution a name. It is to be known as the Farmers National Bank of Red Lake Falls—that is, if the story that five St. Paul men have made application for a charter for a national bank is not without foundation.

This week a deed to the Lemieux block, now occupied by Schreiter's drug store and the Sunshine store, was filed in the office of the register of deeds. In the deed the Middle West Investment company is named as grantee—and dame rumor is again on the job. It is now said that the bank is to have the desirable location on the corner.

The Gazette is not speaking as one having authority, but the report is published for the news value it has.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Fatal Accident at Spooner Mill.

Otto Mosen, a millwright in the big saw mill at Spooner was killed last Thursday. According to the Spooner News he was in the act of removing some bark and other dust from out of a drive wheel pit under the gang with a long-handled pickeroon. The handle was wrenched out of his hands and forced entirely through his body, breaking two ribs in front, forcing the splintered fragments through the right lung and finally breaking the spinal column. A most marvelous thing was that in spite of these injuries he descended a stairway and went to Supt. Nelson of the mill and told him of the accident. He was taken to the hospital, but died the same evening.

Opening Minnesota Home-stead Land

A proclamation has been issued opening 233,295 acres of Indian reservation lands in Minnesota, June 20. Most of this land will be subject to homestead entry at the Crookston land office after 9 a. m., June 20.

Eight complete townships, embodying 185,000 acres, in ranges 32 and 35, inclusive, and in townships 157 to 159, are within the jurisdiction of the Crookston office. Also tracts on the Garden and Oak island in the Lake of the Woods, heretofore claimed and occupied by Canadian Indians who have been removed, will be settled from the Crookston office.

To Serve 40 Days.

Wm Anderson, a painter, was given a sentence of 40 days in the county jail last Saturday by Judge Bishop. Anderson purchased a watch and chain from W. A. Bishop and a watch from J. Bjerkhoel, giving an order for the payment on A. G. Haleeth, and was preparing to leave the city. As he had no money coming from Haleeth he was arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Bankers Meet at Bemidji Today.

The bankers of the Ninth district hold their annual meeting at Bemidji commencing today.

There will be morning and afternoon sessions and a banquet in the evening at Hotel Markham given by local bankers. There will also be boat rides on Lake Bemidji. At the morning session Judge S. W. O. Stanton will welcome the visitors and Thomas R. Canfield, vice president of the Becker County State Bank of Lake, will respond. Secretary-Treasurer, K. K. Peterson of Rothsay, will then present his annual report. After the appointment of committees State Immigration Commissioner George Welsh will speak on "Agricultural Development."

Cashier W. I. Prince of the City National Bank of Duluth, will follow with an address on "The Work and Purposes of the Minnesota Bankers association." The meeting will then adjourn for lunch and in the afternoon the following program will be given,

"The Banker's Interest in Agricultural Developement," Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice president Northwestern National bank, Minneapolis; "The Central Bank of Issue," Henry von der Weyer, cashier National German-American bank, St. Paul; "A Comprehensive Scheme of Agricultural Education for Minnesota," Senator A. D. Stephens, president Merchants National bank, Crookston; "The Work and Purposes of the Interstate Protective Associaton," Charles R. Frost, secretary Minnesota Bankers' association, Minneapolis; "Individuality in Business," Senator S. D. Works, Mankato; report of committees and election of officers for ensuing year.

Postmasters Convention.

To the Postmasters at Lake Park, Moorhead, Gary, Mahnomen, Bagley, Bemidji, Thief River Falls, Warren, Hallock, Roseau, and Crookston, Minn.

Brother Postmasters:

A District Convention of Third and Fourth class Postmasters will be held at Crookston, Minn. on July 20, 1910, at 10 a. m., in the quarters of the Commercial Club. The meeting will be addressed by the Hon. Halvor Steenerson, M. C.

At the suggestion, and by request, of Elias Steenerson, a committee on invitation or advertising. I sincerely hope that you will give this meeting your best efforts, thereby insuring a large attendance. I suggest that a postal card notice of the meeting be sent, and that it be followed a little later by a copy of the program.

Rev. Flesher Goes to Bemidji.

The following taken from the Fergus Falls Journal will be of interest to the many friends of the gentleman referred to in this city:

Rev. Chas. Flesher treated the congregation of Grace Methodist Episcopal church to an unwelcome surprise Wednesday evening by tendering his resignation as pastor here.

Rev. Mr. Flesher has been pastor of the church here for two years and eight months, and under his pastorate, the church has grown and prospered both spiritually and otherwise. Its seeming misfortune in the destruction of its church edifice by fire a few years ago has resulted, under his energetic direction, in the construction of a new and far more substantial church edifice, and one that is regarded as a model by church builders all over the country.

It is Mr. Flesher's success in this line that is resulting in his resignation. A new church edifice is needed at Bemidji, and in view of his experience and his splendid success in this city, the district superintendent has prevailed upon him to accept the pastorate of the church there, which will undertake the work of erecting a fine new edifice. Under the circumstances his congregation here could scarcely refuse to accept his resignation, and it was voted regretfully to accept it. He and his family will leave for Bemidji about the middle of June. It is not yet known who will succeed him here.

Prospects Not Good.

Frank McGinty returned last Friday evening from a trip to Western Saskatchewan where he had been with a car load of horses for a man who was injured in the Soo yards here. It took ten days to make the trip and Mr. McGinty had a good opportunity to look the country over. He says that the country is very backward, and prospects for a crop are not very good. There is little or no grass and stock is very poor. On the day Mr. McGinty left Saskatchewan, six inches of snow fell and the storm was general throughout Canada, as there was snow on the ground all along the road to Winnipeg.

What A Summer Cold May Do.

SHE'S AFTER BILL BAILEY

He Will Not Come Home and So Mrs. Bailey Goes After Him.

Former Lineman for Tri-State Telephone Company Deserts His Wife.

There will be a lively time in Flaxton, N. D., today. W. J. Bailey, who for over a year past was the local lineman for the Tri-State Telephone company, about six weeks ago deserted his wife and child and Chief of Police Lang has located him at Flaxton. The laws of North Dakota will not permit a wife deserter being brought back to Minnesota, so the next best thing to do was to secure transportation for Mrs. Bailey and her child to Flaxton. This was done by the city authorities and Mrs. Bailey left Tuesday and will arrive at Flaxton today. If he refuses to support herself and child, Mrs. Bailey will have him arrested under the laws of North Dakota.

Minnesota Soil.

Minnesota soil is the best in the world, the decomposition of rock waste which imparts excellent chemical consistancy. Underlaid with a bed of clay, close to the surface, it has uncomparable fertility and strong producing power, all the elements of plant foods, minerals and otherwise being found in it. At least 90 per cent of Minnesota soil is arable. The soil lends itself to a greater deversity of crops than that of any other state. It is capable of and does, produce heavier yields, in a shorter period of a more superior quality of seeds crops and potatoes than the soil of any other section of the country.—Statistics show this to be truer.—Ex.

Walter Hill to Farm.

No less a person than Walter, the son of James J. Hill, is expected to join the ranks of Kittson county farmers. In an interview with James J. Hill recently we were told that Walter expects to take charge of his Northcote farm and will probably move on to the farm in the fall. He will have the Northcote buildings and about four sections of land. The soil on that land is the very best in the country and we look for the development of one of the finest farms in the valley in a manner that will be an inspiration to our farmers.—Hallock

Land Opening June 20.

With the opening to entry and settlement of about 231,000 acres of public land in Minnesota only two weeks off, little effort seems to have been made to advertise the fact throughout the country and elsewhere. It is true that the land belongs to the Federal Government, and that the state has no direct interest in the matter. But the state has a very large and vital, if indirect, interest in the settlement of these lands. Such an interest would seem to warrant extraordinary efforts on the part of the state officials in making the facts about the land public property. One great obstacle in the way of such work is the failure of the legislature to appropriate liberally for an advertising campaign. This is an oversight that must be remedied by the next legislature. Money thus spent will be returned to the state a thousand-fold, for it will call general attention to the broad and fertile acres in northern Minnesota that have never known the plow.

The lands subject to entry on June 20 are in several parcels, scattered over the northern end of the state.

Eight full townships may be entered at Crookston, some at Duluth and some at Cass Lake. Every kind of soil is represented, so that the intending entryman will do well to look the land over carefully first. It is stated that most of the land has timber on it, which is a desirable feature, because of the assistance the income from cutting timber will give the homesteader in clearing up his farm. The winter will thus be a productive season of labor as well as the summer. The material for house, barn and fence building is ready to hand. The water supply in all of these lands, of course, is of the best, and the rainfall is nearly always dependable.

If the facts about these lands were more generally known, there would be a grand rush to get sections in the last great land opening that will take place in this state.

Married Last Evening.

Last evening at 8:30 at the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church, the Rev. I. T. Aastad officiating, occurred the marriage of Miss Ida C. Weeks to William S. Sponheim. After the ceremony a reception was held in the basement of the church which was largely attended by the many friends of the contracting parties.

Both the bride and groom are popular young people of the city. The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Weeks, and a young lady possessing many accomplishments. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Sponheim, and a young man of sterling worth The happy couple will leave Sunday evening on a trip to southern Minnesota points to spend a few weeks.

Among the out of town guests who attended the wedding were; Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Rud, of Portland, N. D., Messrs. Paul, Dennis and Alva Wambheim and Misses Marie and Guri Wambheim, of Hutton, N. D., Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Spoonheim, K. P. Spoonheim, of Hutton, N. D., E. K. Spoonheim, of Northwood, N. D., C. W. Nelson, of Grand Forks, and Judge and Mrs. Andrew Grindeland, of Warren.

Company L. Leaves Sunday Evening for Lake City and Remains Ten Days.

Much Time to Be Devoted to Drills and Rifle Practice Down There.

The members of Company L leave Sunday evening over the Soo for Lake City.

The men will arrive in camp Monday, June 13, and will remain ten days, the local company returning one week from the following Thursday. Most of the time in camp will be spent on rifle practice and extended order drills for battalions and regiment. The officers take it for granted that the men have been taught the regular company drills. Each battalion will have a practice march from the afternoon of one day to the forenoon of the next.

Two uniforms will be taken to camp by each man. The olive drab service uniform will be worn to camp and return. While in camp, khaki uniforms, coats and caps will be worn. Men are urged to see that the caps are not mashed in packing. Company baggage is to be packed in boxes with not more than 250 pounds to the box.

The camp will be laid out as a city with regular streets and avenues. Mail should be addressed to the men by the company letter, regimental number, Camp Lakeview, Lake City, Minnesota. Certain staples, such as coffee, sugar, potatoes, beans, and canned goods, are furnished by the regimental commissary and the regimental quartermaster will furnish straw for filling the bed ticks.

As the junior regiment in the guard, the Third regiment was not given much choice as to the date it should go into camp. The First and Second regiment chose to camp in July so that the Third had to go in August or June. As most of the men will be busy with the harvest in August, June was chosen as the better month.

The following daily routine has been established effective June 13th to 22nd inclusive:

Crop Conditions Excellent.

Reports from all over this section indicate that the rains of the latter part of last week have improved crop prospects in the Northwest immensely, and from now on warm weather will mean much to the crop. June is recognized as the month in which the crop makes the rapid strides in growth, and on June weather depends the yield of the crop almost as much as on the weather at the time when the grain fills out. The rains of Friday, Saturday and Sunday were general, and though the ground can stand a great deal more moisture even the little that came has worked wonders. The weather of yesterday and last night would indicate that warm weather has come to stay and its continuance means wealth to valley farmers.

THE PRINCE'S SPEECH.

Canning's Reason For Ignoring the Royal Audacity.

One of the best stories in connection with the history of the king's speech, delivered at the opening of each fresh session of parliament, says Everybody's, is told of George IV. when prince regent.

The prince, it is well known, took his responsibilities lightly and on one occasion is said to have bet Sheridan 100 guineas that either owing to the magnetism of his personality or the flutter which the occupants of the lords' chamber were in so little attention was really paid to the verbal character of the speech he was delivering that he could make any interpolation he liked without it being detected.

The bet was taken, and the prince regent agreed to introduce the words "Baa, baa, black sheep," in the middle of the speech.

"If anybody smiles or looks startled," he said, "I lose my bet."

This exploit actually came off, and at the close of a weighty allusion, composed by Lord Liverpool, to Wellesley's difficulties in Spain the regent cleared his throat, said, "Baa, baa, black sheep," hurriedly and went on without apparently exciting any remark.

Sheridan related the royal audacity to Canning.

"It is perfectly amazing to me," Sheridan said, "that no notice was taken. Didn't you hear him distinctly say, 'Baa, baa, black sheep'?"

"I did," rejoined Canning. "But as his royal highness looked you full in the face at the time I took it as a personal allusion, and my delicacy forbade me to think more about it."

CO-OPERATION IN ROAD WORK.

There is no sort of public work in which folks are interested generally where the principle of co-operation could be followed to better advantage than in the care of the public highways. In some sections this fact seems to be recognized, in some others not. Especially is there need of this co-operation in those sections where earth roads are the rule and where the character of the soil is such that there is need of working it at a critical time following heavy rains or wet seasons. Particularly is this true of stiff clay or adobe soils, which can be advantageously worked and leveled only when they possess the proper amount of moisture and the right consistency. Under such conditions it is impossible for one road superintendent and his helpers to give all the road of their territory treatment at the proper time. As a result many such highways dry up rough and hard and remain in this condition for months. Could a system have been followed which would have enlisted the aid of property owners or renters along the highways and the roads have been dragged at the proper time a good highway would have been secured. The benefit of this co-operative system is recognized in some states, the road tax being remitted in case property owners give a stipulated amount of aid in keeping in condition the roads abutting their own premises. This plan gives excellent results and should be adopted in other places where the roads at certain seasons of the year are little short of unspeakable, yet for the attempt to keep which in repair large sums are expended annually, but to little purpose.

HOW HE BESTED QUACK GRASS.

A Minnesota farmer who has had an intimate acquaintance with quack grass covering a period of about twenty years rid his land—six acres—of the pest in the following manner. Beginning in 1908 he allowed the grass to grow until it blossomed, but before any seed formed he cut the patch and made hay of it. He then plowed the stubble under smoothly, using the disk harrow to work up a seed bed and aiming to disturb the sod as little as possible. On this he sowed German millet the 15th of July. The seed came up well, but owing to dry weather following the millet did not do well. He turned steers in to pasture the patch in October and plowed the ground the latter part of November. In the spring of 1909 the quack grass looked sick, but soon began to take on life. He disked the patch about once a week until the middle of June, when he again plowed it, harrowed it fine and drilled in a peck and a half of fodder corn to the acre. Last fall he harvested three and a half tons of dry fodder per acre, one-third of which had produced good sound corn. The field is at present completely controlled, and he says that any kind of a tilled crop can be raised this year without any trouble from the quack. Corn with thorough cultivation, in this farmer's opinion, must enter largely into any rotation whose purpose is to kill out quack grass, while disk tools should be used so far as possible in the tilling of the soil.

VARIEGATED ALFALFAS.

The ordinary alfalfa, whose original home was probably Persia, has come to be considered a standard and valuable forage crop in the western half of the United States. This variety has blue flowers and a coiled pod. Within a few years there has been introduced in the country a variety of yellow flowered alfalfa, which grows wild in Siberia and several countries of Europe, that does not have the upright habit or produce as much seed, but that in point of resistance to extremes of drought and cold is decidedly superior to its blue flowered relative. In some cases these fields have grown side by side, and hybrid or variegated alfalfas have resulted, combining some of the best qualities of both varieties. The best of these variegated strains, which bear both blue and yellow flowers, are sand lucern, Grimm's alfalfa and Canadian alfalfa. Of this list the second strain has been very successfully grown in Minnesota and North Dakota, where it has withstood cold winters remarkably well and has produced a larger yield of hay than the blue flowered variety.

ABOUT DURUM WHEAT.

Durum wheat, quite commonly known under the name of macaroni wheat, seems especially adapted to soil and climatic conditions existing in the great plain west of the Mississippi river, where the rainfall ranges from ten to twenty inches per year. It is not only quite drought resistant, but seems largely free from rust. In humid sections it does not do so well as other standard varieties of wheat. In price it ranges a few cents per bushel lower than other wheat of like grade.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd, 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

About every day we notice by the twin city papers that Al Kaiser, presumably through the efforts of his right hand lieutenant, Senator Andy Stephens, is trying to make a combination with this or that candidate. The reason that they have not made a combination heretofore is perhaps due to the fact that they do not have the goods to deliver.

This talk about the farmer becoming a bloated bond holder by reason of the enormous profits in hog raising and feeding in recent months should not be taken too seriously. Considering the high price of land, the high price of feed and the high price of farm labor, there is no money to be made in feeding $9 hogs today than there was in feeding hogs that sold at $5 five years ago. A few days ago I paid $150 an acre for 100 acres of Mills county, Iowa, farm land, nearly three times its appraised value ten years ago. Live stock raised on land at that price must sell at what are considered big prices to pay out."—C. N. Follet in Live Stock World.

Some men are always boosters for their town and community. They may not have great wealth or engage in great enterprices, but they boost continually and help to bring men of means and to promote business enterprise. They do not oppose public improvements or oppose every enterprise not originated with them. They are public-spirited, hospitable to strangers and visitors, hopeful, enthusiastic and proud of their town and its people. Then again there are men who run down the town to strangers; who oppose every public improvement; who hate to see their neighbors, and especially those engaged in the same business, prosper; do their buying elsewhere and never advertise in the paper; who would sooner see trade go to other towns than to others in their own town, and who are continually complaining about their taxes and hard luck. There's as much difference between these two classes of men as there is between day and night.—Ely Miner.

LAW HELD UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

It took the whole legislature of the state of Minnesota and the signature of the governor to enact a law last year requiring persons and corporations to burn slashings in the lumber country. It took one justice of the peace in Beltrami county about 18 minutes to knock it out, in his district, at least. Some consternation and amazement was created in the office of the state forestry commissioner when a report came from a village near Tenstrike that a justice of the peace had held the 1909 law to be unconstitutional and on this ground threw a case out of his court after the forestry officers had taken particular pains to see that it was brought. The action angered C. C. Andrews, forestry commissioner. "The law specifically states that any person or corporation cutting timber, wood or trees of any kind, for commercial purposes, mind you, for commercial purposes shall pile and burn the slashings" Mr. Andrews said. The attorneys for the corporation on trial in Beltrami county argued before the justice of the peace that the law was unconstitutional because it did not make provision requiring farmers and homesteaders to burn their slashings also.

"The idea of a justice of the peace making a ruling on the constitutionality of the law", exclaimed the commissioner, indignantly. But he could not bring the case into court again. The justice had won.

JUSTICE TO NORTHERN MINNESOTA

It is not strange that first in the list of things Northern Minnesota wants stands reapportionment. The demand of the Crookston Congress for a fair deal in legislative representation will come with the full force of an appeal for justice. The North asks for nothing but its plain rights, and it is difficult to see how the South can longer resist granting a reapportionment that will make a vote in one section as powerful as a vote in the other section.

It has been urged as an excuse for denying reapportionment in the past that the North wants more votes in the Legislature in order to defeat the tonnage tax on iron ore. This is but a poor excuse for refusing to do the right thing. It may be that the opponents of the tonnage tax would have sufficient strength in a reapportioned Legislature to defeat the measure. If so, they would but be expressing the will of the people. If, on the other hand, the majority wants such a tax levied, let that mandate be carried into effect by the Legislature. But the only way to have the Legislature accurately express the will of the people is to make it a fairly representative body. Under the present apportionment a voter in Southern Minnesota is equal to two voters in the North. For a legislative body thus constituted to impose legislation on the people of the state against their will is nothing short of tyranny.

The people of Southern Minnesota are fair-minded. We believe that they are not only willing but eager to do their compatriots of the North justice. The trouble is with the politicians of the South. They are the ones who have fought off reapportionment, because it meant loss of office for some of them. It is evident, however, that in the next Legislature the question is coming up in such form that it will be exceedingly difficult for even the politicians longer to dodge the issue.—Minneapolis Journal.

Insurance Department Bulletin No. 33.

The Washington Fire Insurance Company, a stock fire insurance company of Seattle, Washington, was licensed by this Department on May 6, 1910. The company has a capital of $250,000.00 and a surplus to policy holders of $100,213.63.

The Department has recently called the attention of the insurance companies to the requirement that all policies covering Personal Accident, Health, Employers' Liability, Fidelity, Surety, Plate Glass, Steam Boiler, Burglary, and Theft, Workmen's Collective, Credit, Sprinkler Leakage and Automobile insurance, issued in this State, must be countersigned by a licensed, resident agent.

Chapter 427, laws of 1909, specifically prohibits rebates on any form of policy. This law makes the person who receives the rebate, liable to the same penalty as the agent or company who gives it.

Rumers have reached the Department that this law is being violated. Prosecution will follow when evidence is secured.

The annual Preliminary Fire Report is now issued and the Preliminary Life Report is in the hands of the printer, and should be ready for mailing within two or three weeks.

Frequent requests come to this Department for aid in collecting benefits from companies or societies not authorized to do business in this State. The Department is unable to give assistance in these cases. We have repeatedly warned the people not to patronise any concern, which is unwilling or unable to comply with the State laws.

The fire losses in Minnesota for April amounted to $252,000.00 as compared with $45,000.00 in 1909. The losses in the United States were $14,000,000.00 as compared with $17,380,000.00 in April, 1909.

NEW TOWN OF ARPIN

Allen W. Clark Has a Government Townsite Started in Eastern Marshall County.

Says It Is Going to Be the Largest City in Marshall County.

Marshall county is to have a new city to be known as Arpin, named in honor of A. M. Arpin, of this city, manager for the Northwestern Drainage company. Allen W. Clark is the instigator, and he predicts that it will be second only to Thief River Falls in this section of the country. The town is to be located on section 13, town 157, range 39, which is in the center of the big drainage operations now being carried on in Eastern Marshall county. At present the land is the property of the government, but as town lots will be sold to actual settlers at the rate of $1.52 per acre, the high prices of lots should not keep the town from growing. Mr. Clark has had the land entered as a government townsite and there will have to be two hundred residents there before title can be secured. Twenty-five years is the limit in which to secure the settlers, but Mr. Clark is of the opinion that twenty five days after Mr. Arpin's ditching machines arrive at the new townsite, there will be many more than the required number.

Arpin will be in the center of the territory where Frank Grygla is to locate the big colony of Polanders, and Mr Clark is going to build a large hotel for the accommodation of the public, and later may build a church. "Nothing can stop the growth of Arpin," Mr. Clark says.

Indians Dying.

White Earth, Minn., June 6.—Recent medical investigation has revealed that fully four-fifths of the Indians on the White Earth reservation are affected with tuberculosis trachoma and kindred diseases of scrofulous nature and that the death rate is increasing in alarming rapidity.

The government boarding school at Pine Point was closed some time ago as it was discovered that a large majority of the pupils were affected with pulmonary trouble and trachoma. The school buildings have been converted into a hospital and former school employees have been installed as nurses.

The primary cause of this condition apparently originated with the advance of the pale face among them and the introduction of the evils of civilization.

Time and again officials of the government have been informed, but have permitted matters to drift along in hap hazard shape until within the past six months. A hospital has now been opened and is to be operated at its fullest capacity. The establishment of a sanatorium has been discussed also within the past year, and one will probably be built.

Competent medical attendants and qualified nurses, wholesome food, comfortable quarters, cleanliness and plenty of outdoor air will help to relieve the situation. Unless early steps are taken for relief the Minnesota Chippewa Indians will soon have passed from the scene.

Home Team Defeated!

By the score of 7 to 2, the Thief River Falls base ball team was defeated last Sunday afternoon by the team from Crookston. Many errors were made by the home team, and it is very evident that they need more practice.

One on the Lawyers.

A certain lawyer was retained by a man who stepped into a hole in a street. Suit was brought against the city for $1,000. The court gave the plaintiff a verdict for $1,000 and costs. The city appealed to the supreme court and the verdict in favor of the plaintiff was confirmed.

After setting up the claim, the lawyer (probably a shyster), handed his client a dollar.

"That is what is coming to you after taking out my fee, the cost of appeal and other expenses."

The man looked closely at the dollar for a moment, then at the lawyer, and said:

"Say; what's the matter with this dollar, is it bad?"

The Conservation of Nature's Resources.

Company L Goes to Lake City.

Minneapolis Tribune: Announcement was made yesterday by Adjutant General Wood of the Minnesota national guard that Captain Jens Bugge of the Twenty-eighth Infantry, U. S. A., Stationed at Fort Snelling, has been appointed by Brigadier General Hodges of the department of Dakota to duty as instructing officer at the regimental encampment which will begin shortly at Lake City.

Captain Bugge acted as inspector last year, but his popularity with the state militia troops, combined with the fact that many officers of the army are absent at present, has led to his appointment as general instructing officer. He will also serve as inspector.

The annual encampment will begin one week from today and continue for 10 days.

Following the Third regiment will be the 12 companies of the First, which will go to Lake City July 3, and the Second regiment which will go into encampment July 14.

The artillery battalion, composed of Companies A and C of St. Paul and B of Minneapolis, will go to Lake City for seven days July 23, and a week will be spent by the artillerymen immediately afterwards at the national maneuver camp at Sparta, Wis.

The companies of the Third regiment, which will go into camp first this year, are as follows: A C, and E of Duluth, B of Anoka, D of Sumbroto, F of Evaleth, G of Princeton, H of Olivia, I of Crookston, K of Bemidji, L of Thief River Falls and M of Hibbing.

THE

Sincerity Clothes Are Certainly Made Right.

Many clothiers put practically all of their time into the making of the coat, and all they give you for the trousers is a pair of funnels to run your legs through. Sincerity trousers are made even better than Sincerity coats. Why the various clothes makers have given so little attention to their trousers is a thing to wonder at. A man's trousers get ten times as much wear as his coat. They have a tendency to fray at the heals, the cloth is rubbed bare in his stride, he is constantly getting up and sitting down, crossing and uncrossing his legs, and, in fact, putting his trousers to ten times more work than he puts his coat. Is it any wonder that the average pair of trousers will not wear half as long as the average coat? The Sincerity Clothes' makers put so much time, attention and labor into the making of their trousers that this fact alone ought to sell more suits than any other brand on the market. Even in appearance, as well as workmanship, the smallest detail is attended to. Sincerity Trousers not only wear better, they fit better and look better. Your Sincerity Suit is waiting for you in our large stock. And the Sincerity Trousers of that suit will wear so much longer than any other trousers that that alone will repay you for the purchase. Equine Flight.

Sincerity Clothes

It has been said, and justly, that wonders never cease—for each day brings to notice something new—but it has been left to the proprietors of the large circuses to scheme and plan, invent and produce novel features that are beyond the wildest dreams of imagination, and to accomplish the seeming impossible.

When the Airship was recently perfected it was thought that the ingenuity of man could devise nothing greater than to make the air navigable—but it was left for Dode Fisk to accomplish still greater wonder, that of sending a horse on a cruise in an airship.

It is beyond human belief that this is done—but one has only to witness this most sensational of the world's greatest triumph of wonders to be convinced.

Mercury, the Airship horse, Aviating Equine Feature with the great Dode Fisk Shows, makes a sensational ascension twice daily with bewildering pyrotechnic display, making this the most extraordinary feature ever presented by an Amusement Organization in America. We will sell you 40 acres of this land for $350 that will be worth $700 October 1, 1910, and $1,000 before October 1, 1911.

We will give with each 40-acre sale a free lot in the town of Conejos, which is one of the important shipping points on the Mexican Central railroad and the end of a division on a branch road running from Conejos to Escubadora.

This land of ours is covered with the best kind of succulent grass for grazing purposes and cattle fatten on it quicker than in the best grazing sections of the United States.

Adjoining this land of ours Mexican farmers grow wheat harvesting 60 bushels to the acre this year, corn that is 12 to 15 feet high, Irish potatoes 10 inches long, sweet potatoes 7 to 10 pounds, cabbages as big as pumpkins, Bermuda onions of great size and finest quality---in fact, they grow every northern cereal and vegetable, and all southern vegetables and fruits except lemons and oranges.

Peaches, pears, grapes, cherries, apples, apricots, strawberries, canteloupes and peanuts thrive prodigously on our land.

Intensified farming can be followed with amazing success and wonderful profits on our land, which is covered with a volcanic loam soil to a depth of 6 to 18 feet.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine says that American capital exceeding a billion dollars is invested in Mexican industries. Doesn't this fact tell you something?

Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, reports that it has between 6 and 7 million dollars invested in Mexico and that its principal holdings are in the vicinity of Torreon, Merico, which is 56 miles south of our lands. He says: "We think well of our Mexican holdings and as business justifies we will increase them."

American farmers are the logical agriculturists to develope the tremendous resources of the crop producing lands in Mexico. Why not join the band of colonists that is increasing by thousands every year?

In selecting lands we chose the highlands of the state of Durango because there you can grow anything grown in Minnesota and in double and treble quantities.

The climate is the real thing--it is always cool and never gets cold. You require a blanket nights; you never need an overcoat. The air is purity itself. Average yearly temperature less than 70 deg. Fahrenheit

Rain comes in the seasons when the crop grows best. Planting starts in April and crops grow with such rapidity that harvests are two months ahead of Minnesota. Rainfall in four months is between 25 and 30 inches, all that is needed to insure a perfect crop and a bountiful harvest.

You can surely afford 25c an acre a month, and that's all you need to pay per acre on the farm you buy.

SWEDEN.

The statistical bureau has published some highly important statistics covering the period of 1751-1900. During the years of 1751-1840 the percentage making a living as tillers of the soil or in occupations closely connected therewith, remained almost stationary. For this period of ninety years the average was 80.59 per cent, and at no time did the percentage swerve more than 2 per cent from this average. Even this slight variation may be due to changes in the manner of making computations rather than in any actual shifting of the population from one kind of occupation to another. Roughly speaking, husbandry was the means of support of four-fifths of the people of Sweden for a century preceding the year 1840. During the same period 8.73 per cent were engaged in the industries and mining, 1.89 in commercial pursuits, and 8.79 per cent made a living as servants. The mutual variation among these occupations were at times very considerable, but taken together they remained surprisingly constant. The year 1840 marks the beginning of a new era which has wrought profound changes. In 1850 the percentage of those depending on farming and closely related occupations for a living have dropped to 77.94, and those engaged in mining and the industries constituted 9.15 per cent. Up to that year there was no change in the percentage of those engaged in commerce. During the second half of the Nineteenth century the percentage of the farming population kept decreasing, rapidly and constantly, as to the advantage of the other occupations. In 1870 husbandry could claim only 71.87 per cent of the population, in 1880, 62.42; in 1890, 60.92, and in 1900, 53.67, or a little more than one-half of the total. On the other hand, the percentage of those engaged in mining and the industries had increased to 14.71 per cent in 1870; to 17.75 in 1880; to 22.72 in 1890; and to 28.88 in 1900. The percentage of those engaged in commercial pursuits increased at the same rate, being 5.06 in 1870 and 10.60 in 1900. During the second half of the Nineteenth century there seem to have been a slight decrease of the percentage of those occupied as servants. Only thirty years ago two-thirds of the people of Sweden were still depending upon agriculture as a means of making a living. The latest figures are for the year 1900; but as the decrease was from 60.92 per cent to 53.67 per cent during the ten years immediately preceding the year 1900, it is safe to assume that at the present time considerably less than one-half of the people of Sweden are making a living by cultivating the soil.

Bishop Gezelius von Scheele arrived in New York the other day, where he was accorded a royal reception on the part of some of the leading clergy of the city. He at once resumed his journey to the West and will speak at Rock Island next week in connection with the fiftieth anniversary festivities of the Augustana synod. Bishop Scheele is regarded as the most learned bishop of Sweden and this is his third visit to the Swedish Lutheran churches of the United States. While the Augustana synod has no real official connections with the state church of Sweden it is nevertheless on an exceedingly friendly footing with the church in the homeland and stands perhaps closer in relationship to the state church of Sweden than any other Swedish-American church body in America. The bishop will, during his journey in the States, visit Chicago, Rock Island, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, Seattle and other Western cities and on the return journey he will give lectures in many Eastern cities where the Swedish element is predominating.

No matter from what viewpoint you will look at it the emigration problem continues to be the most important one and it is just the question which is bothering the leaders more than anything else. During the months of January, February, March and April of the present year 7,396 persons emigrated to foreign lands, while last year there were only 5,657. This is a matter which is giving the government a good deal of well founded worry and just how to overcome it all remains as ever a puzzle. There is really no way of preventing people from emigrating and there seems to be no way in which to induce people to remain.

An Iowa farmer got rid of a good sized patch of Canada thistles last year, after several methods had failed, by plowing them every ten days from April until August and then sowing the tract heavily to millet. A few weeks later he was unable to find a single thistle.

It is a whole lot more sensible to jog along behind old Kate or Dobbin with a nest egg in the bank than to be scooting over the highways in a late model automobile, the purchase of which has meant the putting of a mortgage on the town home or farmstead. Many the folks who have done or are doing this very thing in haste who will doubtless have opportunity to repent at leisure.

Perhaps there is no influence which tends to get the boys and girls started in the right path in taking up the work of outdoors and the home so much as a little appreciation bestowed now and then, even if the point should be strained a bit at times, for, after all, excellence of achievement in any case is a comparative and not an absolute matter. Appreciation will make a task a pleasure instead of drudge work, which it so often degenerates into when only criticism is given.

The first navel orange tree of which there is any record was found growing on the north shore of the Mediterranean sea in the year 1565 by a monk, who wrote a description of the tree and fruit and painted a picture of it. Grafts of this tree were later taken to Spain and thence to South America, whence scions were brought to this country by an American lady in 1869, they being propagated in the botanical gardens at Washington. Because of this fact it is usually called the Washington navel.

Growers of sweet peas in a good many sections had this favorite source of fragrant bloom well nigh ruined last season by the green aphides, or plant lice. These are sucking and not biting insects, and hence the ordinary poisons do not reach them. They must be killed by contact with some spray, and for this nothing is better than a solution made by steeping tobacco leaves or stems in warm water. This may be applied to the vines with an effective hand sprayer. If one treatment does not kill all of the lice, a second application should be given.

Inspections made at the different packing and slaughter houses of the country show that fully 2 per cent of all hogs killed are affected with tuberculosis. An interesting fact in connection with this state of affairs is that the outward and seemingly thrifty appearance of an animal is no guarantee whatever that it is free from disease. Investigations into the causes of the disease in hogs show the most frequent causes of infection to be the feeding on buttermilk from creameries, eating milk from tuberculous cows and feeding behind cattle affected with tuberculosis.

As a result of a recent order issued by the secretary of the interior there have been withdrawn from entry in Wyoming, Utah and Idaho 2,000,000 acres of land which are underlaid with phosphate. He has also recommended to congress that a law be passed which will permit of the mining of this rock phosphate, but only on the condition that none of it be exported. Secretary Ballinger is to be commended for this action. Inasmuch as half of the phosphate mixed in this country last year was exported, here would seem to be a phase of the conservation of resources movement that congressmen might well give their aid to.

Breeders of Jersey cattle seem to be dividing into two camps over the question of the type of cow which shall be accepted as a standard by growers of this breed of dairy cattle. Some, the minority, contend that the show ring type—the smaller Island type—shall be adopted as the standard. More hold that the larger American type of cow with the big barrel and udder, the one which makes the best showing in pail and churn, shall be the model to copy after. Since dairymen keep cows for the money rather than the pleasure there is in the business the latter type of cow would seem to be the one which will ultimately prevail.

The butter fat and oleo fellows have been having it out before a congressional investigating committee at Washington the past few weeks, and at the time of writing it is uncertain what the outcome of the hearing will be. The controversy has been precipitated anew because the oleo fellows—really the packing trust—want the tax on colored oleo removed so that they can realize a still larger profit by selling it under the guise of butter. The butter men contend, and rightly, that this is in reality an attempt to get money under false pretenses and in so far works an injustice to their business. The law in force governing the sale of oleomargerine levies a tax of 10 cents a pound on oleo colored to imitate butter, while the tax on the uncolored product is but one-fourth of a cent per pound, the consumer being allowed to color the oleo after purchase to suit his own taste. While the high price of food products is a live one, it is hardly so live as to justify the passage of a law which will enable the packing trust to palm off beef grease and cottonseed oil on a hungry public for what they are really not.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Rev. J. J. Lawler, auxiliary bishop of St. Paul, was the honored guest at a testimonial reception and banquet given in the palm room of the Saint Paul hotel at St. Paul by the Catholic clergy and laity of the city. The event of the evening was the presentation to Bishop Lawler of a check for $4,500, contributed by members of the Cathedral parish, over which he presided for many years.

The Winnibigoshish band of Chippewa Indians of Minnesota have petitioned congress, through Secretary Ballinger, to set aside a portion of section 16, comprising 268 acres, as a townsite for its use. The Indian lands are to be opened to settlement June 20 and unless the land is reserved by withdrawal it will pass beyond control of the Indian office.

The attorney general's office has discovered that in the estate of the late Marshall Field of Chicago there were about $1,000,000 worth of Great Northern railroad stocks on which, the Great Northern being a Minnesota corporation, the state is due inheritance tax. Action will be brought to collect the tax due.

Since the first of the year St. Paul has had 632 fires and Minneapolis 1,035. The greater number in the Mill City is accounted for by the fact that only an engine company, a truck and a chemical respond to an alarm and, if additional apparatus is required, the operator records the call as another fire.

The monthly report of the St. Paul Union Stock Yards company covering the month of May shows an increase in receipts of all classes of live stock as compared with the same month in 1909. The largest increase in any one division was in the number of hogs, the gain for the period being 7,157.

At a special election in Stillwater the proposition to bond the city for $145,000 to buy the Stillwater Water company was passed by a large majority. The vote was 724 to 62. The city will assume control of the water company July 4.

The sixth annual encampment of the department of Minnesota, United Spanish War Veterans, will be held in Faribault June 30 and July 1. The ladies' auxiliary will be in session at the same time.

Work has been started on the construction of seven miles of additional track at the Minnesota Transfer, which it is expected will be completed in time for the heavy fall movement.

At the close of business for May there was a cash balance in the state treasury of $3,468,136. This is almost $2,000,000 more than a year ago at the same time.

Prohibitionists of Minnesota will hold their annual convention in Minneapolis Friday, July 1.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Judge Henry L. Kennan of Spokane, Wash., after hearing arguments in a motion for new trial and for arrest of judgment, denying both motions, sentenced George L. Pepoon, formerly theological student at Fergus Falls, this state, to the penitentiary for life. Pepoon was found guilty of poisoning Edith Pepoon, his wife, who before their marriage was Edith Wolcott of Fergus Falls.

Richard Ellwood, an expert lineman employed by the Consumers' Power company, was instantly killed at Stillwater. While up a telephone pole half way, stringing wires for illuminations during the commercial travelers' convention, wires crossed and he was electrocuted.

Lying unconscious under a log which had apparently rolled upon him from a nearby pile, Charles Newstrom, forty-six years old, was found in the lumber yards of Brooks Bros. at St. Paul by fellow laborers. He died later at St. Joseph's hospital.

John A. White died at his home near Amboy of lockjaw resulting from running a piece of wire through his shoe and inflicting a slight scratch upon the foot.

Charles Scott, aged thirty years, of Fairmont, who was accidentally wounded in the thigh by a bullet from a small caliber rifle, is dead of lockjaw.

Jealous over some supposed action of her husband Olga Montury, twenty two years old, a bride of five weeks, committed suicide at Minneapolis.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

George R. Finch of St. Paul, president of the wholesale dry goods house of Finch, Van Slyck & McConville, is dead from an attack of valvular heart disease. Mr. Finch was born in Mount Vernon, O., Sept. 24, 1839. He had been connected with the present corporation and with its predecessors for forty-eight years.

Mrs Jane de Bow Gibbs, widow of the late Herman R. Gibbs and the oldest white settler in the state of Minnesota, died at the family homestead in Rose Town, Ramsey county, at the age of eighty two years.

Mrs Mary A. Geld, seventy years old, who was a resident of St. Paul for half a century, died at the home of her son, Coroner R. L. C. Geld, at Red Wing.

Charles H. Colgrove, aged eighty one years, resident of Minneapolis for thirty years, real estate and business broker, is dead.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

The action of Attorney General Wickersham in obtaining an injunction at Hannibal, Mo., restraining twenty-five Western railroads from making effective the proposed increases in freight rates and the announcement of the decision of the United States supreme court in the Missouri river rate case have aroused a vigorous protest by railroad officers, bankers and manufacturers. Among New York bankers and railroad men it is felt that a recession of business will result, though how severe this setback will be cannot be estimated.

Twenty-five Western railroads were temporarily restrained by United States District Judge David P. Dyer at Hannibal, Mo., from enforcing or making a general advance in inter state freight rates. The injunction was granted on a petition filed by the government on the allegations that the advances in rates were arrived at by the defendants by an agreement with each other and without competition and in violation of the Sherman antitrust act.

The long contested order of the interstate commerce commission reducing the freight rate between the Mississippi river and the Missouri river, as a part of the through rate on through shipments originating in the seaboard territory, was declared to be valid by the United States supreme court.

The New York Central has decided to suspend a $5,000,000 project for improving its system and has requested the cancellation of a $3,000,000 order for cars on account of the injunction granted to the attorney general by Judge Dyer in Missouri restraining railroads from increasing their rates.

The Fort Dodge, Des Moines and Southern road, operating interurbans between Des Moines, Ames, Boone and Fort Dodge, Ia., with 150 miles of track, has been declared insolvent by the United States circuit court.

A new and aggressive transcontinental line is reported as having been provided for in the purchase by financiers back of the Rock Island system of the Lehigh Valley and the Wabash railroads.

A marked break in the price of railroad stocks followed the granting of the injunction against the proposed advance in Western railroad freight rates.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The wave of land speculation which is sweeping through the Middle West, accompanied by a sudden expansion of bank loans and a large accumulation of real estate mortgages by national banks, has somewhat aroused the apprehension of the treasury department. Steps have been taken to check what seems to be a tendency on the part of the banks to indulge too freely in loans secured by farm mortgages.

Official notices of an increase of freight rates by the railroads within the Central Freight association's territory, to take effect on July 1, have been filed with the interstate commerce commission and an increase of freight rates in the Eastern territory are beginning to come in, to take effect on July 5.

The supreme court of the United States has set the corporation tax case for reargument. The case is to be reargued at the beginning of the next term, before a full bench.

The Republicans of the house, in caucus, declared in favor of the prompt passage of the postal savings bank bill.

FINANCING A POSSUM.

Left in the Grocery, It Joins the Meat Trust.

"I been figgerin' 'bout high prices," said Brother Williams, "an' ter save me I can't git de whys ner de wharfo's er 'um. Every time I thinks I got 'um down ter a fine p'int I butts my head agin a brick wall an' I ain't no furder'n whar I started fum.

"Fer instance, meat bein' so high, I tuck ter de swamp an' ketched a possum.

"So fur, so good.

"I wuz totin' dat possum home w'en de groc'ry sto' man stopped me an' say ter me: 'Dat possum ain't fat nuff ter eat right off, an' yo' is too po' ter keep him twel he git fat. Leave him wid me, an' I'll keep him whar dere's plenty er scraps, an' by de time he gits ter de eatin' age he'll be fat ez butter. Den yo' kin take him an' put him in de pot an' cook him brown an' juicy, an' all I ax is one plateful.'

"Onct mo', so fur, so good, an' I tuck him at his wo'd an' lef' de possum wid him.

"An' now comes de res' er de story. When I 'lowed dat de possum had been dar long nuff ter git fat I drapped by ter make inquirements, an' dar wuz dat possum, fatter'n de fattes' shoat dat ever wuz put in de pen.

"But de groc'ry man say ter me, he did: 'It hez come ter pass dat I can't let dat possum go on de 'riginal conditions. Yo' see how fat he is, don't yo'? Well, right dar is whar de trouble come in. He got loose one night an' kilt an' eat up two er de bigges' turkeys in de yard, an' one poun' er turkey meat at de market price is wuth mo'n dat whole possum wuz w'en he wuz kotched; den he eat up three hams, an' you knows what de price er meat is sence de trust done raised it. So dat possum ez he now stan's is wuth zackly $18, not countin' a extry 20 cents which I clar fergot!'

"I couldn't see whar I come in on dat propersition, an' ez I couldn't get him ter reason 'bout it I went off ter see a lawyer. De lawyer said he'd charge $5 ter come in de case an den half what he could git out er it. I drapped de possum an' de groc'ryman an' de lawyer right dar an' went home wid de riddle er high prices rattlin' in my brain, but I ain't no wiser today'n what I wuz yistiddy. All I knows is I never wants nuttin' mo' ter do wid a possum dat gits fat nuff ter fergit his raisin' an' jine de meat trust."—Atlanta Constitution.

KNEW ENOUGH TO QUIT.

In a majority of cases when a fellow has scrimped and worked hard a score of years to accumulate a competence for old age he has acquired physical and mental habits which make it hard for him to let loose and take life easier, to enjoy the well earned fruit of his thrift and industry. But now and then one meets the man who knows enough to quit before the capacity to enjoy the good things of life is extinct. We ran across him the other day. A dozen years ago he bought a ranch; was long on perseverance and industry, but short on cash. In the years succeeding he worked hard and let nothing keep him from developing his property in the best possible manner, and it is fair to assume that his good wife and the children shared in this work so far as they were able. The years of hard work did much to undermine his health, and a few months ago he sensibly came to the conclusion that he would sell his holding and take life easier. He disposed of his property at a good figure, moved to town and bought a commodious residence property. He has ordered an automobile and will add this pastime to others which are within his reach. This man has good horse sense. Far better for one to do as he has done than to keep on in the treadmill until health is gone and everybody in the home has become sick of the grind and scrimp and has little zest for what the coming days may hold. Many would get a vast amount of happiness out of living if they did as this man has done and let up before it is too late to do any good.

ORCHARD HEATING DEVICES.

When the fruit ranchmen in several sections of the west where spring frosts are likely to occur were first confronted with this menace to their industry they seemed to consider themselves victims of natural forces and well nigh helpless. But within the past few years necessity has proved the mother of invention, and they have devised methods whereby they have been able to protect their trees at blossom time against damage by frost. Among these devices oil pots—simple lamps adapted to the burning of crude oil—and little stoves for the burning of soft coal have proved effective methods of keeping the temperature above the freezing point. In some other sections where wood is plentiful as good or even better results have been secured by building from twelve to fifteen small wood fires per acre. In one case in which these wood fires were used by a friend in a western valley last spring he protected his ten acre orchard for seven nights at a cost of $5 per acre during the frosty period. He had previously tried oil pots and coal and yet found wood fires more effective in giving the desired result. While little has been done along this line in central and eastern orchards, there are many springs when the prospective crops could be protected by just such means.

PRACTICAL CONSERVATION.

The most direct and practical way for the average corn belt farmer to do a little conserving of natural resources on his own account is to make a more economical disposal of the products raised on his own farm. For some this will mean putting a stop to the grain selling type of farming in vogue for years and the feeding of raw products to beef steers, hogs and dairy cows. For others who may have already taken this step ahead it will mean the installation of the silo for the more complete utilization of the large quantity of corn which is handled in such a slovenly manner in so many sections. For some others it will mean a more rational disposal of the homemade fertilizers, much of the strength and value of which are lost by leeching and exposure to weather, and the best way out in this is the use of a manure spreader at the proper time. These types of conservation of resources may not be very spectacular or elicit a great amount of public applause, but they will do more to increase a fellow's financial rating and cause prosperity and plenty in the land than any other single project which is today receiving attention.

COMFORT IN THE HOME.

Order and neatness in the home are desirable conditions, but in some homes they are insisted upon at the expense of other things that are of vastly greater importance—peace and quiet, harmony and all around enjoyment of home life. It is easy perhaps to overlook the fact that the folks in the house and their well being are more vital considerations than carpets, furniture or absence of dust and dirt. There is a happy mean between order and disorder, comfort and misery, and good sense will usually indicate where it lies.

It seems more than the average man can do to operate a gasoline engine day after day and still maintain his church standing.

The cheapest fruit trees are those which make the most vigorous growth in a given time and not necessarily those which have been bought at the lowest price.

The flock of hens and the family horse or cow will greatly appreciate the fresh lawn cuttings, and, more than this, their condition will be better for having the relish.

The wooden barrel or pail can be kept from going to pieces during the hot weather if it is kept covered, enough moisture circulating to keep the staves from getting loose.

A pound of tobacco stems or leaves or a package of strong smoking tobacco steeped in a small quantity of warm water and diluted to five gallons is an effective spray for the green aphis, which does much damage to fruit trees in many sections.

A well known poultry breeder and judge of poultry a good many years ago expressed the view that the word "standard bred" as applied to poultry might be properly applied to fowls which would score 85 per cent or better on the basis of the standard of requirement in vogue for the breed in question.

Where bearded barley forms part of the roughage ration or where foxtail is mixed in with timothy and clover it is well to keep rather close watch of the horses' mouths, as the beards are likely to become bedded in the tender portions of the gums or of the inner lips. Should such a condition be found the cause of the irritation should be removed and if feasible a kind of hay substituted which is free from the offending cause.

According to a recent decision of the department of agriculture the name Rocky Ford muskmelons can hereafter only be used in advertising melons produced in the celebrated Colorado melon district, while similarly the phrase Indian River as applied to oranges may only be commercially applied to those raised along this particular river in Florida. Heretofore these terms have been very freely and generally used. The decision of the department will mean an added value in these terms or trademarks to those who are legally entitled to use them.

Not satisfied with working off on unsuspecting patrons trees that are not true to name, some fruit tree representatives will even go so far as to substitute seedlings for the variety ordered. The seedling tree, the shoot from a root which has not been root grafted, budded or top worked, is usually distinguished by its finer leaf with rougher edge, its tendency to send out frequent shoots at right angles to the main stem or branches and its disposition to revert to the original thorny crab stage. Such seedlings in an orchard plot are absolutely worthless and should be top grafted with some known and valuable variety.

Experiments which have been conducted by a number of state experiment stations in the matter of smudging fruit trees to prevent frost damage would seem to indicate that it is not the heat generated by the smudge or fire that keeps the fruit from freezing, but that the smoke generated forms a blanket which keeps cold air from penetrating the smoke zone and holds down the heat radiating from the earth. The smudge, according to this view, is a means of heat conservation rather than heat production. It also further serves the purpose of obscuring the light of the sun in the early morning hours, thus preventing a rapid thawing of blossoms that may have been frostbitten.

As a result of experiments which were conducted at the Colorado horticultural station last season by Professor Weldon, field entomologist, it was found that flowers of sulphur, one pound to three gallons of water, with enough soap so that the sulphur would mix with the water, was a very effective insecticide when used as a summer spray for the brown aphis. Apple, peach, plum, cherry, pear and almond trees were found more or less affected by the pest. Tobacco preparations were found effective in killing the mites, but not the eggs, several treatments being required to dispose of the mites. Oil sprays penetrated and killed many of the eggs, but were found unsafe to use with waters strongly impregnated with alkali.

While the mistletoe occupies a sort of poetic place in people's estimation and is the cause of interesting transactions at the holiday season and on sundry social occasions, it is produced at a fearful cost in tree life, particularly of a few varieties of oaks, on which it depends for its existence. White oaks three feet and more in diameter and solid to the core are done to death by this parasitic pest. While the seeds of the mistletoe are deposited by birds on fences, buildings and even on the trunk and limbs of fruit trees, they seem to take root only on rough surfaces, the limbs of the oak being especially favorable in this particular. Once the root of the little plant gets a foothold it grows vigorously, its tissue becoming closely united with that of the limb on which it grows. In sections where it is found it is often gathered at holiday time and shipped to the larger markets, where from $8 to $10 per ton is paid for it.

SNAPSHOTS AT CELEBRITIES

John Dalzell, Head of New Rules Committee.

Congressman John Dalzell of Pennsylvania, chairman of the new committee on rules of the national house of representatives, is well equipped by experience and training for the duties of his new position. Mr. Dalzell represents Pittsburg and has served continuously in congress since 1887.

The members of the new committee take rank as follows: Dalzell of Pennsylvania, Smith of Iowa, Boutell of Illinois, Lawrence of Massachusetts, Fassett of New York and Smith of California, Republicans, and Clark of Missouri, Underwood of Alabama, Dixon of Indiana and Fitzgerald of New York, Democrats.

Mr. Dalzell was born in New York city in 1845, but he has lived in Pittsburg since he was two years old. He received a college education, being graduated from Yale in 1865. He studied law and two years later was admitted to the bar. He soon developed great adaptability for the profession and advanced rapidly. At the time of his first election to congress he was a partner of John H. Hampton in one of the most successful law firms in Pittsburg. He was also assistant solicitor of the Pennsylvania railroad, a very lucrative position.

To Work For Humanity.

The relief of suffering humanity is to be the life work of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., if congress sanctions the incorporation of the Rockefeller foundation. It is planned that young Rockefeller shall be the executive head of the proposed institution, and with that end in view he has been gradually withdrawing from the directorate of the big enterprises with which he has been connected.

Young Mr. Rockefeller is now thirty-three years old. He was born in Cleveland in 1877 and has been thoroughly trained in the methods of handling large affairs. In personal appearance he is rather thick set, very pale, smooth shaven and wears glasses. Until a couple of years ago he was the leader of a Bible class at the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, New York city.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Although a very sedate young man, Mr. Rockefeller is not without humor. In one of his Sunday talks he told a story about a young man who asked his father the best way to propose to a girl.

"Just slip the ring on her finger," said the old man, "and say to her, 'When this you see, remember me.'"

"But," said John D., Jr., "when he came to put the ring on the maiden's finger he forgot and murmured, 'When this you see, remember father.'"

Mr. Rockefeller was married nine years ago to Miss Abby Aldrich, daughter of Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island. They have two children.

The Scrap Book

Rough on Cannon.

Speaker Cannon met the Rev. Henry N. Couden, chaplain of the house of representatives, in a corridor one day.

"WHY, MR. SPEAKER!"

"You are an old hypocrite!" he said roughly.

"Why, why, Mr. Speaker!" protested Dr. Couden in great surprise.

"Well, if you are not, I am," said the speaker, "and I have just been hearing about it."

Then, while he linked his arm in that of the chaplain, he told the story:

"The other day in the house gallery a lady approached a doorkeeper who was protecting the morning prayer from interruption. She attempted to push past, but was restrained. 'But I must go in,' she said. 'I want to see that man Cannon.'

"'Just wait a moment,' said the doorkeeper.

"'But I must see him. I have heard so much about him,' persisted the woman.

"AND HIM PRAYING TOO!"

"To save trouble the man let her in. On the threshold she stopped a moment and saw Chaplain Couden with his head bowed in prayer.

"'Oh, the old hypocrite,' she ejaculated, 'and him praying, too!'"—St. Louis Republic.

What Shall I Do to Be Just?

What shall I do to be just?
What shall I do for the gain
Of the world, for its sadness?
Teach me, O seers that I trust!
Chart me the difficult main
Leading out of my sorrow and madness;
Preach me the purging of pain.

Shall I wrench from my finger the ring
To cast to the tramp at my door?
Shall I tear off each luminous thing
To drop in the palm of the poor?
What shall I do to be just?
Teach me, O ye in the light,
Whom the poor and the rich alike trust.
My heart is aflame to be right.
—Hamlin Garland.

A Witty Reply.

Whenever the United States supreme court on hearing the argument of counsel for plaintiff in error is entirely satisfied that he has no case the chief justice is apt to say to counsel for defendant in error that the court does not care to hear further argument. At one time Hon. Matthew Carpenter, from Wisconsin, was counsel for plaintiff in error and opened the case. Before he was through the court was satisfied that there was nothing in it, and so when he had concluded and counsel for defendant in error arose Chief Justice Waite said, "The court does not care to hear any further argument."

Counsel for the other side was a little deaf and, although noticing that the chief justice spoke, did not hear what he had said and, turning to Mr. Carpenter, who sat beside him, asked what had been said.

"Oh, hang it!" replied Carpenter in tones audible to the bench. "The chief justice said he would rather give you the case than hear you talk."

Wanted a Diagram.

A waiter at a western hotel said to one of the guests at the dinner table: "What kind of pie do you wish? We have peach, apple, pumpkin and lemon."

The guest replied, "Give me peach, apple and pumpkin," to which the waiter, with a shrug of his shoulders, a curl of his lips and an appropriate gesture, said, with sarcasm, "What's the matter with the lemon?"

An Englishman sitting at an adjoining table, who overheard the conversation, now said to his neighbor, "I beg your pardon, but what was the matter with the lemon?"

Stung!

Two strangers met at one of the small tables in a dining car, says the New York Sun. They found a common bond in the effort to secure something to eat, and by the time the coffee came they were great friends.

"I wonder if you will do me a favor," remarked the first one as he covered his check with a substantial bill. The other man seemed receptive, and he continued:

"Have you a lower berth for tonight?" The man across the table nodded. "Well, I'm traveling with my mother, who is rather well along in life, and I'm anxious to make her comfortable. Would you be kind enough to give her your berth?"

"I should be delighted," responded the stranger.

They went back to the sleeper, where the accommodating man was presented to the other's mother, a white haired old lady with a charming face. The good Samaritan had exchanged his lower for the upper belonging to the old lady, and he was radiating with a sense of charitable kindness. It led him to remark affably to the other man:

"But where are you going to sleep?"

"Oh, that's all right," was the answer; "that's my lower berth over there."

VOL. XXVII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1910 NUMBER 25

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

RECLAIMING WET LANDS.

Extracts from an Address by County Attorney Wm. J. Brown of Warren.

Gives Some Interesting Facts Regarding Drainage Matters in This Section.

"The drainage ditches we construct for the purpose of affording a rapid and ample outlet for surface water, rather than to relieve swamp conditions already established. Our system of drainage usually calls for ditches every mile. Experience has shown that when we go into territory to drain it, it is cheaper and more satisfactory to those assessed for the system, and of more uniform benefits to the territory affected, to make the system under consideration complete within itself. That is, make it complete and sufficient to drain the particular watershed under consideration. There has been a great deal of loss suffered and a great deal of unnecessary damage created by attempting to drain a designated territory by a ditch system which is insufficient. The outlet is important and we have found uniformly disastrous to construct a drainage ditch with an outlet anywhere else than in a running stream. We have emptied them into large coulees which appeared to the engineer at the time of construction to be ample, but the same has not been a success, and in every case where this has been done, a large amount of expense has been incurred in removing sediment deposited and extending the ditch to a natural outlet."

"Minnesota has hoarded a school fund of many millions of dollars, gained at the cost of the loss of [illegible] thousands of desirable residents, and at the further cost of retarding the development of the northern half of the state."

"Take for instance, such counties as Beltrami, St. Louis and Koochiching, where the largest volume of state lands exists. In these counties, as well as elsewhere, the actual settler living upon and improving his farm is burdened with the building of roads, to improve not only his own land, but the vacant state lands which surround him."

"School houses are built, private drainage projects constructed, roads and road ditches, bridges and culverts installed, and numberless other public improvements provided for, and the struggling pioneer, who is least able to do so, bears the burden. All of these improvements enhance the value of the state land holdings in that vicinity, and the appraisers of state land then fix this enhanced value according to the value of surrounding lands, and under existing law the lands cannot be sold for less than the appraised value."

"All praise to the pioneer, and while we are dwelling upon his industry and daring, let us take from him the task of building up the value of lands belong to this great state. The state at large and its school fund is more able to bear the burden than is the poor and struggling settler. It would seem that the northern part of the state should not bear the whole burden of providing for the greater enlargement of the school.

If further increase be desired, let the increase be made by the taxation of all the property in the state, and not by further burdening this portion of it. I have no select plan to suggest, but I do urge the enactment of legislation that will compel state lands to contribute their quota to the cost of upbuilding that part of the country wherein the lands are situated."

"The years of 1909 and 1910 have certainly been the banner years for drainage in the northern part of the state. The state drainage commission has been particularly aggressive and the attitude of that commission has not only been beneficial because of the large amount of drainage ditches started by the commission, but because of the healthy public sentiment and attitude towards drainage, which the commission has created."

"At the present time within the confines of the state of Minnesota, there are at least 70 large dredging machines which are excavating drainage ditches at the rate of three million yards of excavation per month."

MAY OPEN RAINY RIVER

Resolution Recommending the Opening of Natural Waterway Is Made Public.

Would Be of Great Benefit to All Northern Minnesota Counties

One resolution that was adopted by the committee on Resolutions at the Crookston convention was not made public at the time, and has just been given out. The resolution was not brought before the convention because it was of an international character, but the committee on resolutions instructed W. R. McKenzie, secretary of the association, to give it publicity later.

The resolution reads as follows:

"We recommend that the Federal Government turn its attention toward encouraging the commercial development over a vast area by opening the natural water course for transportation purposes, between the Great Lakes and the Lake of the Wood."

The water course mentioned is the Rainy River, which now forms the boundary line between the United States and Canada in northern and northeastern Minnesota. Because of this fact, the question becomes one of international importance.

The Rainy River has its source in Cook county, flows west through the lake region of upper Minnesota, thru Rainy Lake and thence to the Lake of the Woods, its outlet being finally Hudson Bay. This river is the only means of transportation that many of the settlers of northern Minnesota have at their command. The Canadian Pacific and the Minnesota and International railroads are the only ones that tap this district. The Canadian lines are branches and the International serves Beltrami and Koochiching counties, so the district covered is small.

Six of Minnesota's largest counties will derive direct benefit from the opening of the Rainy River. Roseau, Beltrami, Koochiching, St. Louis, Lake, and Cook counties all border on the river and the Canadian boundary. The northern part of the counties are heavily timbered and are thinly settled. The timber is being cut off rapidly and experiments show that the cutover land is suited for agricultural purposes, especially grazing and dairying.

Secretary McKenzie has sent copies of the resolution to the Minnesota congressman urging them to act on the matter and see that the river is opened as soon as possible. The resolution, backed by the thirty one counties of the north, is sure to have some weight. An effort is to be made to have the Canadian government act with our Federal government in this matter.

If congress decides to take definite action on the matter, it is probable that a canal with three locks will be built, connecting the Rainy and Pigeon rivers. The Pigeon rises but a short way over the divide from the Rainy, and flows into Lake Superior. Its source is 700 feet above the lake and it always has plenty of water. This would give a big waterway from Hudson Bay on the north to New York city via the Great Lakes, Erie canal and Hudson river; and to New Orleans by way of the Great Lakes and Chicago canal.

Holt Is Booming.

Andrew Bjerk, one of the prosperous farmers living up near Holt, was in the city last Saturday attending to some business matters. Holt is enjoying a big boom this summer, so Mr. Bjerk says, and he looks for it soon to be one of the best towns on the north line.

COMMISSION IS FAVORABLE

Will Support a Bill to Tax State Land for Township and County Purposes.

Would Be of Great Benefit to Settlers in Some Portions of Northern Minnesota.

Members of the tax commission have agreed to a man that they will support the bill to be introduced in the legislature next winter providing that state lands may be taxed for local purposes. Auditor Hayner or Bemidji, says the Pioneer of that place, has been in Minneapolis for several days and while there saw the members personally, and they declared that they are willing to go before the committee and recommend such a bill.

Now that the bill has behind it the authority of the tax commission, the northern men who are pushing it do not expect to have as much trouble as they expected in getting it through. It is probable that it will be introduced in the House and the Senate at the same time.

This bill is due to be one of the most popular ever introduced by a northern member. If passed, it means that the farmer who is located in the center of a plot of state land will not have to stand all of the expense of good roads, ditches, etc., but that the state will pay its share, since the state land will be benefitted as much as that of the farmer. It will mean a good many thousands of dollars for local improvements.

Mr. Hayner is now in communication with other northern counties getting their support for the bill. The southern counties do not appreciate the fact that much of the land in the northern counties belongs to the state and that the few settlers here have to pay for all the local improvements. The southern counties have long been settled, but the development of the northern counties has been retarded because of the non-taxation of state lands.

The constitution of the state says that the state lands used for public purposes cannot be taxed, but as these lands are not used for public purposes no opposition is expected to develope on that score.

Minnesota's Productiveness.

Southern Minnesota produces, according to figures given by Charles P. Craig of Duluth at the Crookston convention, agricultural products worth $430,000,000 annually. It is this vast primary wealth that makes the richness and greatness of that section of the state.

In spite of the great wealth produced from the mines and forests of northern Minnesota, it lags behind in population and prosperity because its agricultural development is delayed.

According to experts quoted by Mr. Craig, southern Minnesota's production is only half its capacity, and the soil of northern Minnesota is susceptible of a larger production per acre than that of southern Minnesota.

But at a rate of production similar to that of southern Minnesota, the thirty counties of the Northern Minnesota Development association are capable of yielding $750,000,000 in agricultural products each year. Developed to its utmost potentialities, the soil of northern Minnesota is capable of producing wealth each year that staggers the imagination.—Duluth Herald.

Bankers warned.

Warnings have been sent out by the bankers' association for the bankers to be on the lookout for a man who claims to want to buy a farm, but in reality is working bankers and real estate men to cash his worthless checks.

His graft is to get the banker or real estate man to show him possible bargains in farms, one of which he decides on and wishes to buy, and after gaining the confidence of the victim, asks him to cash a check before he leaves town.

Simons to Be Head of New Bank.

L. O. Simons was in town Monday and when interviewed about the report that a new bank in which he is to be interested, is to be started in Red Lake Falls, he said: "Yes, the report is true—all true. We have bought the Lemieux block and we bought it for bank purposes. The bank will be opened up just as soon as arrangements can be made. We hope to have the location on the corner, though Mr. Schreiter's lease runs for a time yet. But the bank will be started soon either in the corner room or the room occupied by the Sunshine store."

L. O. Simons, M. C. Tifft of the insurance commissioners department and three other St. Paul Bankers have made application for a charter for the Farmers National Bank of Red Lake Falls. Besides these, others will be interested in the new bank.

From the foregoing the natural conclusions is that the new bank will be opened in a few weeks.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Destroys Cut Worms.

As the farmers and gardeners hereabouts are being troubled to some extent by the attack of the cut worm on their vegetables, especially the following from State Entomologist, Prof. F. L. Washburn, may be of some value:

"Some relief may be had from cut worms by the use of poisoned baits, made and applied as follows: Make a bran mash, sweeten with molasses or brown sugar, and add enough Paris green to make it a decided green color. A big tablespoonful of this placed at intervals among the plants just at nightfall, will attract the cut worms, and kill a large number. These baits should not be put too close to the plants for fear rain will wash the Paris green against the plants and injure them. Cut worms do not die immediately upon taking this poison, but it is sure death after a few hours. Traps, consisting of pieces of board, placed about the garden, may be used, under which the cut worms will be found in the morning. Some birds prey upon them, and various parasites and predaceous insects attack them. In the case of field crops, where it is possible, frequent cultivation will turn the worms up, enabling birds and other enemies to prey upon them."

Ice Business Sold.

A deal was made last week whereby George Elder sold the business of the Thief River Falls Ice company to Claud Smith, who will conduct the business in the future.

ADOPTS PENSION SYSTEM

Soo Directors Approve a Plan for the Retiring of Men Based in Age and Service.

A Number of Employes in Thief River Falls Will Be Entitled to a Pension.

Any Soo Line employee who has been with the company fifteen consecutive years, and who has reached the age of 65, will be eligible for retirement after July 9 with a pension for life that will be equal to 1 per cent a month of the average monthly salary drawn for ten years prior to retirement, multiplied by the number of years of service. An employee whose salary had averaged $100 a month for his last ten years of employment, would, therefore, draw $25 a month, if he had been with the company twenty-five years.

Provisions are that no pension paid shall be less than $15 a month, that only continuous service shall be computed, but that where an employee has been discharged and reinstated within a year, shall have been away on leave of absence or shall have been let out temporarily through reduction of working force, such absence shall not be considered as breaking the continuity. In order that the pension plan may not become too severe a drain on the company, it is provided that no person not experienced in railroad work shall be employed by the company who has passed the age of 35, except for special service, and no experienced person more than 45 years old.

The company will not go back beyond 1893 in computation covering the allotment to present employees who may retire. The Soo was incorporated in 1888, and embraced some companies dating from 1883.

The directors approved the plan and employees entitled to pensions are now being requested to send in applications. The pension board is composed of Edmund Pennington, chairman; W. L. Martin, G. R. Huntington, T. A. Foque, C. W. Gardner, H. B. Dike and William H. Schutt.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

Mrs. Dennis Connely Passed Away Tuesday Morning at about 9:30

Was a Pioneer and a Woman Held in Very High Esteem In This Community.

Mrs Anna Connely, wife of Dennis Connely, died Tuesday morning at about 9:30 after an illness of only a few days duration. For the past three months, Mrs. Connely, who had always enjoyed the best of health, had been confined to her bed more or less, but it was only a few days before her death that her condition became critical, and a complication of diseases set in that could not be conquered by medical science.

The deceased was a woman of strong character and cheerful disposition and her loss will be severely felt by the community. She was born 56 years ago in Bellville, Canada, her maiden name being Anna Hughes. In 1876 she was married to Dennis Connely and they made their home at Bellville until 1882, when they removed to what is now Thief River Falls and settled upon a homestead on the east side, part of this land now being in incorporated limits of the city of Thief River Falls. Later Mr. Connely purchased the land just west of the city where their home has been since that time.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Connely leaves six children to mourn her demise. They are Mrs Robert McGinn, Miss Anna Connely, Michael and James Connely, Mrs. James Herrick and Miss Nora Connely.

The funeral services will be held this morning from St. Bernard's church, of which the deceased had been a prominent and devoted member ever since its organization here, the Rev. Fr. Adolph Dingmann officiating.

Scared Into Sound Health.

Mr. B. F. Kelley, Springfield, Ill., writes: "A year ago I began to be troubled with my kidneys and bladder which grew worse until I became alarmed at my condition. I suffered also with dull heavy headaches and the action of my bladder was annoying and painful. I read of Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them a few weeks the headaches left me, the action of my bladder was again normal, and I was free of distress."—Sold by all Druggists

Ball Game Sunday.

There will be a game of ball Sunday between the bookkeepers and the clerks. Ed Irvine is to be captain of the former aggregation while George Curran will be the chief of the counter Jumpers. In order to buy balls and bats, an admission fee of five cents—three for ten—is to be charged at the gate and good looking young ladies will be admitted free. The game promises to be a warmly contested one from start to finish.

The Conservation of Nature's Resources.

Applies as well to our physical state as to material things. C. J. Budlong, Washington, R. I. realized his condition and took warning before it was too late. He says: "I suffered severely from kidney trouble, the disease being hereditary in our family. I have taken four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and now consider myself thoroughly cured. This should be a warning to all not to neglect taking Foley's Kidney Remedy until it is too late." Sold by all Druggists.

DRY OUT IN THE WEST

Math Barzen Returns Monday from an Extensive Trip Through the West.

Says That There Will Be a Total Crop Failure in Montana and Parts of Canada.

Math Barzen, who with Louis Hanson left a few weeks ago on a trip through Western North Dakota, Montana and parts of the Canadian Northwest, returned home Monday evening. Mr. Hanson will remain in the west for a few more days.

"Every time I make a trip through the west," said Mr. Barzen, "I come home better satisfied with Thief River Falls and the surrounding country." In Montana, Mr. Barzen says that it is very dry and the crop failure will be total. Settlers have gone into this country at a very rapid rate during the past few years and on every quarter section as far as the eye can see from the railroad track, a family is living. They have had little or no rain this year and there is not a blade of grass to be seen for miles and miles. Most of the settlers have spent all the money they had in breaking up their land and what will now become of them is going to be a serious question.

In Canada, northwest of Kenmare for a number of miles, the crop conditions are good, Mr. Barzen says, but west of Swift Current the conditions are the same as in Montana.

Mahnomen Register of Deeds in Trouble.

St. Paul, Minn., June 14—J. H. Sullivan, register of deeds of Mahnomen county, is charged with misfeasance in office.

The complaint was today lodged with Governor Eberhart by C. H. Sanders of that county. Mr. Sanders has appealed to the governor for the removal of the register of deeds, and his complaint was sent to the attorney general for an opinion. Lyndon A. Smith, writing for the attorney general's department, says that the charges, if proved, would constitute misfeasance in office.

Misfeasance, it is pointed out, is a criminal offense, and is usually tried by jury. It is a matter in which the governor has no jurisdiction, and should be taken up by the local authorities.

It is said by Mr. Sanders that Sullivan's records show many changes of descriptions, which would constitute misfeasance.

It is highly probable that further action will be demanded by the governor.

Bids Wanted.

Bids will be received by the town board of the Town of North at the office of Olsen Bros., just south of the Synod church, on June 25, at 2 o'clock, for the construction of a grade with ditch on one side, between the S. E. ¼ of Sec. 19 and S. W. ¼ of Sec. 20, ditch to be 18 inches deep with a 4 to 1 slant.

Also for a grade between Sec. 7 & 18 and 210 rods of the line between Sec. 8 & 17 with ditches on both sides 18 in. deep with a 4 to 1 slant.

And also for the grade between Sec. 14 & 23 and half of line between Sec. 13 & 24 with ditch on one side two feet deep with a 4 to 1 slant, this and above grades to be ready for public travel.

Thos H. Bjerke,

Pitches With Broken Arm.

To pitch an entire game with a broken arm and allow but three hits would be considered quite a feat, yet that is what Cadreau, the Indian twirler for the Minot Magicians, accomplished in his game with Valley City on Thursday night.

The Indian, formerly of Fosston, and who has played ball in Thief River Falls on divers occasions, it will be remembered, was hit in the arm by a pitched ball three weeks ago and his arm was laid up for some time. It was thought that it was simply a bruise, but an X-ray examination revealed the fact that one of the bones in the forearm had been broken. Instead of the cries of quitter which were hurled at the plucky Indian, he should be given credit for more nerve than the average man would care to display.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editor News: I wish to announce through the columns of your paper that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator for this legislative district, at the coming primary election. I will make known at some later date the platform upon which I will solicit the support of the voters of the district.

Ada, Minn., May 3rd, 1910.

A. L. HANSON.

The sudden death of State Treasurer Clarence C. Dinehart removes one of the most prominent and brilliant young men of the Northwest. Four years ago, when only twenty-nine years of age, he was elected state treasurer and two years ago again elected by a large majority. He could have had the office for another term without opposition, but decided to enter a more active field and would have been a candidate for congress in the Second district with very good chances of success had he lived.

Congressman Steenerson of this state must be given credit for compelling Congress to stand pat against ship subsidy legislation. Recent dispatches from Washington say that the resolution introduced by him, under which the ship subsidy scandal is being probed by a House Committee, makes it impossible to secure any legislation of this character at the current session. Friends of the measure fear that his activity in this connection may defer action on a ship subsidy bill for a good many years to come. Minnesota generally is anti-subsidy, and if he can stave off this legislation, its people will have special reason to feel kindly toward him.—Litchfield Review.

THE INSUBORDINATE CLERK.

Not long ago some subordinate employes of the Sugar Trust were sent to jail for the part played by them in defrauding the Government out of customs duties. They merely followed the system of the shop, like good, dutiful clerks; but their punishment was generally held to be quite proper.

In a governmental investigation, evidence of some importance was being withheld. A mere stenographer, against the wishes and interests of his chief, took it upon himself to supply this evidence. He thereby performed a service to the public; but, of course, he was promptly discharged by his aggrieved chief, and it is somewhat confusing to find that he is rather generally held to have proved himself unworthy of remaining in the Government's employ. There has been considerable insubordination at Washington of late. For opposing his superior, Mr. North was obliged to leave the Census Bureau. For writing a letter to a Senator, involving criticism of a Cabinet officer, Pinchot was dismissed. In both these cases there was room for argument that the men, though insubordinate in respect to their official superiors, were really loyal to the larger interest—to the Government itself. The insubordination of the stenographer seems on the whole to be viewed less tolerantly—probably because he held a small job and got a small salary.

Independence on the part of a mere clerk rather shocks the common-sense of propriety. If a Sugar Trust clerk had divulged what he knew of revenue frauds very likely he would have been regarded as an undesirable employee. On the other hand, he would have kept out of jail.

—Saturday Evening Post.

DANDELIONS.

The time is coming, if it is not already arrived, when this town will have to make a concerted and organized attack upon the dandelions or bid good by to all hope of velvet lawns.

It will be no easy task, but the longer it is postponed the harder it will be. It will have to be concerted and organized to be effective. There isn't much use in one man's toiling to kill the dandelions on his own lawn when his neighbor neglects his duty in that respect. The dandelion is cunningly equipped with means of self-propagation. Its seed is supplied with a delicate parachute by which the winds waft it gently over from the lawn of the neglected man to the lawn of the man who sweats and toils and worries to keep his ground sightly and green. Its yellow heads are quickly wind-fertilized, and turn from yellow to white very rapidly, producing an enormous crop of seeds, so that if dandelion seeds were a marketable commodity anybody could get rich on a few square feet of ground by raising them. Only in all probability if dandelions were a marketable crop they would cease to grow so bountifully and would need careful nursing.

The dandelion pest seems worse this year than it ever was before. Most of its fellow-composites wait until late summer or fall; but the dandelion starts business at the earliest possible moment of the spring, and has a crop of seeds ready for distribution before most other flowers are ready to blossom. It started earlier than usual this year, and now every neglected spot is a pond of yellow bloom, which quickly turns to white as the seeds mature, to give way to another crop of blossoms which in turn produces seeds.

Every neglected lawn or vacant lot is a center of seed distribution, and not even the man who spends half his time grubbing dandelions can keep his lawn clear of them. Left to themselves, they destroy the turf, drive out the grass, and turn a smooth and velvety lawn to a rough and unlovely surface in a short time.

The dandelion has beauty, and that is why a beauty-loving woman many years ago, brought some of the seeds here from the East—for that and for "greens," it is said. But while there is beauty in a few dandelions, they refuse to remain few, and today they form a scourge which threatens the beauty of the city, and that must be destroyed before we can hope to realize its possibilities of loveliness.

It is stated that the people of Fort Collins, Colo., have exterminated the dandelion by spraying their lawns with a 20 per cent solution of iron sulphate. That is worth looking into. It is said that the spray kills weeds and dandelions without injuring the grass. It sounds well, and somebody should try it. It sounds too good to be true, however.

But there must be a general concerted attack all along the line to make the campaign against dandelions successful. It must include not some of the lawns but all of them, and not the lawns, alone, but the vacant lots as well. It will be a herculean task, but unless the city is willing to let this yellow plague gain complete control it is a task that will have to be taken up.—Duluth Herald.

Local Team Won.

The game of ball played Sunday between the team from Red Lake Falls and the one from this city was not very swift. In the first two or three innings the home team made about as many errors as it was possible and Red Lake Falls succeeded in getting in ten scores. The Red Lake Falls team, however, succeeded in making its share of errors and the final score was 24 to 10 in favor of Thief River Falls. The pitcher for the Red Lake Falls team, Theodore Garseau, Jr., sustained a sprained ankle while running bases and this handicapped the team to a large extent.

Thief River Falls entertained the St. Paul Jobbers and Manufacturers' association for an hour and a half Monday afternoon. The party arrived on a special train over the Great Northern at a little before five o'clock and remained until after six. They were driven about the city in carriages and automobiles after which they visited the various stores of the city and cultivated a closer relation with our business men.

The party travel in a special electric-lighted train, consisting of five sleepers, one dining car, one baggage car, one dynamo car and a business car. The Minnesota State Band of twenty-five pieces accompanies the party and give a street concert at every point visited. The object of the trip is to visit the trade at their own places of business, and become better acquainted with the business men of Northern Minnesota and the resources of the great country in which they live. The slogan of the party is "Northern Minnesota has a future, St. Paul is to help." The silken banner carried at the head of the band reads, "We are for you." The members lose no opportunity to emphasize the importance of St. Paul as the great jobbing and manufacturing center of the Northwest.

Big Deal Made.

Crookston Times: Well authenticated news has just been received to the effect that W. J. Murphy, of Minneapolis, has closed a gigantic power and light deal by which the properties which he owns, including the Grand Forks Gas & Electric Co. plant at Grand Forks, The Red River Power Co.'s holdings, including the dam site at Huot several miles up the Red Lake river from this city in Louisville township with several sections of surrounding land and the Marcus Johnson power plant at Red Lake Falls and the Red Lake Falls electric light plant passes into the hands of the H. M. Byllesby Co., of Chicago, which concern now owns the Fargo Electric Plant and the one at Stillwater, with others.

The deal involved a consideration of $750,000 and is one of the largest ever closed in this section of the northwest, by far the largest in that line.

The Crookston Water Works and Light Co. plant which Mr. Murphy owns, is not involved in the deal in any way, and, as far as known, the plant here will not be affected in any way.

Work For Yourselves.

It looks like bad management to us, to see the owner of a quarter section of fertile land in eastern Red Lake County going out to work by the day. There is no crop raised here that does not bring big returns. If a man prefers stock, there is plenty of pasture for them in summer and fine hay meadow for cutting hay for winter, and if you don't like stock, raise chickens. Mr. Ely, of Erie, told us a short time ago, that he had an income of as much as $90.00 per month from poultry raising alone, and at that time he had forty hens setting and two incubators running. Look at that for a business and an income, then guess at the earnings of the owner of land, who is working out by the day. Stop and consider these things, gentlemen. When you work for yourself on your own farm, give your work the same careful attention, that compulsion makes you give when you are working for others, and then notice the difference in your income.

Mark Twain said, "If you are good for anything, stay at home and work your way through the world. If you are not good for anything, go away from home and you will have to work."—Sunbeam.

When Great Inventions Went A-Begging.

Sixty five years ago, on the first of April, Professor Robert Morse accompanied by his associates, stood before congress and offered to sell the patents on the electric telegraph for $100,000. After a long and bitter debate, congress appropriated $30,000 for the construction of a line between Washington and Baltimore in order that the merits of the invention might be fully tested.

It is recorded that President Polk thought the invention a good thing for the government to own, but the postmaster general, in a long report, gave as his opinion that the revenues could never be made to cover the expenditures in the telegraphing of messages. To day in this country alone, the Morse systems are capitalized at $220,000,000.

But this little anecdote is seldom told by the officials of the Western Union Telegraph Company, for it is a matter of history that Prof. Alexander Graham Bell offered to sell his telephone patents to the telegraph company for the paltry sum of $30,000, but the officials of that company only smiled and declared the invention a toy with no commercial value. Today there are more than five million telephones in use in this country earning $150,000,000 annually.

Middle River to Celebrate.

R. D. V. Carr was down from Middle River last week advertising the grand Fourth of July celebration Middle River is going to have this year. The program is to commence at 10 o'clock in the morning with an oration by Hon. E. M. Stanton, of this city. The Newfolden band will furnish the music, and there will be all kinds of games and sports, including a ball game between teams from Middle River and Newfolden. In the evening there is to be a dance in the new Woodmen hall at that place.

The man who makes two blades of grass grow where formerly there was but one is rightly said to be a public benefactor. So, too, is the man who continually speaks well of his town, who points out its advantages, and who breathes a spirit of hopefulness in all his utterances. Such a man helps the business of his town, gets other people to talk about it in the same strain, and he has the satisfaction of seeing the town grow as the result of his boosting and that of others. Local patriotism counts and it is as much needed and as much to be commended in its place as national patriotism.

Dr. Vistaunet, Evenson block.

According to settlers living northeast of here, deer and moose were never so numerous in that section as at present and can be seen almost daily. It is thought that the recent forest fires in the northeastern part of the state resulted in driving many of them this way.

All over the state it has been found that many crimes have been committed by wandering umbrella menders. These fellows use their trade (?) to enter houses, stores, and other places, and become familiar with the surroundings, and then it is easy for them to commit thefts and burglaries afterwards. There are undoubtedly some good men and true, following the business of umbrella menders, wandering over the country. It is best to be on the safe side, and refuse such people admittance to your homes. If your umbrella needs repairing insist that the work be done out of doors where the fellows will have no chance to gain an idea of the interior arrangements of your homes or business places.—Winnebago Enterprise.

Chr. Halvorson, the tuner will call on the receipt of your postal card. (11-tf)

For Sale—Northwest quarter of section seven, town of Highlanding. Land is all high, eighty acres broke, good buildings, drilled soft water well. Price, $17 per acre. Call or write me at Brunkeberg, Minn. T. M. Thorson. (July 1.)

In 1909 a certain piece of state land near Walker, Minnesota, appraised at $6 00 an acre and was offered for sale but found no bidders. This year the same piece sold for $15 50 per acre. This shows the trend of Minnesota lands, especially in the North.

Henry Georgeo, of the Farmers' store, bought from two farmers last Saturday 1,000 pounds of wool, for which he paid $240. Sheep raising, in connection with other farming operations would no doubt make quite an addition to the profits of farmers in this section.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

The Moorhead Convention of the Young People's League will be held in that city June 23-26, 1910. This organization is made up of the young people's societies of the United Norwegian Lutheran churches of America. Many prominent speakers have been secured for the occasion, and it will, no doubt, be a very instructive meeting.

The Minnesota Experiment Station does not recommend the killing of an animal for the purpose of human food within twenty-four hours after feeding. When an animal is on full feed it is impossible to thoroughly drain the veins. Food in the stomach rapidly decomposes after the animal is killed, and the gases generated often flavor the meat disagreeably. Water, however, may be given up to the time of slaughter. It keeps the temperature normal and helps to wash effete matter out of the system. A nicely colored carcass results.

The Ladies Aid of the Swedish Lutheran Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Charles Erickson, one mile south of Woldhall, June 22. All are welcome.

Phil Zeh and son, Emil, left Monday for Kalispell, Mont. The latter will remain there permanently while the former will spend several days out there looking over the country.

Jacob F. Jacobson, Republican candidate for governor two years ago, was in the city Tuesday, being enroute to Greenbush where he went to attend to some business matters.

C. A. Robbecke, Dr. and Mrs. Booren and Miss Florence Robbecke leave tomorrow evening for Vergas to spend Saturday and Sunday at the lake.

A place for everything! Where? In Thief River Falls, Pennington county. The place for sewing machines, sewing machine repairs and sewing machine business is at the Singer Store, corner LaBree Ave. & Bridge St.

Alderman A. H. Fasel was up to Badger the first of of the week. He has taken the contract to build a new banking building for the Scandia American Bank of that place and will start work at once.

Jessie LaBree, of Thief River Falls was transacting business at Highlanding, yesterday and talking a little county division. We came very near trading horses with him, but his horse was on one side of the river and ours on the other, so we had to give up.

Gilbert Granum, who left this city over a year ago and located at Big Fork, Mont., where he was engaged in the hardware business, returned to this city Monday accompanied by his family. He has sold out his business at Big Fork and will make his future home here.

A Pretty Wedding.

The Synod church was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday, June 8, at 8 o'clock, when Miss Ida Cornelia, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Weeks, became the bride of William Sponheim. Rev. Aasted read the beautiful ring ceremony in the presence of 100 invited guests. The "Lohengrin" bridal chorus sounded on the pipe organ as the processional started and after the vows had been exchanged the Mendelssohn Wedding march was played by Miss Emma Backe.

Earl Weeks and Clarence Larson acted as ushers.

The flower girls came first, carrying arm baskets filled with carnations and roses. Helen Weeks, a sister of the bride, and Clara Oen were dressed in white silk over pink.

Miss Pearl Weeks, the tiny sister of the bride, was ring bearer and carried the ring on a white satin cushion. She wore a frock of pale blue silk and preceded the bride to the altar where she was met by the groom who was attended by Hon. E. H. Sponheim of Northwood, N. D. She was given away in marriage by her father and was gowned in a white Duchess satin princess, made with a train, and elaborated with embroidered laces. A Tulle veil fell to the hem of her gown and was held in place by a wreath of lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Josie Weeks, sister of the bride, was maid of honor; the misses Clara and Hannah Sponheim, sisters of the groom, were bride's maids. They were all dressed in white and carried arm boquets of pink and white carnations.

The church was prettily decorated in lavender and white. This color scheme was tastily carried out in using ferns, lilacs, roses and carnations. Where the bride met the groom an arch of ferns and carnations was erected.

After the ceremony the bridal couple, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Weeks and Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Sponheim, received the guests in the church parlors which were exquisitely decorated in pink and white bands and carnations, and hung with smilax, palms and ferns.

About 100 guests were seated to a five-course dinner, at which girl friends of the bride assisted. Hon. Judge Grindeland presided as toastmaster. Some of those who gave toasts were Prof. Hay, I. T. Aasted, Oscar Sponheim, Dr. Melby, Lars and D. B. Bakke and E. K. Sponheim, who responded with thanks on behalf of the bride and groom.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Rud, of Portland, N. D.; Messrs. Paul, Dennis and Alva Wambheim; Misses Jury and Mary Wambheim; Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Sponheim and K. P. Sponheim, of Hatton, N. D.; E. K. Sponheim, of Northwood, N. D.; C. W. Nelson, of Grand Forks; Judge and Mrs. Grindeland, of Warren and Mr. A. G. Dalen, of Grand Meadow, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sponheim left Sunday evening for a short trip through the southern part of the state and will be at home in Thief River Falls after July first.

The bride's going-away suit was of tan pongee with hat to match.

THE
Are Certainly Made Right.
Many clothiers put practically all of their time into the making of the coat, and all they give you for the trousers is a pair of funnels to run your legs through. Sincerity trousers are made even better than Sincerity coats. Why the various clothes makers have given so little attention to their trousers is a thing to wonder at. A man's trousers get ten times as much wear as his coat. They have a tendency to fray at the heals, the cloth is rubbed bare in his stride, he is constantly getting up and sitting down, crossing and uncrossing his legs, and, in fact, putting his trousers to ten times more work than he puts his coat. Is it any wonder that the average pair of trousers will not wear half as long as the average coat? The Sincerity Clothes makers put so much time, attention and labor into the making of their trousers that this fact alone ought to sell more suits than any one other brand on the market.

Even in appearance, as well as workmanship, the smallest detail is attended to. Sincerity Trousers not only wear better, they fit better and look better. Your Sincerity Suit is waiting for you in our large stock. And the Sincerity Trousers of that suit will wear so much longer than any other trousers that that alone will repay you for the purchase. PROMINENT IN STOCKHOLM

Consul General Axel Johnson Dead at the Age of Sixty-six—Christiania to Have New Hotel With Accommodations for Five Hundred Guests. Erection of Copenhagen's Big Hostelry Delayed by Lack of Funds.

SWEDEN.

The busts of Peter Wiesengren and Anders Fryxell were unveiled in the Humlegarden in Stockholm May 12 in the midst of great ceremonies. Among those present were the crown prince and crown princess, Prince Bernadotte, both the speakers of the Swedish riksdag, a large retinue of scientists and ministers and members of the Wieselgren and Fryxell families. Bishop von Scheele, who is at present attending the festivities at Augustana college, Rock Island, Ill., delivered a brief address, in which he reviewed the work of the two great leaders, and the unveiling followed, conducted by the crown prince. Lektor J. Bergman held the memorial address over Fryxell and Director Ernst Beckman the memorial address over Wieselgren.

Dr. Henrik Schuck, president of Upsala university, the great educational center of Sweden, is on a tour in the United States. At present he is in Rock Island, Ill., attending the festivities which are held there in connection with the meeting of the Augustana synod. Dr. Schuck is one of the leading historical writers of his country and his literary activities cover a wide field. One of his best known works is a critical review of Shakespeare's works. He has compiled and published the ballads of Sweden and contributed liberally to the country's historical lore. He went to America to study Swedish conditions and is, of course, first of all interested in looking over the Swedish-American colleges.

The death of Consul General Axel Johnson marks the passing of one of Stockholm's most substantial business men. He was a great booster for the Swedish export trade and to him the Swedish industry owes much. He was born in Jonkoping in 1844 and received a business education. In 1884 he was appointed Siamese consul in Stockholm and during his early years in the capital city he at once identified himself with the export business and also invested heavily in the local merchant marine. He succeeded well and amassed a large fortune. He was one of the founders of the Swedish Export society and was for a number of years its president.

It is not generally known, but it is nevertheless true, that Sweden is consuming large quantities of salted meat from South America. It seems strange that a cattle country like Sweden should not be able to supply herself with meat, but such is not the case. Only a small proportion of the meat is condemned by the inspectors as unfit for human food. It is sold much cheaper than Swedish goods of the same kind and that may be one reason why so much of it is consumed. During the hot season smoked meat is also imported from the same source.

The spring in Sweden has been an unusually cold and stormy one. The early part of May was exceedingly cold and stormy and frequent rains and hail showers interfered a great deal with spring work for the farmers in all portions of the country. Such a cold season has not been known for years and even in the extreme southern edge of the country weather conditions have been revolutionary in character.

King Gustaf arrived at Vienna from Sinaia, where he visited the Hunters' exposition. When the king returns from his trip he will go directly to Tullgarn for a rest. Soon after his arrival home he will be joined by the queen, who contemplates spending some time at Solliden. The king is very much improved in health and his physicians believe that he will soon be able to attend to his duties.

The Italian minister at Stockholm, Baron Bottaro Costa, has been transferred to Brussels. His successor in Stockholm is Count Vinci, who was formerly Italy's representative in Peking.

NORWAY.

Christiania is to have a new hotel, named Tivoli, which will have accommodations for 500 guests. The city is now getting to be very well supplied with good hotels. Travelers and tourists from all over the world unite in praising Christiania for its excellent hotel service. Of course the hotel business in a tourist country like Norway is conducted on an entirely different plan from that of the average cities in America and in Europe, too, for that matter. The meals are the very best and are prepared with a care which never fails to suit the taste of the most fastidious. In the mountain inns a tourist can find lots of comfort. He may not be able to get a room with a bath, as he can at the fashionable summer hostelries in the United States, but he can instead have the grandest and most picturesque mountain scenery that you can find anywhere in the world. The hospitality of his host will know no bounds and it is tolerably certain that, if the tourist pays one visit to Norway he will come again. Americans and English are getting thick as flies in Norway at this season of the year and all indications point to a big year in the tourist traffic. The hotel men and inn keepers generally are ready, too, to receive their guests and they will leave nothing undone to make it pleasant for them.

Premier Konow made the following significant statement some time ago regarding the political situation in Norway after the death of King Edward: "As it is well known that the ruler of England does not personally play a direct part in the foreign policy of his country, and as the international relations of Norway are dictated by national and personal considerations, there will hardly be any change on account of the accession to the English throne of a new man. Owing to the close relations between our royal houses all forms of intercourse with England have been confident and cordial. Neither in this respect is there any reason to fear a change."

The czar of Russia and Emperor William of Germany are making arrangements for a tour on the Norwegian coast this summer. They will spend a few days with King Haakon, who will entertain them on his yacht. There will, of course, be an interchange of visits between the monarchs. Emperor William is not an unfamiliar figure on the Norwegian coast in the summer months and he will not deviate from his usual course this summer. It will be the first time, however, that the Russian czar will cruise in Norwegian waters.

Bishop Dietrichson delivered his farewell address at Bodo recently. Every seat in the large edifice was filled. He departed the same day for Christiania to be ordained as bishop of Bang. The ordination, which was witnessed by a large gathering of people, took place Sunday, May 22.

Peder Olson Lund was the thief who entered the historical museum at Christiania some time ago and proceeded to help himself to some of the most valuable of the historical collections. He has now confessed to the theft and has returned about $2,000 worth of the collections.

Vigeland, the sculptor, who is a man of international fame, is at present suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism. He will go to the southern part of France in the near future, where it is believed that the warm climate will enable him to restore his health.

An international swimming contest will be held in Bergen Aug. 14 to 21. Crack swimmers from England, Sweden, Russia and Denmark will be present on this occasion and a large number of people in Bergen and vicinity will witness the contests.

The Queen Maud fund has reached $41,500 and is steadily growing. An unknown contributor sent a check to the fund the other day amounting to $2,000. The queen stands sponsor for the fund and it will undoubtedly swell to large proportions in time.

Editor Thommessen's new paper, "The Signs of the Times," is already proving very popular and when the third issue had gone out from the presses he had received 10,000 subscribers. The first issue appeared in an edition of 20,000.

Christian Michelsen has ordered a large new steamer to replace the Gladstone, which was destroyed by fire some time ago. Norway's merchant marine is growing at a rapid rate and is now relatively the largest in the world.

The "Aftenposten" in Christiania has a pension fund, amounting to $25,000, for its employes. The fund is steadily growing and it is proving of immense benefit to the retired employes of the paper.

There will, of course, be an inter-summer from Christiania to the Faroe islands. About 100 Norwegians from various places have signified their intention of making the trip.

DENMARK.

The so called "Paladshotellet" at Copenhagen, which was to have been completed and ready for occupancy May 16, has not yet been completed. The carpenters are the ones who are causing the delay. They refuse to finish their job unless they get their pay and it appears that the company which is erecting the hotel is a trifle embarrassed for funds. It is a gigantic undertaking and when completed it will cost not less than 5,000,000 crowns. There have already been spent something like 3,000,000 crowns in masonry and carpenter work.

Fire broke out recently in the Danish Rigshospital and for a time it looked as though the entire building was doomed. The fire department was early on the scene, however, and after fighting the flames for two hours they finally got them under control. Fortunately no lives were lost, although the affair proved distressing to the helpless patients.

When Dowager Queen Alexandra will come to pay her first visit to her native land since the death of King Edward she will be met by a large delegation of Danish women, who will have one of their number present their personal sympathies to her. The address and resolutions of sympathy will be signed by 10,000 Danish women.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Charles R. Heike, the white haired secretary of the American Sugar Refining company, was convicted at New York on one count of an indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the government of customs dues on sugar. Ernest W. Gerbracht, former superintendent of the Williamsburg refinery, was convicted on all six counts. For James F. Bendernagel, former cashier of the refinery, the jury stood seven to five for acquittal. He will be tried again.

The federal grand jury at Washington has returned an indictment against the Western Union Telegraph company charging it with forty-two violations of the bucket shop law of March 1, 1909. The charge is made that the Western Union company, by means of a telegraph wire and ticker, aided and abetted the conduct of a bucket shop in the District of Columbia.

Eastbound passenger train No. 2 of the El Paso and Southwestern railroad was held up by a lone bandit, who herded the occupants of the tourist sleeper into a private car attached to the rear of the train, compelled them to deposit their money and valuables in a heap and made his escape with the plunder.

Charging that it has been defrauded of about $2,000,000 on repair work in a period of four years the Illinois Central Railroad company filed suit for an accounting against four of its former officials in the circuit court at Chicago.

Raymond Hardey, aged eighteen years, was taken into custody at Vancleve, Ia., suspected of the murder of his father, James Hardey, his mother and his brother Earl.

William A. Miner, president of the William A. Miner company of Chicago, was robbed of $50,000 while en route from Chicago to New York.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Fire that broke out on the northern water front at Seattle during a hurricane was carried by the wind to a district to the eastward thickly covered by wooden buildings and in a short time twenty acres were ablaze, causing a loss of $1,000,000 and rendering 500 people homeless. The fire destroyed all the buildings on six city blocks and picked out a wooden house here and there in the surrounding district not entirely fire swept.

The bodies of Miss Dolores Sunol, daughter of the late Antonio Sunol of Barcelona, Spain, a pioneer millionaire land owner of San Jose, Cal., and Mrs. Frances Sunol Lintell of Eureka, Cal., author and linguist, were found under an overturned automobile near San Jose.

Twenty persons were injured, two probably fatally, and a score of farmhouses, besides numerous other structures, were demolished by a tornado which swept through a portion of Smith county, Tex., and the edges of adjoining counties.

Three men were killed outright and twelve injured when Iron Mountain fast mail train for Texas, which carried no passengers, left the tracks near St. Louis and crashed through the brick wall of a manufacturing plant.

A Canadian Pacific railway freight train crashed into a boulder on the main line near Port Caldwell, Ont., and plunged into Lake Superior. Three of the crew perished.

Four members of a funeral party, including a minister, were killed at a railroad crossing at Haverstraw, N. Y. A fifth was probably fatally injured.

Forest fires are raging nearly all along the line of the Duluth and Iron Range railroad north of Two Harbors, Minn.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

FOREST FIRES ON THE RANGE

Locality Again Threatened Because of Dry Weather.

Forest fires are raging nearly all along the line of the Duluth and Iron Range railroad north of Two Harbors and between there and Knife river.

At Waldo, three miles north, many settlers barely saved their homes, a dozen men of the railroad company aiding them in keeping back the flames. Bad fires are reported near Fairbanks, north of Two Harbors, and at Mileville, near which is the A. B. Smith big lumber camp, which was threatened.

When the Aurora fire department had succeeded in checking forest fires at the Knox location all the buildings had burned except the mine shaft and the boiler house.

The forest fires which menaced the buildings of the location were started by sparks from the steam shovel at the Adriatic mine. The mine buildings, the dry office, storehouse, machine shop, blacksmith shop and other small buildings used for power and supplies were destroyed.

The flames leaped the creek and swept the residence section, destroying twelve of the thirteen new houses recently built by the mining company. Many of the families lost most of their household effects, while single men lost everything except the clothes they wore.

RUN DOWN BY LOCOMOTIVE

St. Paul Man Killed While on His Way to Lunch.

While on his way to lunch F. O. Hanson, assistant superintendent of the Herzog Iron works at St. Paul, was struck by a Northern Pacific switch engine as he crossed the tracks. He died at Luther hospital from his injuries.

No one seems to have seen the accident, and the authorities are at a loss to account for it. The engine was moving backwards at a comparatively low rate of speed, and there were no other cars near to distract attention.

George Nolan, a clerk employed in the yard offices of the Omaha, was the first to come to the rescue of the dying man, and summoned help to remove him to the Herzog offices. There an ambulance was called, and Hanson was taken to Luther hospital.

It was found that in addition to a fractured skull, two broken legs and an arm, he had suffered severe internal injuries, and death resulted an hour later.

INCENDIARISM IS SUSPECTED

Hotel at White Bear Lake Destroyed by Fire.

One of the most spectacular fires in the history of the summer resort colonies of White Bear lake destroyed the new Oriental hotel and its contents at a loss of $50,000, on which there is only $14,500 insurance.

The burned building had just been completed and furnished by Henry Viereg of St. Paul. The hotel was to have been opened soon for the summer season.

Because the fire broke out in several places at once it is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

The hotel is located in White Bear village, about three blocks from the railroad station. Residents of the village, as well as those in the various summer resorts, formed an impromptu fire brigade and fought to save nearby cottages.

Boy Killed by Automobile.

Becoming confused by a street car and an automobile as he was crossing Nicollet avenue at Minneapolis, Frank Knight, four-year-old son of M. O. Knight, was struck by the machine and so seriously injured that he died two hours later at the city hospital without regaining consciousness. The driver of the automobile was Dr. T. T. Warham, county physician, who was on the way down town.

BOYS AT LAKE CITY

Interesting Correspondence from the Soldier Boys Now in Camp at Lake City.

Quite Probable That This Will Be the Last year in Camp for Many of the Boys.

Camp Lakeview
Lake City, June 13.

The third and for a number of the boy, the last annual outing and encampment of the Company L, Third Regiment, of the Minnesota National Guard is fast becoming history. It will be history worth remembering, too, and it is doubtful if there is a single member of the company but who will recall in years to come, the many charming features of the encampment of 1910, and who will not tire of telling his children of the days when he was a soldier—even though he was only a tin soldier.

The trip to camp this year varied but little from those of previous years, the one variation being a small wreck that occurred Monday morning between Minneapolis and St. Paul. A large passenger engine jumped the track just ahead of the Soo train, turning over on its side and half burying itself in the sand. The train was delayed about an hour as a result.

The news agent came in for his usual experience while trying to peddle his wares in the militia car. The boys swiped all his fruit and the poor newsey had to be satisfied with an empty basket, an angry feeling and a hard experience as payment. The one trip was enough and it is presumed that he is still telling his troubles to any ready listener.

The boys will have an easier time in camp this year than in 1909. Four dress parades only and no morning drills are the features.

Next Monday afternoon the third battalion will leave camp on a hike returning Tuesday noon. The boys will carry their shelter tents, blankets and one days rations.

Company L will shoot on the rifle range on Wednesday and Thursday. Although they haven't done much practicing, it is expected that the records will be considerable better than last year.

The first piece the band played in camp this year was "Gee! I Wish that I Had a Girl." It was surprising how much fervor the boys could put into the song when some of them sang.

Private Berg, Erickson and Borgen drew guard detail Monday with Private Flattum as supernumerary.

Lieut. Sponheim passed around the cigars while enroute to camp. The boys are wondering whether they were a wedding present or an appreciation of the honor recently conferred upon him.

Mayor and Mrs. T. P. Hamre and the Misses Nelson were passengers with the boys on the trip to camp. They enjoyed the fun as much as anyone.

The culinary department is better than ever this year and the way the boys "tied into the chuck" at dinner time would make any mother's heart beat faster with pride.

The learning of their General Orders has kept most of the boys busy so far, in camps. The rules are hard to master and much brain energy is being consumed.

The old faces of previous encampments are being seen everywhere and acquaintances are being renewed on every hand.

Field meet will be held Saturday afternoon. Records have been broken at every encampment so far and it is expected that several will go to smash this year.

The scenery around camp is just as grand as ever and members who are in camp for the first time this year, are continually admiring everything in sight.

What A Summer Cold May Do.

A summer cold if neglected is just as apt to develop into bronchitis or pneumonia as at any other season. Do not neglect it. Take Foley's Honey and Tar promptly. It loosens the cough, soothes and heals the inflamed air passages, and expels the cold from the system. Sold by all Druggists.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Another of the historic sawmills of Minneapolis will soon cease to turn out pine lumber. The Carpenter-Lamb Lumber company's mill in Northeast Minneapolis has practically finished the logs belonging to that company and will close permanently in a few days. That will leave only four sawmills operating and the lumber output of the city this year will be only about one-third that of the days of 1890 and thereabouts.

Frank A. Day, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, has sent out a call for the state and county conventions and for the caucuses. The state convention will be held in Minneapolis July 28. Delegates will be elected in the county conventions July 22. The caucuses will be held on July 20.

More than ten million dollars was paid by the people of Minnesota for life insurance during 1909 and more than $4,000,000 of this was returned in the form of death claims, according to the preliminary life report just issued by the Minnesota insurance department.

The International Milling company, capitalized at $2,000,000, will enter Minneapolis and will maintain general offices there for the direction of a large flour milling industry now carried on in the country. A mill will be built or acquired in Minneapolis.

Inquiries from India and Hungary have been received by Commissioner of Immigration George Welsh in regard to the land opening June 20. The Chippewa lands totaling over 200,000 acres, will be thrown open to settlement.

The university regents have named K. L. Hatch, director of the agricultural extension work of the University of Wisconsin, to be superintendent of the university farm and experiment station at Crookston.

J. Adam Bede of Pine City, once called the funniest man in congress, is a candidate for a seat in the lower house of the Minnesota legislature. His candidacy is at the request of the people, he says.

The salaries of one hundred postmasters in Minnesota will be increased July 1 under the annual readjustment authorized by the postmaster general. The increases range from $100 to $200.

Frank A. Day, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, has left Cobb hospital at Merriam Park, where he was operated on nearly four weeks ago.

Edward Yanish, postmaster of St. Paul, was unanimously elected president of the Tri-State Postmasters' association, in session at Minneapolis.

Manufacture of print paper by the Minnesota and Ontario Power company at International Falls has begun. The capacity is 225 tons a day.

The Milwaukee road will double track the Hastings and Dakota division from Minneapolis to the South Dakota line.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Albert Annis was sentenced in the district court at Fairmont to fifteen years at hard labor in the Stillwater penitentiary. The offense was committed last March when Annis assaulted a young country schoolteacher and narrowly escaped lynching. He is forty-six years old and has already served twenty years, it is said, for similar offenses.

B. Clinton Ross, a farmhand from Owatonna, committed suicide at the Lawrence sanatorium at Minneapolis by shooting himself through the head with a rifle. Ross was treated at the institution several months ago and came back for a visit. Attendants say he seemed in the best of health and they know of no cause for his rash act.

Fire completely destroyed the warehouse of the Oliver Iron Mining company at Taconite. The building was just completed five days previous and was fully stocked with supplies.

John Procknow, forty-five years old, a laborer, was instantly killed when struck and run over by hose cart No. 6 of the Minneapolis fire department, which was on its way to a fire.

Farmers west of Fertile feel much anxiety regarding the appearance of great swarms of young grasshoppers. Clover fields already have suffered heavily from the insects.

Joe Rizzo, an Italian laborer, about thirty-five years old, was run over and instantly killed by a Great Northern passenger train at Brushville.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Mathels, wife of the late John Mathels, is dead at St. Paul. She was one of the oldest residents of the state. Born in Baltimore, Md., March 20, 1831, she removed to St. Paul in 1857 and has been a resident of that city ever since.

A back lot baseball game caused the death of Mrs. Sarah Katz of St. Paul, aged fifty-three. Mrs. Katz fell dead on the porch of her home after running for a policeman to get him to stop a ball game being indulged in by a crowd of boys back of her home.

William H. Warrington, prominent in Minneapolis organized labor circles, is dead, aged sixty-six. He served in the Civil war with a New York regiment.

Mrs Sarah C. Wheeler, one of the oldest pioneers of Duluth, is dead.

FIRE IN APARTMENT HOUSE

Three Persons Have Narrow Escape From Death.

Three narrow escapes from death marked one of the largest fires which the St. Paul department has had to cope with in months, when the Lovene flats in that city were partly destroyed, with a loss of $8,000. The fire had gained considerable headway before its discovery was made by pedestrians and a second alarm from a small blaze at Tenth and Wabasha streets confused the engines, which did not arrive until twenty minutes after the first alarm.

A man, woman and child were carried down ladders by firemen from their smoke filled rooms when they were on the eve of suffocation.

It is not known how the fire started. It came from the basement and went up the airshaft to the top in a few minutes, the third floor being damaged far worse than the lower ones.

ROOSEVELT CLUB BANQUET

Pinchot and Garfield Deliver Addresses in St. Paul.

Former Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot and James R. Garfield were the chief speakers at the Roosevelt club's conservation banquet at St. Paul. Nearly 600 persons were present.

The significant feature of the banquet was the responsive and sympathetic attitude of the banqueters toward the most emphatic and striking utterances of the guests of the evening—Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Garfield. The speakers and their audience were in full accord.

Justice Edwin A. Jaggard was toastmaster and speeches were made by Gifford Pinchot, James R. Garfield, Governor Eberhart, Mayor Keller, Hugh T. Halbert, president of the club, and others.

STATE TREASURER DEAD

Clarence C. Dinehart Expires Following Operation.

Clarence C. Dinehart, state treasurer and one of Minnesota's most brilliant young politicians, died at St. Paul following an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. Dinehart was twice elected state treasurer on the Republican ticket, although only thirty-three years old.

He was an announced candidate for the Republican nomination this fall for congressman from the Second district, now represented by Congressman Hammond of St. James. It had been freely predicted that he would secure the nomination and election.

Governor Eberhart has appointed Elias S. Pettijohn, deputy state treasurer, as Mr. Dinehart's successor.

LAUNCH ENGINE BLOWS UP

Two Men Drowned in Swan Lake Near Hibbing.

Martin Imbertson and William Boland of Hibbing were drowned at Swan Lake summer resort, a few miles west of Hibbing. They were out in a gasoline launch when the engine blew up.

Imbertson was a saloonkeeper and contractor. Boland was a building contractor.

SHOT, SLUGGED AND ROBBED

Minnesota Contractor Loses Six Hundred Dollars.

Adolph Larstead, an Eveleth contractor, was shot in the arm, slugged into unconsciousness and relieved of $600 while on his way home from the Virginia mine at an early hour in the morning. Two hundred dollars in bank notes, which he had in his vest pocket, was overlooked by the robber.

Odd Fellows Elect Officers.

H. B. Shamp of Minneapolis was elected grand patriarch of the state I. O. O. F. encampment, in session at Minneapolis. Other officers are: W. A. McDowell, Luverne, grand senior warden; G. F. Engle, St. Paul, grand high priest; W. N. Chapman, Fergus Falls, grand junior warden; Dr. Thomas T. Warham, Minneapolis, grand scribe; W. W. Churchill, Rochester, grand treasurer; G. S. McCullouch, Brainerd, grand representative.

Officer Shoots Alleged Robber.

A man giving his name as George Miller, caught in the act of breaking into a chest in a freight car on the Great Northern railroad at Floodwood, near Duluth, lies at St. Luke's hospital fatally wounded by a bullet fired through his abdomen by C. J. Welch, a special policeman employed by the Great Northern, after the burglar had missed a shot at Welch, fired at a distance of about fourteen feet.

Manslaughter Charge Dropped.

The case against Theodora Stark, the Minneapolis girl who ran over and killed Stuart B. Shotwell, a St. Paul business man, at St. Paul on May 22, was dismissed by Judge Fineout at the request of Assistant County Attorney Boerner. Miss Stark was charged with manslaughter.

Sixteen Priests Ordained.

Sixteen priests were ordained in St. Mary's chapel at St. Paul seminary at St. Paul. Bishop Patrick J. Heffron of Winona administered the holy orders, according to the wish of the new priests, who studied under him when he was head of the seminary.

TO WELCOME ROOSEVELT

Governor Eberhart Names Minnesota Delegates.

Governor Eberhart has appointed twenty-six delegates to represent Minnesota at the Roosevelt reception to be held in New York city June 18. The selections were made in the hope that a majority of the citizens named will be able to attend. The occasion will be nonpartisan and general in its character. Those appointed by the governor are:

President Cyrus Northrop, University of Minnesota; James J. Hill; Frank B. Kellogg; George Thompson, publisher St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press; H. V. Jones, publisher Minneapolis Journal; W. J. Murphy, publisher Minneapolis Tribune; L. V. Ashbaugh, publisher St. Paul-Minneapolis Daily News; Milie Bunnell, publisher News-Tribune, Duluth; A. C. Weiss, publisher Herald, Duluth; H. S. Saylor, president State Editorial association; P. V. Collins, publisher Northwestern Agriculturist; Christian Rasmusson, publisher Republican, Red Wing; Dr. H. G. Stubb, Luther seminary; George H. Partridge, Minneapolis; Charles W. Farnham, St. Paul; W. H. Eustis, Minneapolis; Ripley P. Brower, St. Cloud; W. E. Harrington, Hutchinson; William B. Parsons, Winona; T. C. Collins, Windom; Judge P. E. Brown, Luverne; E. J. Jones, Morris; Amos Marckel, Perham; B. E. Sundberg, Kennedy; Chester A. Congdon, Duluth; Dr. J. S. Eklund, Duluth.

YOUTH COMMITS SUICIDE

Chooses Torturing Method to End His Life.

John W. Fortner, eighteen-year-old member of the Salvation Army at Winona until a few months ago, chose a torturing method of ending his life in a hotel in that city. The youth partly filled a four-ounce bottle with water and into it poured paris green. Of this liquid he sipped at regular intervals during the night until, in terrible pain and violently sick, he wrapped the poison in his undergarments and hurled it from the window. He was discovered early in the morning by the hotel proprietor, who realized the guest's serious condition.

The police and a physician were called, but before medical aid arrived the boy was dead. He suffered terribly before death relieved him.

Ill health is ascribed as the cause of suicide.

ASSOCIATION IS ENLARGED

Northern Minnesota Editors Extend Their Territory.

Thirty-five counties are now included within the territory covered by the Northern Minnesota Editorial association. At a business session of the organization at Glengarry Springs the limit was extended to include practically all of the state north of St. Paul.

Resolutions were adopted endorsing the action of the Northern Minnesota Development association, which met last week at Crookston and called for a reapportionment of the legislative districts of the state. It was also resolved that the Great Northern train service on the Sauk Center division is not up to snuff, and the editors will be constant in the efforts to secure an improvement.

BECAUSE OF ILL HEALTH

Minneapolis Man Ends Life on Eve of Wedding Day.

Broken hearted because he realized that ill health would prevent him from marrying Miss Kathryne Burns on the following day Charles Vanderwarker of Minneapolis placed a revolver to his heart in a Nicollet avenue lodging house and pulled the trigger. He died at the city hospital several hours later.

Vanderwarker had been engaged to Miss Burns for more than a year. Several months agoho saw that his health was failing and he offered to release the girl. She insisted on holding to her agreement, however, and tried in every way to help him regain his health.

ADMITS KILLING HUSBAND

Minnesota Woman Confesses to Committing Crime.

Mrs. Joseph Dillon has confessed to Chief of Police Peter Wring of Hibbing that she shot and killed her husband on their homestead near that place. Dillon was at first said to have been killed while resisting advances some stranger made towards his wife.

Double Murderer in Court.

Patrick J. Gibbons, who murdered his wife and Rev. E. J. Walsh in South St. Paul, was arraigned before Police Justice A. F. Johnson at Hastings. He waived the reading of the complaint, pleaded not guilty and waived further hearing and was committed without bail to the next term of the district court, which convenes in November.

Little Girl Is Drowned.

A pretty bluebell, lying in a cluster of honeysuckles on the side of a steep embankment along the Mississippi river in St. Paul, [illegible] caused the death of Sarah Oas. Leaning over a huge rock she lost her balance, fell down the hill and was drowned.

Farmer Killed by Train.

Arvin Sweet, fifty-one years old, a farmer residing near Carlos, was instantly killed by a Soo train. His team became frightened and ran directly across the track. The engineer made a futile effort to bring the train to a stop.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

REAPPORTIONMENT DEMANDED

Northern Minnesota Development Congress on Record.

That the Northern Minnesota Development Congress at Crookston was a success and that the meeting accomplished in the main the objects for which it was called is the consensus of opinion of the delegates and visitors. About 800 delegates were in attendance and visitors in large numbers filled the big Auditorium where the convention was held.

One of the most important actions of the convention was the adoption of a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of five to wait upon the state investment board and urge upon them that they sell the bonds of other states now owned by the Minnesota school fund and loan the money thus secured to the counties in this state for the purpose of making ditches and other improvements.

The first thing those who attended the meeting want, though perhaps not the most important, is reapportionment. There is no division of opinion on that question. Next they want the state to help them bring and keep settlers here.

As a business proposition the delegates agreed the state should aid in the construction of roads and schools in the timbered districts, at least in proportion to the amount of land the state owns. This, they say, would be only justice to the settlers and would be a paying investment for the state.

The report of the committee on resolutions, which was adopted, demands reapportionment by the next session of the legislature and demands that the legislators from that part of the state pledge themselves to work for it; recommends that a 1-mill state tax for good roads amendment be submitted to the people and that the one-fourth mill now authorized by the constitution be levied by the legislature; asks that the state dispose of the bonds of other states it holds and loan its money for drainage purposes; asks appropriations for schools and roads in counties where the state owns land; asks that state lands when sold be sold with the timber and urges larger appropriations for immigration work. Legislation to help in establishing township rural graded schools also is recommended.

The convention adjourned to meet at Brainerd next December.

IN TRYING TO SAVE CHILD

Winona Woman Decapitated by a Street Car.

Mrs. William Redmann, twenty-four years old, of Winona, lost her life in that city in attempting to save her two-year-old child from being crushed to death under the wheels of a street car in front of her home.

The mother was at work on the side porch of her residence and the child was playing in the street, when the little one ran directly in the path of a rapidly approaching car. The woman ran hysterically into the street in an effort to save the baby.

But at the same moment the motorman saw the child. He reversed the power instantly, climbed to the front of the coach and grasped the little one, who was practically uninjured, from the fender.

The frantic mother, however, stumbled and pitched head foremost under the car between the front and rear trucks. The wheels passed over the neck and her head was practically severed from the body. Death was instantaneous.

LAW HELD CONSTITUTIONAL

Federal Supreme Court Passes on Minnesota Statute.

The United States supreme court at Washington has handed down a decision affirming the decisions of the state courts in the case of Minnesota against the Shevlin-Carpenter Lumber company of Minneapolis for trespass. The decision confirms the constitutionality of the state laws providing double and treble damages for trespass upon the state's timber lands. The victory is regarded as an important one for the state.

Embezzler Gets Seven Years.

Seven years at hard labor in the state prison at Stillwater was the sentence pronounced by Judge Hallam in district court at St. Paul on Timothy Murphy, former captain in the Volunteers of America, as a punishment for having embezzled $1,250 March 21 last. The sum represented the major part of the fund collected by Volunteer workers for a working girls' home.

Freak Calf Exhibited.

A calf, or rather calves, of the Siamese variety, with two heads, eight feet and legs and two tails, was exhibited at Pine River by Ed Whittig of Island Lake. The calves were grown together on the side nearly the whole length and while there was but one heart and one stomach, there were two backbones and otherwise the formation was perfect for two animals.

THE ROBIN SLAUGHTER.

From reports which have appeared recently in the daily papers the slaughter of the robins continues without abatement in the south, especially in portions of Tennessee. It seems that in the eastern portion of Rutherford county, in that state, the robins shortly before their migration north congregate by the thousand in the cedar groves, and it has become a custom to form large parties for the purpose of capturing them. In one night one of these parties made the record catch of 2,037 redbreasts, while it is estimated that 150,000 were captured on these roosting grounds alone in the three weeks preceding the one night's catch referred to. The plan followed in the capture of the birds is to have catchers stationed in the cedars, while others drive the birds to them. Those stationed in the trees are provided with bags, into which the birds are thrust when caught, one person sometimes bagging as high as 325 birds in a single night. And this wanton slaughter of these beautiful and useful birds is prosecuted for the munificent reward of 10 cents a dozen, which the dead birds fetch on the local markets. This case but emphasizes the need of carrying out a suggestion made in these notes some months ago that those interested in the effective protection of bird life should lend their combined influence to secure the enactment of a federal law which will exempt from such wanton slaughter all useful migratory or interstate birds. A letter of inquiry sent by the writer to the chief of the biological survey at Washington elicited the information that up to that time no legislation of this character had been presented or even given serious consideration. It would seem high time that some such action was being taken.

THE FLY CAMPAIGN.

It is a pretty good idea to carry the war on flies into their own territory—namely, out of doors. A big step along this line may be made by putting the accumulations of horse manure in the stable in some screened bin where the flies cannot have access to it, as this is the chief breeding place for the housefly. If this is not feasible the same object can be accomplished by scattering slaked lime over the dung pile every few days. Thousands of the flies that swarm near the back door will congregate elsewhere if all garbage and slops are put in covered receptacles at some distance from the kitchen door, while those that do gather there may be killed by placing a formalin solution (two teaspoonfuls to a pint of water) in shallow dishes just outside the door and sweetening the solution with a little sugar. This fly killer is to be commended because it is cheap and is harmless if the little folks should drink some of it. The same solution can be placed in saucers in the house and the work of extermination completed.

A CORRECTION.

In a late installment of these notes a paragraph on the pear blight recommended kerosene as a suitable disinfectant for tools used in removing blight infected portions of pear and apple trees. This was given on what was supposed to be good authority, but a series of articles put in print within a few days by Professor P. J. O'Gara, pear blight specialist of the department of agriculture and stationed for the past three years in the Rogue river valley, states that no disinfectant should be used but corrosive sublimate—mercuric chloride—which is a deadly poison when taken internally, but has no ill effect on cuts or bruises on the hands. He recommends that a solution as strong as 1-1000 should be used, made by dissolving three tablets in four ounces or half a pint of water. A small sponge kept moistened with the solution is the most convenient means of applying it to the tools to be disinfected. It is important to disinfect the pruning tools after each operation, as well as the wound in twig or limb.

WIND AND GASOLINE POWER.

The chief drawback with the windmill as a furnisher of motor power for pumping and other purposes lies in the fact that too often when power is most needed it is likely to go on a strike for lack of a breeze to stir it. While the gasoline engine has tantrums now and then, yet if worth anything to start with and handled discreetly it can usually be counted on to do business when needed, while it furnishes enough power to do many jobs too heavy for a windmill to handle. As a general thing a gasoline engine will prove useful and satisfactory quite directly in proportion to the price which the manufacturers ask for it, and this is a fact that it is well to keep in view when purchasing. Many a fellow buys a bargain counter gasoline engine only to execrate the day when he was so niggardly short-sighted.

Occasions often arise when it is necessary that a family observe rather rigid economy to make both ends meet. When that time comes the good wife should not be the only one expected to practice the virtue. It should eliminate the smoking tobacco as well as a new spring bonnet.

There be many supposedly respectable people who wouldn't steal their neighbor's purse or sheep who fall down when it comes to the moral involved in palming off beef suet for butter fat. This is just the same kind of cussedness, only smaller and more contemptible, for it is practiced under the guise of an activity which is lawful and decent.

Some feeding experiments which have been conducted of late by the Iowa experiment station show that sugar beets and mangels favor the formation of calculi, or "stone," in the kidneys and bladders of breeding rams, in some instances fatal results occurring. The discovery would seem to indicate that it is not advisable to feed these roots to breeding sheep, either rams or ewes, as the results would doubtless be the same with both.

The western rancher is not bothered with Canada thistles or quack grass, but he has in his grain and alfalfa fields an annual, the fireweed, that causes him much annoyance. It grows to a height of from one to two feet and bears numerous yellow blossoms on a fiddle neck blossom stalk, the leaves being covered with numerous short spines, which, brittle and dry at haying and harvest time, irritate the skin as much as do fleas and chiggers. When the fireweed gets in possession of a field, about the only way to eradicate it is clean cultivation of some tilled crop.

The Maine experiment station publishes the following recipe for the dry mash which it has tested and found excellent as a poultry feed: Two hundred pounds good wheat bran, 100 pounds cornmeal, 100 pounds middlings (or Red Dog flour), 100 pounds gluten meal or brewer's grains, 100 pounds linseed meal and 100 pounds beef scraps. This should be thoroughly mixed on a clean floor before being put in the feed hoppers. The scratching ration recommended by the same station consists of four quarts of screened cracked corn, two quarts of wheat and two quarts of oats for each hundred hens (Plymouth Rock) daily.

Wild morning glory is one of the common weeds difficult to kill out because of the habit of multiplying by a system of underground rootstalks, usual cultural methods only serving to spread the pest. One old fellow we heard of the other day got rid of a good sized patch by hoeing off all of the vines which showed above ground every Monday morning. Tuesday morning would probably have done just as well, but he thought Monday morning was the appointed time. The important fact in connection with the instance is that this weekly attack worried the life out of the morning glories, sapping the vitality of the root systems to such an extent that there was not enough plant food left to carry the plants through the winter.

While euphoniously named brands of wheat flour often come from the same bin in the mill, were the truth only known there are distinctions with differences in at least three of the grades of flour usually milled which the consumer might well be acquainted with. The highest priced "patent" flours are made from the inner portion of the wheat, running from 60 to 65 per cent of the berry. "Clear" flour consists of the edible portion of the wheat less the patent which has been taken from it and contains from 15 to 30 per cent of the wheat berry. Straight flour contains all of the berry which is fit for human food and, though considered inferior to the patent flour in grade and lower in price, contains more of the nutritive elements of the wheat berry and therefore makes a more nutritious bread.

Only within the past few years has an adequate value been placed upon skimmilk, yet it is a well known fact of chemistry that it contains virtually all of the casein (protein) of the whole milk, the butter fat removed in the cream being carbon and water. Practically all of the food value of skimmilk may be removed in the shape of cottage cheese, also known as "schmierkase." The following recipe for making this appetizing food is recommended by the Nebraska experiment station: Allow the skimmilk to become sour and curdled, then heat to 90 or 100 degrees F. in about thirty minutes. After it has reached the desired temperature remove the vessel from the stove and allow curd to remain in hot whey for about fifteen minutes. Then remove whey by pouring the clabber into a cheesecloth bag or through a fine wire screen with cheesecloth spread over it and allow to drain until no more whey appears. The texture—hardness or softness of the curd—depends upon the temperature to which the milk is heated and the time the curd is allowed to remain in the hot whey. The greater the heat and the longer its duration the harder the cheese will be. Adding to the curd about one-tenth its volume of rich cream greatly improves the flavor of the cheese, together with sufficient salt to season.

VOL. XXVII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1910 NUMBER 26

THIEF RIVER FALLS WINS CONVENTION

State Firemen to Meet Here In 1913.

Thief River Falls is to have the State Firemen's association convention in 1913. This was decided at the convention held at Alexandria last week by the election of Ira C. Richardson as second vice president of the association.

The Thief River Falls Fire Department was represented by Ira C. Richardson, Chris Porter, Ed Langevin and Louis Lonson and they worked night and day for the success of this city. Fairmont, Chasky and Hibbing were after the convention, but the latter town decided to withdraw. The vote was as follows: Thief River Falls, 208; Fairmont, 110; Chaska, 30. Frank Jeffers, of Red Lake Falls, placed Mr. Richardson in nomination and it is said that he made the best speech in the convention and one that took the firemen by storm.

There were about 1200 delegates at the Alexandria convention and it is expected that more than that number will be in Thief River Falls in 1913. The 1911 convention will be held at Owatonna and the 1912 convention at Minneapolis.

The officers elected are: President, E. M. Twiford of Owatonna; first vice president, Chief J. R. Canterbury of Minneapolis; second vice president, Ira C. Richardson of Thief River Falls; secretary, Andrew J. Myler of St. Paul, treasurer, E. A. Raymond of Minneapolis; statistician, Edward Kelly of Faribault.

Several resolutions were adopted which were referred to the committee on legislation and proposed amendments to existing state laws. One was to the section of the statutes providing for a levy of not less than one-tenth mill and not more than nine-tenths of a mill for the pensioning of disabled firemen in cities of 50,000 and less. The recommendation is that the law be made mandatory by inserting the word "shall" for "may" in the authorization of the tax. The law, if amended, will direct councils to make a tax levy for this purpose.

A second resolution adopted asks that the legislature pass a law granting firemen relief from duty twenty-four hours in every seven days. John Boylhart of Rochester, and L. S. Kent of Alexandria, were elected delegates to the international convention to be held in Detroit; alternates, John Hoehn, of Chasca, and George Ender, of Little Falls.

As To Cultivating Roads.

A farmer having asked the Princeton Union whether it is lawful to plow up and cultivate a part of the public highway, is answered by the following publication of the law:

"Any person living upon or owning land fronting on a public road, a portion of which is not in actual use or needed for public travel, may plow, level, and seed the same to grass, except within one rod of the center. But he shall not by such work interfere with travel upon said road, or be entitled to compensation therefor, or acquire title to any portion of said road thereby. Such land owner may plant trees on the sides of such road, within six feet of the outside line thereof, with the written approval of the town board."

The law quoted above cannot be misunderstood. If it does not interfere with travel the sides of the road to within a rod of the center may be seeded to grass; but there must be two rods in the center of the road left untouched. It is a common practice to cultivate roads and plant the same to corn, potatoes and grain, save a few feet in the center, just wide enough for a wagon track. This is contrary to law, and should not be permitted.—Princeton Union.

Clerks Win.

Last Sunday afternoon the clerks managed to retain their former championship honors by capturing the scalp of the bookkeepers, in a one-sided affair, to the tune of 13 to 2. The bookkeepers have promised the clerks another game in the near future and promises that victory will not be as easily gained by the clerks.

Sensational Work in the Ninth Inning Wins the Game for Locals.

In the fastest game of ball played this season the local team won from the fast Picket bunch at Grand Forks Sunday by a score of 7 to 4.

The game was reported to have been a fast and clean one thruout and at the end of the eighth inning the score stood 4 to 4. The last of the ninth inning, however, the locals opened fire and before the smoke cleared away had run in 3 additional scores.

Leigh, the twirler for the locals, is reported as having done some excellent work and held the opposing team down to a very few hits, striking out 13 men, to Alrick's 8. The other players justly deserve their share of the honor for their fast work.

The following is the summary and the score by innings:

T. R. F.—	Pickets:—
Bergan, C.	B. Chandler, 2b.

Next Sunday the ball team goes down to Crookston to try conclusions with the team of that city, and since the local club has been considerably strengthened a good game is looked for.

Coming July 9.

Calgary Daily News: The "St. Elmo" company last night gave one of the best shows that has been seen at the Lyric theatre for many a moon.

The George Amusement company, which presents the company which so pleased, has been playing all through the States and the largest Canadian cities lately, and has everywhere met with a rich praise for their efforts.

The company is a well balanced one. There is not a hint of overacting, and there are no weak places in the cast.

The parts of St. Elmo, Murray and Edna Earl, around which the main plot of the story centres, were played in a way above criticism by Harold Salter and Ernstine Mohrle respectively. Miss Van Camp's work was also of great merit in her role of Mrs. Murray. The scenery and costumes were beautiful.

The plot of the play follows closely the widely read book of Augustus J. Evans' "St. Elmo," and portrays a little country born girl who hears almost the first unkind word in her life from the lips of St. Elmo, the misanthrope. A series of disastrous transfers, the innocent girl of the woods into the splendid household where St. Elmo's word is law. She loves him and remains true to her love through countless temptations. St. Elmo fights against his love for the girl. He tests her faith in every way, he plunges into more desperate affairs than ever, but cannot escape the girl's steady influence for good.

The story ends happily with the conversion of St. Elmo and his marriage to Edna.

"St. Elmo" remains over at the Lyric theatre tonight with a special ladies' matinee today. To miss seeing "St. Elmo" will be to miss one of the real things theatrically this season.

"St. Elmo" will be presented at the Auditorium July 9.

SOME TAX COMPARISONS

Facts of Serious Consideration To The Tax Payer.

Here is something for the consideration of those who delight in paying exorbitant county taxes:

There are 85 counties in Minnesota. Of these but one, and that one Beltrami county, had higher average rate of taxation in 1909 than Red Lake county, and it is probable that in this year of grace, 1910, Red Lake holds the inglorious position of leading the procession of counties in Minnesota for high taxes. She, at least, gives her malodorous neighbor on the east a close shave for the dishonor of carrying the most generous tax rate in the commonwealth. This has been caused in large part by maladministration, graft, incompetence, financial handouts, and inefficiency generally.

The average rate of taxation in mills in Red Lake county in 1909 was 45; Beltrami was 47, and Pine, a large county in the eastern part of the state famous in earlier days for the disease which now afflicts Red Lake, had a rate of almost 44. What a contrast are these rates with those of all the smaller counties, many of which will be smaller than the proposed county of Pennington. These rates are the result of management solely. Where low, they are occasioned by economical and careful administration; where high, by extravagance and inefficiency, though as a rule, the larger counties have higher rates than the smaller.

Here are a few small counties and their average rates taken at random from different sections of the state for 1909: Pope, 20 mills; Big Stone, 26; Grant, 23; Wadena, 33; Carver, 22; Scott, 23; Dodge, 19, Watonwan, 25; Houston, 21; etc, etc. The size of the county has almost nothing to with its tax rate. The larger the county, the heavier the expense; the smaller the county, the lower the rate. This is absolutely true, as anyone can verify by referring to the proper sources of information. Polk's average rate of taxation last year was 45; Aitkin's was 42 and this county is one of the largest in the state; Pine, 44; Marshall—and all know that our neighbor on the north had always been blessed with an economical administration of county affairs—has an average rate of only 28 mills. The conclusion is exact and cannot be gainsaid, that Pennington county's organization will result in lower taxes and in more honest and economical management of public funds and business.

The creation of Pennington county this fall out of the northern half of Red Lake county will mark the close of a long and bitter struggle on the part of the taxpayers residing in the proposed new county for certain principles of local self government which in this county have always been accorded an intelligent citizenship. Pennington county will ever stand as a rebuke to extravagance and lack of efficiency in the administration of public business and its organization will divorce two sections of territory having nothing of commercial, political or social nature in common. This action will be the logical conclusion of a long train of distressing circumstances, which, in the natural course of events, could have no other result or ending. An intolerable state of public affairs has obtained in this county, from which there is no relief, but by succession and the organization of the proposed new county of Pennington.

To correct the evil of maladministration and remove the heavy burdens of taxation under which the taxpayers stagger, recourse has been made in the past to the boards of county commissioners, to county officials and even to the courts, but without avail. Efforts to secure reasonable rates of taxation, an economical expenditure of public funds, a fair distribution of appropriations and the abatement of a multitude of unjust and intolerable public acts, have been met by rebuffs, refusals and even studied insult. As a result, a majority of the voters of the county have determined that those officials and interests responsible for these deplorable conditions shall, after the eighth of November next, be limited in their operations and activities to the southern half of the county only, their natural habitat; that the northern half shall have a new birth on that date, be started with a clean slate, be relieved of taxation without representation, and ever increasing county tax rate, and from the domination of prejudice, jealousy and extravagance.

A just regard for the opinion of all concerned, particularly for the many who have recently taken up residence in the northern part of the county and who may not be thoroughly familiar with recent county developments, demands that some of the reasons be set forth which prompt this extreme action. With this in view, a brief statement of some of the grievances of the taxpayers of the county of Red Lake is herewith submitted:

To the Citizens of Thief River Falls—

I want to state a few facts about the future prospects and support of Our City Band in order for the Band to prosper in Our City.

All Citizens must Co-operate on that question and see that All Band Members get some position or some work to do in the City, it is impossible to keep Band Members here unless they have something to do.

Even the Boys that are now in the Band are leaving to accept positions at other places. If we are not to keep our own boys that we have educated in music, we will have to unpost members for our Band, if the citizens would take this matter up so as to get these conditions reversed they would be supporting the Band in the best and only practical way without any inconvenience to themselves.

This is an important question and should not be neglected. On behalf of the Band I thank one and all who have loyally supported Our Band in the past and are looking for better results in the future.

Respectfully
N. J. Anderson
President of City Band.

County Option Field Day Sunday.

The County Option Field Day and Mass Meeting, a series of meetings held in this state under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League, was held in this city last Sunday. Such noted speakers as State Supt. P. J. Youngdahl; C. Walden, Supt. N. W. Dist.; Hon. Elias Rachie, Legislative Supt.; C. W. Stark, Editor of the Minnesota Issue, had charge of this meeting with the co operation of the city churches.

In the morning services were held in the Methodist, Presbyterian, Zion Lutheran and Swedish Baptists churches. In the evening the city congregations united at the Auditorium, where eloquent speeches were delivered by C. Walden and P. J. Youngdahl to a large audience. E. L. Quist presiding over the meeting.

A SAMPLE OF EXTRAVAGANCE

Why did Red Lake county in 1909 levy for the support of the county poor more than any other county in the state with the exception of two? According to the announcement of the State auditor's office in St. Paul, in an official statement entitled "Abstract of Tax Levies for the year of 1909," and bearing the signature of S. G. Iverson, state auditor, Red Lake county is reported as having levied $14979.03 for the support of the county poor. This announcement is official and was confirmed by inquiry at the state auditor's office and can be verified by any taxpayer who doubts this statement. This, also, in view of the fact that this county is on the "township system" for the support of the poor, as are Marshall and Beltrami counties and several other counties in the state whose names in this official statement from the state auditor's office show that they do not levy one cent for the support of the county poor.

Of all the counties in the state, St. Louis and Itasca, with their teeming hordes of foreigners who are employed in and about the iron mines, surpass the generosity of Red Lake county in feeding their unfortunates. When it is known that the average amount expended annually by the counties of the state for poor maintenance is $4210, the following queries immediately suggest themselves: Who got this vast sum? What part of the country received the money? Why did they get it? Did you get yours? Can it be possible that Red Lake county is poverty stricken? Who are the very hungry people and why do they consume so much? Has some one blundered, or have the wires gotten crossed in the conservation of county funds? The whole county must have been starving, which is preposterous and ridiculous. There is less of real poverty in Red Lake county than in any of the Valley counties, and they are the richest in the state. The proposition is simply one of extravagance a inefficiency or something akin to Tammany methods of finance. It can also be stated that Thief River Falls cares for her own poor and the cost of their maintenance is not included in this grand total of $14979.03.

This shameful waste and absurd tax levy is but one of many others which are going to be ventilated within the next few weeks. Taxpayers can from this report of the state auditor easily determine what cause their heavy burdens of taxation. The organization of Pennington county will lop off these costly barnacles who are responsible for much of this extravagance and will place the administration of public affairs in the hands of men nearer home who stand for economy and honesty in official line.

Wilhelm – Clay Wedding.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Akre in this city last Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock occurred the wedding of Miss Vera Wilhelm to Dr. A. J. Clay, of Bowden, N. D, Rev. I. B. Smith conducting the ceremony in the presence of relatives and immediate friends.

The bride is a well known and accomplished young lady who has been a teacher in the public schools of this city a few seasons past and has a host of friends. The groom is a popular and rising young doctor at Bowden, N. Dak.

Relatives who came from other cities to be present at the wedding were: Dr and Mrs Clay and daughters Pearl, of Waterville, Minn., and Geo. Wilhelm, of Moorhead, N. D.

The happy couple left in the evening on an extended honey moon for points in the south and will later return to Bowden where they will reside.

HELEN HENRY IS FOUUD.

Discovery Tuesday Ends Long and Diligent Search.

Was Found Floating in the Red Lake River.

The body of Helen Henry, the 4 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry, residing about fifteen miles up the Red Lake river, who was last seen on Monday, May, 2, was found floating in the Red Lake river about 8 miles below the place where it is thought she fell in, by a young farmer while crossing the river on his way to work.

While it was generally believed from the start that the ill-fated girl had met death in this manner, there was still a lingering hope that she would be found alive and restored to her parents, and since the dragging of the river failed to recover the body it was thought also that she might have wandered away and got lost in the woods, or met fowl play at the hands of some wild animal.

The body was brought to this city Tuesday and buried in the Greenwood Cemetery, Rev. I. B. Smith conducting the services.

WITH THE BOYS IN LAKE CITY

Company L, minus those who dropped off at the Twin Cities and other points along the line, returned home Thursday morning from the annual ten days encampment at Lake City. Tanned and enthusiastic, all in good health and feeling satisfied, the boys are more than enthusiastic over their trip and altho there are a number of them who will not go next year on account of the expiration of their enlistment, it is expected that there will be no trouble in getting a full company for the encampment of 1911.

Though the privates fared much better this year than last, as far as the drills are concerned, they didn't have any kind of a snap, and at the same time there are none of them that have been overworked. The fact that they've all been working is evidenced by the amount of grub that disappears at mess time.

And speaking about mess, it might not be out of place to say a good word here for Cooks Peterson and Bressler and their efficient kitchen detail. Company L "chuck" this year was considerable better than the average and many of the boys have remarked that they don't get fed as well at home as they did in camp. This is due, of course, to the ability of the cooks, but Quartermaster Fan is entitled to equally as much favorable comment. It was he who did the purchasing and his taste is "sure some good." Sunday's dinner included chicken and ice cream and who dares say that this menu, combined with vegetables, is not fit for a king.

This encampment is responsible for several promotions. Corporals Le Sage and Prichard have been made sergeants, and privates Flattum, Hamre and Rice have been made corporals. A few reductions in the ranks have made this necessary.

First Sergeant Sponheim left camp Friday in order to tend to business at home. Corp. Mussey acted in his place.

Last years encampment saw considerable hard drilling on the part of all the men. This year the privates have a snap while the officers, both regimental and company, and the non-coms, were put through a grilling drill both morning and afternoon, under the able direction of Capt. Bugge, of Fort Snelling.

Saturday was Governor's day and Gov. Eberhart was in camp to view the guard. The dress parade was one of those long ones, but all the boys "underwent the operation" in fine shape.

Col. Johnson, commander of the Third Regiment, was presented Saturday evening with a fine Morris rocker as a compliment from the enlisted men, on the fact that he has completed twenty-five years in the service. Mrs. Johnson also received a rocker from the men, and the presentation speech was made by Chaplain Emery in the presence of the regiment.

"Rookie hazing," "shirttail parades" and other mild forms of amusement, have occupied the attention of the men during the evenings. Private Dryfoos, after much persuation, ran the gauntlet, and Private Palm, likewise persuaded, took an involuntary bath in the lake. Private Hoffman was the victim of the biggest joke of all, when the men by a faked election made him second lieutenant. He drilled the company, signed reports and carried out joked orders for several days before being put wise.

Saturday night was a big night in camp and the boys enjoyed a monster shirttail parade and dance in front of the officers mess. With three cheers and a tiger for Col. Johnson, the celebration was brought to a successful close.

The rifle range work developed nine markemen for Co. L. The best score made on the 500 yard range in the entire regiment of twelve companies was made by Corp. Flattum of Co. L, who made 49 points out of a possible 50, in ten shots—one "4" and nine bulls-eyes. The following is the list of markmen with the scores made by each:

Corp. Flattum......122
Serg. Sponheim......112
Corp. Mussey......112
Lieut. Sponheim......110
Capt. Wiste......10[illegible]
Musician Anderson......101
Private Palm......101
Private Berg......99
Private Hanson......98

Captain Wiste managed to qualify as sharpshooter on the pistol range and expects to make an expert before he finishes.

Corp. Rice, while still acting as a private, was selected as orderly for Capt. Adjutant Weaver.

Sunday visitors on "L" Street included Misses Brekke and Swanson and Messrs. Fritz and Swanson, all well known to many of the corps.

Company L had 44 men in camp this year and this was exceeded by only one or two companies.

Dress parades have been abbreviated several times to short formations in each company street each evening while the flag was being lowered.

Tomorrow afternoon the regiment will leave camp on a hike, returning Tuesday morning. The trip has been planed by the officers, but as yet the men "know not whither they goeth."

The Sunday evening dress parade resulted as they have during both of the two previous encampments—Company

Millions Spent on Fraud.

Over $15,000,000 annually is poured into the coffers of those who exploit and advertise fake consumption cures, according to a statement issued today by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis; and for the vast sum the victims receive nothing in return, but are often permanently injured and in the majority of cases are cheated out of the chance for a real cure. Worse still, most of this money is paid by those who can least afford it.

The National Association has investigated several hundred so-called "cures" and "treatments" for tuberculosis now being advertised throughout the country, and finds that more than $3,000,000 a year is being spent in soliciting the patronage of the public. On examination it has been found that the great majority of these "cures" contain harmfull and habit-forming drugs, such as morphine, opium and chloroform. None of them will cure consumption. The only cure for this disease that has ever been discovered is the combination of fresh air, rest and wholesome food. All of the "cures" that attempt to destroy the tubercle bacillus without these two or to stop the progress of the disease in some mysterious way are branded as frauds, and impositions.

Three classes of "cures" are distinguished by the National Association. In the first class are included devices and drugs which can be bought for any sum ranging from ten cents to five dollars at a drugstore. The United States Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin in which some of the most used of these drugs and remedies are analyzed and condemned. The second class of "cures" includes the "institutes," "professors" or companies of "doctors," who for a consideration guarantee to cure consumption by some secret method of which they are the sole proprietors. There are nearly one hundred and fifty of these institute frauds in the United States, cheating the people out of millions of dollars annually.

In the third class of "cures" are placed a number of home-made remedies, which either through ignorance or superstition have been advanced as treatment of tuberculosis. Some of these are, onions, lemons, rattlesnake poison, coal dust, lime dust, pigs' blood, dog oil, milk "strippings," and even alcohol. These will not cure consumption declares the National Association. No drug, gas or other material has yet been discovered, which, when eaten, inhaled or injected into the body, will kill the germs of tuberculosis. Fresh air, which contains more oxygen than any substance known, will destroy the germs of tuberculosis, if breathed continuously for a long enough period, and if rest and wholesome food are employed at the same time to build up the body.

Crop Rotation Cleans Land.

Weed eradication has long been a subject of experimentation at the Minnesota Station. Spraying with sulphate of iron has been practiced with more or less beneficial results, proving, however, a better retarder of weeds and of weed seed development than an actual exterminator. The best results in destroying weeds have come from rotation of crops, according to an article by Prof. A. D. Wilson, superintendent of the division of extension and of the Farmers' Institutes, at the Experiment Station. Two one-tenth acre plots have been cropped under different systems of cultivation over a period of sixteen years. One plot was cropped to a five-year rotation system of corn, first year; grain, second; grass, third and fourth, and grain, fifth year. The other plot was devoted to wheat each year, the land being plowed early in the fall, carefully disced and prepared for the seed. The rotated plot is now substantially free from weeds. The wheat plot is infested with wild oats, though the station has practiced careful hand pulling of weeds over the several years of experimentation. The two years that the rotation plot grew grass, the hay has been cut so early that weeds had no chance of maturing seed. When the plot was in corn, thorough stirring of the ground was practiced, and weeds were killed before they ripened.

THE CELERY BED.

There is no relish for the table which is more delicious than crisp, nutty flavored celery from the home garden, the growing of which is in no sense a difficult matter. If one has not thought of the matter in time to raise plants from the seed, which require two or three weeks to germinate, they may be secured from a neighbor or market gardener. For early use there is no variety which is superior to the Golden Self Blanching, but any variety that one can get will do well with proper care. The important point is to set out stalky, vigorous plants, taking care to prune back both top and roots at the time of transplanting. A simple plan for the bed is to remove about eight inches of earth from a spot in the garden which will be convenient for watering, say 4 by 20 feet, or from a still larger tract if more celery is wanted. Into the soil at the bottom of this trench should be worked three or four wheelbarrow loads of fine, well rotted fertilizer. The plants should be set six to eight inches apart in the rows and the rows ten inches apart, enough to permit of frequent hoeing. Being set below the surface of the ground, the bed will not dry out rapidly, while the work of watering is thereby greatly simplified. If there is no one about the house sufficiently strong of arm to dig the trench the plants may be set on the level ground and given the same cultivation and somewhat more frequent watering than in the low bed. When the plants have reached a foot or fifteen inches the hilling process may be begun and five or six inches of the soil originally removed from the trench replaced, care being exercised to hold the stalks of the plants close together so as to prevent dirt getting into the crown. Three or four weeks later, depending somewhat upon the rapidity of growth, four or five inches more of earth should be filled in about the plants, and under usual conditions this will give all the bleaching necessary. In a relatively short time after this second hilling the celery will be bleached sufficiently for the table. If any is left at the beginning of winter the plants may be taken up with plenty of roots and the earth adhering and put in a box in the cellar, where they will continue bleaching and be crisp and tender until after the holidays.

THE PRECOOLING OF FRUIT.

Great benefit is expected to come to the fruit growers of the Pacific coast from the plants which have been installed at several points in California and will shortly be erected at other points for the precooling of fruit destined for transcontinental shipment. In the past, even with the most careful refrigeration en route, both transportation companies and growers have sustained serious loss as a result of fruit spoiling in transit. In these new precooling plants, which are really mammoth refrigerating plants, whole train loads of fruit can be reduced to a temperature close to the freezing point in the course of two or three hours, artificial means being used to draw the warm air from and inject the cold air into the cars. Car loads of fruit made ready for shipment in this way are given the usual icing in transit, with the result that the fruit arrives at its destination in as nearly perfect condition as possible, the loss resulting from the fruit being in heated condition at the time of shipment, as has been the case heretofore, being virtually nothing. The installation of these plants at important shipping points not only in the west, but in other parts of the country, will mean increased revenue for the growers of fruit and a greatly improved quality for the consumer.

THE BIG FREEZE.

Harvest time alone will reveal the extent of the damage wrought by the fearful cold spell which visited some fourteen or fifteen of the lake, Ohio and Mississippi valley states during the last ten days in April. It caught fruit trees of all kinds in full blossom or tender young fruit and not only seared and blackened these, but killed the new leaves and tender twigs of shrubs and forest trees and killed or greatly weakened the vitality of thousands of acres of newly sprouted grain and corn. Farther south, in the tobacco and cotton belts, the damage was enormous, the extent of which can only be determined later. To the west on the great plains immense damage was done to grain and fruit, while fruit growers in Utah and Colorado report their losses at from 50 per cent up. Those who are acquainted with the meteorological antics of the sections under the sway of the Medicine Hat weather hierarchy feared just such a contingency when the wires got crossed and April and May weather was dispensed all through March. However, it is too early in the season to lose courage, for nature may be exceeding kind the rest of the year.

The practice of clipping off the wings of Leghorn hens to keep them from flying over a sixteen foot fence has been in vogue for some years, but not until lately have we seen the same plan suggested for keeping queen bees from leading new swarms away from the apiary. There are tricks in all trades, even the bee business.

Few of nature's agencies prove unmixed blessings. Thus the bee, everywhere recognized as a most valuable aid in the cross fertilization of many kinds of fruits, is the chief distributer of the germs of the blight which has wrought havoc with apple and pear orchards in many sections of the country, getting hold of the germs from hold over cases of blight from old oozy infections in the orchard or in nearby hawthorn or service berry shrubs.

The balkiness of the mule is proverbial, but the western mule seems to have the trait unduly developed, if an instance can be credited that was related to us by the owner the other day. This one was a bunch grass animal from eastern Oregon. He balked on the road while his owner was trying to fetch him over the mountains and couldn't be budged by any force or persuasion that could be brought to bear. He kept this fit for five days and nights, finally dropping dead from sheer exhaustion without having taken a step.

Hogging down corn is an economical feeding practice familiar to dwellers in certain sections of the corn belt—briefly, turning the hogs into small fenced portions of a field of mature corn and letting them eat it at will. A Colorado sheep grower seems to have adapted this idea to sheep and beets and last year harvested twenty acres of beets by turning sheep into small patches of the field set off by hurdles. They ate tops, roots and all, the only assistance received being a loosening of the deeper rooted beets with a spading fork. The feeder commends the plan as a successful one.

While the tomato will produce some fruit of fair size with little or no attention, very satisfying results in the matter of an improvement in the size of the fruit can be had by thorough and frequent cultivation and a pruning of the vines so that they will set fruit on but three or four leaders or branches. When this plan is followed it is well to stake the plants in an upright position, using a strip of cloth to fasten the vines to the sakes. Should fruit of exceptional size be desired this may be brought about by still further restricting the number of tomatoes allowed to ripen.

While housewives are generally of the opinion that it is more difficult to make good bread from soft than hard wheat flour, the following recipe gives excellent results: One quart of wetting, including one cupful of soft yeast. Add two level tablespoonfuls of salt and three and three-quarters quarts of sifted flour. Mix and knead fifteen minutes, let rise, mold down, let rise again and put in tins. Let rise again and bake. The above recipe gives equally good results with hard wheat flour by reducing the quantity of flour to three quarts. With this recipe one can start a batch of bread at 6 in the morning and bake it with the dinner fire.

Several points have been pretty well learned about fenceposts—seasoning them, their durability, etc. Among these are that the post timber should be cut during the summer or early autumn, that the bark should be peeled off at once so that the drying process will be hastened and that if possible from eight months to a year should elapse between the time of cutting the posts and setting them in the ground. More recent experience proves quite conclusively that giving the butts of the posts a bath of hot creosote will increase their life from two to three times. Whether such treatment would pay in any particular case would depend on the price of posts and the cost of creosote.

As a result of using seed of poor vitality many a corn grower is just now confronted with a stand of corn so poor that it will hardly pay him to give it the care it should have during the remainder of the season, and naturally he is looking for a substitute. While buckwheat, cowpeas, soy beans and sorghum may prove the most desirable substitute crops in certain sections, millet will likely prove most satisfactory in a majority of instances. Of the three varieties of millet—common, Hungarian and German—the first is considered best for a forage crop, while the last will give the best results in a seed crop. The chief objection to the Hungarian millet is that it crosses readily with the common wild foxtail, a near relative of the millet family. The common millet and Hungarian will do better on light soils than the German variety. With all of the millets which are intended as forage crops it is important to cut before the heads have passed the dough stage. The North Dakota experiment station, which has been investigating millet as a forage crop lately, recommends one feed of properly cured millet a day for horses and two feeds for other stock as a stimulant tending to produce a healthy physical condition of the animals. In feeding value millet is less palatable than timothy hay and inferior to it in nutritive qualities.

UNPROFITABLE WRETCHEDNESS.

At an exhibition in the city of New York one may see a bunch of artificial rosebuesh used for hat-trimming. The girl who made them was quite expert, turning out about one bunch a minute. This enabled her to earn six cents an hour. For making artificial roses, a mother and several children, all working together in one room, were paid at the rate of five cents a dozen. A photographer shows a mother and two sons, the elder aged ten, rolling cigarette wrappers. The picture was taken by flashlight, for the room, besides being squalid, was quite dark; and this company of workers was paid at the rate of ten cents for a thousand wrappers. A mother and two small daughters were more fortunate. They made artificial daises, which requires a good deal of skill, and by turning out seventytwo bunches a day earned seventy-five cents. Divide that into food, rent and clothing for three!

There were many other exhibits of the same sort, and out of all this beastly sweating, nobody really made much money. Probably the artificial rose that a woman or child toiled to make for half a cent went to an East Side milliner who got ten or fifteen cents for it on a hat. The margin of profit is large, but, as a rule, the East Side milliner's volume of business is small. Much of this misery, in short, is not chargeable at all to organized greed, but merely to huge social disorganization, ignorance and stupidity.—Saturday Evening Post.

INVENTORS AND EXPLOITERS.

The world is familiar with the spectacle of inventors living lean and dying poor while financial exploiters reap the fruitage of their genius. Of late the gloom of this picture has been relieved by the sight of practical inventors like Edison, Gray and Westinghouse, who kept the larger share of the profit of their inventions.

Now the new science of aerostatics exhibits a sort of inventors who may reap money profit from their success, but who are deprived of the popular acclaim and personal glory by more daring exploiters of their machines. We hear little of the Wrights now, except in patent suits in the federal courts, while the names of men who break a new record every day in air planes they invented fill the press and the talk of man.

It is frequently remarked that, though the air plane was invented and perfected in America, its navigation was early carried much farther in France. That is not so true now as it was, since Curtiss and Hamilton have broken foreign records, but it is still true that the machine has been carried rapidly far beyond the performance of its inventors by men who make no claim to be inventors themselves.

The explanation probably lies in the greater daring of men who risk nothing but their lives in dangerous feats in the air. They are like brave subalterns who may throw their lives away in exploiting the plans of generals who must avoid danger for the sake of the cause. It may be found in the long line of airship inventors as promising as the Wrights, whose careers came to an untimely end by fatal falls.

Nobody ever questioned the courage of the Wrights, but they frankly admitted always playing a safe game in the air to preserve their lives till their work was done. That is why so many newer air navigators eclipse their feats.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A SMALL MAN'S BIG PHILANTHROPY.

Philanthropy is not to be judged by the size of its gifts, but rather by the motives that impel them, the soundness of the philosophy on which they are based, and the benefits to society that accrue from them'

Judged by this standard, the case of Peter B. Burns of Liberty, Mo., forms an interesting contrast with many philanthropies vastly greater in amount than his.

Burns was not a millionaire. By hard work and thrift he had gained a "competence" and when he died he left $10,000. The terms of his will, described by the Louisville Courier-Journal, are unique. Having no children, he left his little fortune to the widow during her lifetime. At her death half of it is to go to the county of Clay, "to be administered by the county court in loans to men who desire to build home." These loans, it is provided, may not exceed $2,000 to a single individual. They are to be secured by a mortgage on the real estate, and they are to be paid back at the rate of at least $100 a year. They are to bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent.

Half the Burns estate is $20,000. At the maximum of $2,000, that will provide for ten home-builders. If the court should limit the loans to $1,000, it will provide for twenty home-builders. As the fund perpetuates itself, it would be seen that its benefits will be lasting and far reaching. It presents an opportunity whereby many industrious and deserving men may be enabled to secure homes which would be beyond their reach without such enlightened aid.

Encouraging home-owning is good public service. A city of rented homes is nothing but a camping ground. A community of home-owners is a real community, with an alert and intelligent public spirit. A person living in a rented home may be a good citizen, but if he is a good citizen it is because he is able to be one without the chief incentive to good citizenship—the sense of partnership in the community.

One great reason why the quality of citizenship in most large cities is low is that so large a proportion of the population lives in rented homes. A man who owns his own home is a taxpayer, directly interested in community affairs and with every incentive to take an enlightened part in them.

Therefore this philanthropy is one of the most interesting and helpful that has come to our notice. There is no charity about it. Men ambitious to own their own homes may take advantage of it without parting with self respect. There are no commissions to pay for loans, and instead of 5, 6 or 7 per cent the interest is 2 per cent. A man borrowing a maximum of $2,000 would pay only $40 a year interest on the full amount—and his interest would decrease as he made payments on the principal.

Burns didn't have money enough to dot the country with libraries or to provide vast funds for education. He did not have enough money to make many families contented and happy in homes of their own, acquired by their own thrift aided by the reasonable terms of his bequest. He is a public service that makes his $20,000 rank as high as the millions that richer men have scattered broadcast.—Duluth Herald.

The committee on organization reported that the temporary organization be made permanent, and after the committee on resolutions had reported, A. H Fasel offered a motion to the effect that the chair appoint a committee of six to select delegates to the Republican state convention. The chair appointed Andrew Trovaten, T. P. Hamre, Robert McGinn, A. N. Sater, O. N. Urhdal, and F. T. Satre and they reported to the convention the following list of delegates and alternates:

Delegates—C. H. Martz, T. P. Hamre, Peter Hodeen John W. Eastman, G. Halvorson, Daniel Shaw, A. H. Fasel, Wilhelm Michelet and Dr. H. G. Hieber.

Alternates— E. J. Akerlund, A. N Sater, Thomas Bjorke, A. S. Wilson, Louis Nelson, Frank Staska, Olaf Larson, Dr. Grundy and Robert McGinn.

There was some oratory upon the part of some of the delegates from Red Lake Falls, and H. E. Ives, S. N, Severtson and Dr. Watson made eloquent pleas that they be sent as delegates but the convention could not hear them Andrew Trovaten, the human dynamo of the town of North, replied to these gentlemen and it was worth the price of admission to hear Mr. Trovaten's remarks. It is suffice, however, to say that after Mr. Trovaten's remarks the convention adopted the report of the committee with only a murmur of opposition.

SOME TAX COMPARISONS

The average rate of taxation in Red Lake county is, with one exception, the highest among the 85 counties of the state.

The county rate is ever increasing with nothing tangible or visible to show for it.

The county expenditures are extravagent and excessive.

Appropriations of public funds are unfairly distributed and the rankest favoritism is shown towards particular sections.

Contracts for county work and supplies are frequently let to the highest bidder, other things being equal.

Some county officials duly elected to office by the voters are ignored by the county board of commissioners and special officers are hired at great and unnecessary expense to the county, the latter being easily amendable to the the desires of individuals having selfish designs on the public funds.

Petitions filed with county officials have mysterously disappeared from county and court files.

Public funds collected for specific purposes have been diverted illegally.

Persons not connected with the administration of public affairs have benefited directly by the incompetence and inefficiency of public officials.

The transaction of the briefest county business on the part of the majority of the citizens of the county necessitates at least two days and one night of time.

The board of county commissioners refuse to redistrict the county equitably and the courts hold that this is the sole judge of its actions in this direction.

The majority of the board is under the domination of interests inimical to the welfare of the county.

Three fifths of the board represent only two fifths of the territory in the county, one third of the voters, and a small fraction of the taxable property.

This category of complaints might be continued indefinitely but space forbids in future issues of this paper these complaints and others will be discussed in detail and facts and figures produced substanting them. Proofs will also be submitted which will convince any unprejudiced person that the organization of Pennington county is proper and imperative and the only relief from a condition of affairs which is unbearable.

Pennington county, when organized, will start on its career with a clean slate. It will possess a county house absolutely free of any cost; will be relieved from any burden of taxation to help pay for the county building now under course of construction at Red Lake Falls; will have a larger territory than nearly two dozen of the smaller counties in the state; it will be controlled by a board of county commissioners whose names are a guarantee against extravagance, graft and dishonesty; in short, its organization is prompted by the general protest in the county against the excessive and continually increasing county taxes which now prevail in Red Lake county.

As space permits, evidence, which can be substantiated by preference to county and state records, will be submitted week by week to show that Pennington county can be administered for half the sum which is now carelessly expended to maintain the present extravagant county administration. Some choice reading material is promised the taxpayers and they are requested to prepare themselves for a series of articles which will show plainly why they are burdened with heavy taxes and how they may secure release from the same.

Brood Mares For Profit.

It is now costing the farmer about $90.00 a year to support a horse in Minnesota according the the statistics carefully kept at the Experiment Station. The necessity is apparent for the farmer to get into methods of handling his horses so they will return a profit, in addition to the work they do, "to pay for their board." It has been suggested by the secretary of the Minnesota Stallion Registration Board that the present average farm horses be at once converted into high class brood mares capable of raising a colt annually. The geldings should be sold to people whose business will keep them busy throughout the year and pay colt owners a profit. Colts of high class brood mares will sell at the end of the second or third year for a sum sufficient to give the farmer a fair profit on his mare, while her labor will have paid him part of the cost of keeping through the idle season. The farmer needs a horse that will pay him a profit every day in the year.

Watch for the Kite.

Within a few days the people of this city will have an opportunity of witnessing something that they never had the chance to see in this city before. Ere many days a huge kite, measuring eight by ten feet will be elevated with a life-size dummy hanging in the trapese.

John Meehan Dead.

A telegram received in the city last Thursday from Spokane, Wash., announced that John Meehan, who last winter removed to that place from this city to make his future home, was dead. No particulars were received, but it has been known for sometime that he did not enjoy good health in the west, the climate out there not agreeing with him.

Mr. Meehan had been a resident of this city for a number of years and every man in this section was his friend.

The body was shipped to Milwaukee for burial and the funeral occured there Tuesday.

What A Summer Cold May Do.

A summer cold if neglected is just as apt to develop into bronchitis or pneumonia as at any other season. Do not neglect it. Take Foley's Honey and Tar promptly. It loosens the cough, soothes and heals the inflamed air passages, and expels the cold from the system." Sold by all Druggists.

A Sad Case.

Miss Agnes McAnulty, a school teacher thirty years of age who had been residing upon a homestead up northeast of here, in Beltrami county, was brought to this city last Thursday and on Friday was sent to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls by Judge Richardson. When she was brought to this city the Beltrami county authorities were notified and they asked that the Red Lake county authorities make the examination and send the bills to Beltrami county. Miss McAnulty's parents reside at Litchfield, Minn.

The Conservation of Nature's Resources.

Applies as well to our physical state as to material things. C. J. Budlong, Washington, R. I. realized his condition and took warning before it was too late He says: "I suffered severely from kidney trouble, the disease being hereditary in our family. I have taken four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and now consider myself thoroughly cured. This should be a warning to all not to neglect taking Foley's Kidney Remedy until it is too late." Sold by all Druggists.

Scandinavian Names.

The Scandinavian system of names has often been a source of discussion and occasional embarrassment. It was one of the things the writer wanted further light on when visiting the "Land of the Midnight Sun." Being on the ground, a good deal was learned, and on his return he applied to Hon. A. Jacobson, of Decorah, Iowa, for some final instruction; and excerps from his reply will be used.

My friend, Mr. Jacobson, is a retired clergyman of note; a good farmer, who writes his experience as an Agronem for Decorah Posten; and has also represented his county in the Iowa legislature. As a lawmaker he secured the passage of a statue simplifying the hitherto cumbersome requirements in changing names. And he once told some good things in connection with his bill when before the legislature.

The chairman of the committee wanted to be shown of course. And was told of the Norse system which includes so many "sons." Mr. Jacobson insisted that the system at least proved that these sons had fathers. And that among Christ's disciples but one of them had a distinct surname—Judas Iscariot. The chairman recommended the bill.—Farm Stock and Home.

Teachers Poorly Paid.

The Pine City Poker observes that Minnesota has the largest school fund of any state in the union and goes on to state that it would be in order to boost the salaries of our teachers, most of whom are woefully underpaid. We most heartily agree with the Poker: Of all professions none are harder worked and less appreciated: they spend the best years of their lives in preparing themselves for their life vocation and after they have been teaching fifteen or twenty years they become "back numbers" and are relegated to the rear to make room for a new set of cogs. Their work is of such a nature that the average superannuated teacher cannot find a niche wherein he will fit and it is high time that the state of Minnesota take steps to make the field of teaching more attractive.—Foley Independent.

For Sale—Northwest quarter of section seven, town of Highlanding. Land is all high, eighty acres broke, good buildings, drilled soft water well. Price, $17 per acre. Call or write me at Brunkeberg, Minn. T. M. Thorson. (July 1.)

There is mighty little excuse for any family not having some sort of garden and failing to enjoy the good things which it will afford. This is especially true in sections of abundant rainfall and responsive soil, but holds good even in those sections where irrigation has to be resorted to and where the soil may be rocky and gravelly and apparently good for little, for if there is any one fact that sticks out in the plant world it is how much growing things will do with just a little encouragement. Seeds and garden tools are cheap, as are oil for the pump and salve for sore arms and shoulders. The men about the house should do the work in the garden—the most of it—but if they are minus or are invalids or lazy louts a garden may be had just the same if only a little pains is taken to put the ground in shape, sow the seed and hoe the plants after they come up.

Forced Dairying.

The statement is often made and with a considerable degree of truth that farmers milk cows because they are forced to in order to pay their debts, and as soon as they become well to do they discontinue the dairy business. No greater evidence can be presented to demonstrate that dairying pays, especially when it is considered that the temporary dairyman is generally a poor dairyman.

The man who has followed the business until his cows have paid off his debts is generally aware of the fact that there is money in it. If he then quits it is safe to conclude that he either has difficulty in securing constant help or he dislikes the work, or both. Both of these troubles may be eliminated. The writer has served in the capacity of a hired man on a big dairy farm and feels competent to discuss this phase of the subject from a hired man's standpoint.

The hired man is human and he does his best work at the work in which he is interested, and during working hours. There is no other work on the farm which is more interesting if conditions are right, but when the job of milking the cows is tacked on the both ends of a good day's work it becomes not only uninteresting, but positive drudgery.

Supposing that the work of plowing the fields—and every hired man would rather plow than do any other kind of farm work—could only be done between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock in the evening, and the cows were milked between 7 and 9 in the morning and 5 and 7 in the evening. How many hired men would enjoy plowing?

The same spirit that prompts the hired man to refuse to milk prompts the farmer to go out of the business when he is no longer compelled to milk cows. The former doesn't have to milk cows because jobs are open where there is no milking, and the latter doesn't have to after he can afford not to. The business of dairying is made a drudgery and the owner doesn't need to go off the farm to find the man who is responsible.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

How Postal Cards Are Counted.

Of the many ingenious and interesting machines employed by our Government in its daily work, perhaps none is more striking that those used for counting and tying postal cards into small bundles.

These machines are capable of counting 500,000 cards in ten hours and of wrapping and tying them in packages of twenty-five each.

The paper is pulled off a drum by two long fingers, which emerge from below, and another finger dips itself into a vat of mucilage and applies itself to the wrapping paper in precisely the right spot. Other parts of the machine twine the paper round the pack of cards, and then a thumb presses over the spot where the mucilage has been applied, whereupon the package is thrown on a carrying belt ready for delivery.—Harper's Weekly.

Getting Rich Quick.

Such is the demand for space in the machinery department at the State Fair that exhibitors, especially the power manufacturers, are forced to secure ground for demonstrations outside the fair grounds, and as a result the owners of farm land adjoining the fair are getting big rentals—some nearly what the land is worth per acre.

It has been two years since the thresher manufacturers have shown their products at the fair, but the agreement to discontinue thresher exhibits has been abandoned and as a consequence more firms manufacturing threshing machines have secured space than ever before.

With the several new buildings to be erected on Machinery Hill by individual concerns, this part of the fair grounds will present a most changed appearance, at the same time proving an object lesson to those who do not believe a well arranged exhibit at the fair is a paying proposition.

While the farmer can get an idea of choice products of agriculture, horticulture, etc., at the State Fair, he undoubtedly is more interested in the many machines and contrivances made to lessen the work and increase the capacity of the farm in its various departments. With the continued progress in the perfection and manufacture of gasoline engines, many practical and money-saving machines are now being offered, and this year's machinery exhibit will include many large concerns which have never before shown their products in Minnesota.

If there were nothing else to see at the fair but the machinery department it alone would make a show well worth visiting.

Democratic County Convention.

A Democratic Delegate convention for the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, will be held at Thief River Falls on Saturday July 23 1910 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of said day for the purpose of selecting 9 delegates to the Democratic Convention, to be held at the city of Minneapolis, on Thursday, July 28, 1910, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, State Auditor, State Treasurer, Attorney General, Clerk of the Supreme Court. Also to designate a resident of said County who shall be recommended to the State Convention as a member of the State Central Committee, and to transact such other business as may properly come before the Convention.

The basis of representation shall be one delegate for every 25 votes or major fraction cast for the late Governor John A. Johnson in 1908, and one delegate at large for each precinct.

In accordance with the above apportionment the several precincts of the County will be entitled to the following number of delegates:

The new canes in the raspberry patch—those which will be bearing fruit next season—should be tipped when they are about three and a half feet high. This will result in a sturdy, well branched bush, to the maturing of which all the plant energy for the rest of the season will be devoted.

Quite accurately the spread of the root system of shrub or tree is indicated by its visible spread of branches This should be of aid in pruning roots and branches at the time of transplanting and also in the cultivation and care of trees after they are set, including the growing of tilled crops in orchard tracts.

Now and then one runs across a fellow going by the name of farmer who will let the stock go thirsty on a hot day when the windmill refuses to work rather than expend a moderate amount of elbow grease in working the pump handle for their relief. This kind of chap is usually of the husky yet lazy type that is there with both feet when it comes to mealtime and makes a big fuss if there isn't an abundance of stuff to eat and drink.

Where there are no trees in the pasture which will furnish ample shade for the stock during the heated months of the summer some kind of shelter should be provided, if nothing more than a shed made of poles and thatched with straw or old hay. A number of instances were reported during July of last year where many head of cattle died from the heat, being found piled up in a seeming attempt to gain the shelter of a little patch of shade.

That tuberculosis can be transmitted from cattle to hogs has been quite forcefully demonstrated in some experiments which have lately been conducted by the Iowa animal husbandry department. Out of twenty-eight healthy pigs which were kept in a pasture three months to clean up after a car load of cows affected with tuberculosis twenty-two showed unmistakable lesions of the disease when slaughtered a short time after removal from the feed lot.

While it isn't so necessary as in the case of a small plant or shrub, the good sized shade tree will make a more thrifty growth if the soil is spaded and mellowed up a few feet about the roots. We saw this fact nicely proved one day last fall in the case of two white oaks eighteen inches in diameter, one in a cultivated garden patch and the other but a couple of rods distant in a dry, hard packed pasture. The first had thrifty, glossy leaves, with a foot and a half of new growth, while the second had a decidedly jaded and drought stricken appearance. It was a forceful object lesson and indicated a fact too often overlooked.

The easiest and most effective pruning work that can be done in an orchard is with the thumb and finger or a small knife during the first year following the setting of the young trees. This should include the snipping off of all shoots but the five or six which will later make the framework of the tree, and if this elimination work is done early in the growing season the remaining branches will be just so much more vigorous. If one has the time at his disposal this work can be augmented by snipping off the tips of the young branches in August. This will tend to season the wood as well as increase the diameter of the branches.

Married at Grand Forks.

At 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Northern in Grand Forks, a double wedding occurred, by which Alfred Rasmusson, of Thief River Falls, and Miss Clara Olsen, of Mekinock, were made one, and by which Emil B. Omang, of Mekinock, and Miss Josephine Olson, also of Mekinock, were joined together. Rev. F. M. McCoy of the First Methodist church, officiated. The brides are sisters. For Mr. Omang and Miss Josephine Olsen, M. A. Haugen, of Grand Forks, and Minnie Omang, a sister of the groom, assisted, while Mr. Rasmusson and Miss Clara Olsen were assisted by Oscar Moslet and Helma Olsen, the latter a sister of the bride. Mrs. Carrie Rasmusson and Miss Clarissa Loo, of Thief River Falls, were among those there for the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Omang will make their home at Mekinock, where a big reception was arranged for them last night, while Mr. and Mrs. Rasmusson will reside at Thief River Falls.—Grand Forks Herald, June 16.

TIDINGS FROM SCANDINAVIA

Interesting News From Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

APPARENT CAUSE FOR ALARM

Condition of King Gustaf of Sweden Not Showing Any Marked Improvement—Norwegian People Taking a Great Interest in Touring Their Own Country—Copenhagen Police Clean Up Number of Gambling Places.

SWEDEN.

When the Elete chorus, consisting of fifty picked voices from the American Union of Swedish Singers, will reach Stockholm they will be accorded an unusually warm reception. It goes without saying that they will be accorded a hearty reception in all the cities that they will visit during their extensively planned concert tour throughout the country. Swedish-American day will be observed at Skansen, in Stockholm, on July 4 and on this occasion the Swedish-American chorus will give a concert, which will be attended not only by the best people of Stockholm, but it will attract hundreds of Swedish-Americans and American tourists. Both Swedish and American songs will be rendered on this occasion and there will be a special programme of patriotic songs.

In spite of the fact that the Swedish press is doing everything to place a damper on the rumor that King Gustaf is in very ill health it is becoming more and more apparent that his condition is giving a great deal of cause for alarm. It is apparent that his long visit at the Riviera has not had the desired effect on his health. It was thought that the warm weather in the extreme southern end of Europe would do him good, but the truth of the case seems to be that it has not. All the newspaper reports regarding the king's health have, however, been exceedingly encouraging and until recently the general public has been prone to believe them. On the other hand, it will not cause any surprise if the next royal funeral will be held in the Swedish capital. There seems to be no organic trouble, but his majesty seems to be slowly failing and change of air and medical treatment does not seem to have had the desired effect. It is rather strange that neither the king nor the queen of Sweden have enjoyed really good health for several years past and this means that more state duties have been thrown upon the crown prince and crown princess than would otherwise have been the case. At the present time the crown prince is practically conducting the affairs of the nation, only matters of the very first importance being referred to the king and unless there is some speedy improvement there is a possibility of a formal regency being proclaimed.

KING GUSTAF.

The Augustana synod, in convention at Rock Island, Ill., sent the following message to his majesty, King Gustaf V., June 13: "Augustana synod, assembled at its fiftieth jubilee, begs to be permitted to express gratitude for the good will your majesty has again manifested in sending Bishop von Scheele as the representative of the Swedish church and for the message of greeting from your majesty conveyed by him. With continued adherence to the faith of our fathers and to their church, and with continued love for our beloved fatherland, we call down God's richest blessing on your majesty."

John S. Samuel, the energetic Swedish lecturer, has been giving a series of lectures throughout Scotland this spring and summer regarding the tourist traffic of Sweden. He has also been telling about the industrial advantages of the country and has succeeded in advertising Sweden far and wide in Scotland. Herr Samuel deserves much credit for his work along these lines in Scotland.

Lektor P. P. Waldenstrom, who some time ago announced that, owing to his advanced age he would not be able to make a trip to the United States, changed his mind the other day and on the 11th inst. he boarded the Mauretania for New York. He will speak at a large number of gatherings of the Swedish Mission Covenant churches in the East and West and these churches are making preparations to accord him an enthusiastic reception.

While excavations in the harbor in Gothenburg were being conducted some time ago an old cannon was discovered, which, it is believed, dates back to the Sixteenth century and may possibly have been used in the Thirty Years' war. It is the type of cannon which were in use during the reign of Gustavus Adolphus.

A large delegation of German journalists are expected to visit Sweden during the latter part of this and next month. They will visit some of the leading cities in the country and then journey as far north as Sundsvall.

The Swedish government will appropriate 125,000 crowns for the erection of a Swedish church in Paris and also a parsonage. Next year the government will make an additional appropriation of 25,000 crowns.

Count K. A. H. Morner has been chosen vice president of the Academy of Sciences.

NORWAY.

A large excursion of Bergen people visited Christiania a few days ago. About 300 persons participated in the excursion. When arriving at the capital city they were royally entertained and the entire party took dinner at the famous Holmenkollen. Norwegians are beginning to imitate the tourists of foreign lands and have made up their minds that it is about time to make these trips a little oftener and see some of their own country before going to other countries.

Halfvdan Koht has been appointed to the chair of history in the University of Christiania and Sten Konow has been selected for the chair of Indian philology at the same institution. This will greatly strengthen the faculty at Christiania University. Both men are well known educators and their selection has occasioned much favorable comment from the press.

Last winter there was not less than 20,000 ryper (snow white partridge) shipped to foreign points from Opdal, in Numedalen. They brought a sum of 50 pre apiece. They are considered the most delicious game bird in Norway and thousands of them are shipped to America and England every season.

Last year 18,557 persons emigrated from Norway to foreign ports. The indications are that there will be a still greater number who will emigrate this year. The people who emigrated are chiefly young men and women and it stands to reason that the country feels this drain all the more.

A rumor states that Bjornson's family will endeavor to have the government pay for Bjornson's expenses during his late illness in Paris and that they will request that the government also purchase "Aulestad," the famous country residence occupied by the beloved author.

About 20,000 men were engaged in cod fishing along the coast of Finmarken during the months of May and June. There seemed to be plenty of fish for all of them. No less than 500 different fish concerns were on the ground, ready to buy the fish as soon as caught.

From all parts of the country come complaints to the effect that there is a scarcity of hay for the cattle and the pastures have not been in a very good shape. In many sections of the country rain is badly needed, else there will be a total failure of the hay crop.

Ibsen's "Rosmersholm" has been very popular in Germany during the past year. It was rendered in Berlin not less than 100 times at the Lessing theater and there was a crowded house at each performance.

There has been collected for the king's villa the sum of 226,000 crowns. Of this amount 34,000 crowns were collected from foreign lands.

DENMARK.

The police of Copenhagen made a raid on the gambling joints of the city a few evenings ago and succeeded in cleaning up quite a few places. In one place twenty men were placed under arrest. Copenhagen has the reputation of being a great gambling center and the municipal authorities are becoming aroused to the situation and squads of policemen are scouring the city every night. The local police are determined to put an end to the gambling business in the Danish capital and at present it looks as though they were going to succeed.

A large delegation of British land owners and dairymen have recently visited Denmark for the purpose of studying at close range the Danish dairy industry. They found much that interested them and expressed surprise at the excellent dairy methods which are in vogue all over the agricultural districts of the country.

In spite of rather dull times there is a good deal of building going on in the Danish capital this summer and several hundred carpenters are kept busy all the time. A number of new hotels are under course of erection, as well as a number of new business houses.

A terrible tragedy occurred in Copenhagen the other day when a father, temporarily demented, cut his throat from ear to ear in the sight of his wife and children. An ambulance was called, but before doctors reached the unfortunate man he had bled to death.

SIBLEY HOUSE DEDICATION

Governor Eberhart and Archbishop Ireland Participate.

Honors were paid to the life and character of Henry H. Sibley, first governor of Minnesota and one of the founders and most distinguished citizens of the commonwealth, when the old Sibley mansion at Mendota—the oldest residential relic of territorial days—was dedicated by the Daughters of the American Revolution as a state museum wherein may be kept the mementos and records of early times in Minnesota.

The ceremonies were held in the open air on the hillside south of the old house. The speakers, old settlers, members of the D. A. R. and distinguished guests occupied a temporary stand close by the tall flag pole upon which was raised as the closing event of the dedicatory services a large silk flag, the gift of Mrs. Chase, of Colonial chapter, Minneapolis.

Apart from its historical and social significance the celebration at Mendota is noteworthy. Governor Eberhart delivered one of the most forceful and eloquent addresses of his career and Archbishop Ireland, by means of whose generosity and patriotism the women were enabled to obtain the old Sibley residence, spoke in language that will be long remembered as a most stately and dignified tribute to an honored name.

THOUSANDS LAID OFF

Northwestern Railways Suspend All New Work.

The policy of retrenchment threatened by railroads is being put in force. Orders have been issued from headquarters in St. Paul and Chicago to stop practically all the new construction work in the Northwest and plans for proposed extensions and betterments have been temporarily dropped. So far it has meant the laying off of about 10,000 laborers in this section. How far it will affect employes generally has not yet developed, but in the face of the growing volume of business which the railroads will have to handle it is not expected that the plan of curtailment will be carried much beyond new work.

The Northern Pacific has given orders to lay off 3,500 men, the Great Northern 3,000 and the Northwestern 600. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul laid off between 1,000 and 1,200 the first part of June in the Northern district alone, so that the number let out through the entire system will exceed that considerably.

Elliott Explains Action of Roads.

President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific issued a statement, which may be taken to explain the attitude of other railroads. His statement follows, in part:

"The railroads in the United States are just now subject to four great forces, all tending to reduce the net earnings of the companies. They are:

"First—The steady and constant increase in taxes.

"Second—The increase in the rates of pay and in the prices of nearly all kinds of material.

"Third—The natural demand, as communities grow in wealth and population, for more, faster, better and more expensive service and facilities of every kind.

"Fourth—The very great powers given to state and national railway commissioners, to name the rates to be charged by the railroads for the services they perform, and the tendency in the exercise of those powers to reduce rates."

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

A combination game warden, fire warden, road inspector and police officer for the rural districts, especially the timbered districts, is the suggestion of General C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner. At present, he says, there are too many officials and they do not give proper attention to the matter of preventing forest and prairie fires.

There are 870 Minnesota corporations that have not paid the corporation tax of 1 per cent of net earnings imposed by congress in the act of Aug. 6, 1909. Fred von Baumbach, collector of internal revenue for the Minnesota district, says that 468 have paid and that the others have until July 1, after which there will be a fine imposed.

White Earth celebrated the forty-third anniversary of its settlement by the Minnesota Chippewas last week. The town was arrayed in picturesque attire. Visiting Sioux and native Chippewas, painted and befeathered and dressed in all the togs of former days on the warpath or in the wigwam, thronged the streets.

The business affairs of the village and township of Kellither have been conducted in a loose manner, according to the report of deputy state public examiners, who recently made an official examination of the books of the village and the township. The investigation was ordered as a result of the late village election.

R. E. L. Winter and R. E. McDonald, representing the O. J. Lewis Mercantile company of St. Louis, bough the stock in trade of the North Star Shoe company of Minneapolis for $147,300, in competitive bidding, after the most remarkable auction sale ever witnessed in the commercial history of Minneapolis.

Action to determine the boundary line between Minnesota and Wisconsin in Lake Pepin will soon be commenced in the United States supreme court by Attorney General George T. Simpson. The matter has been left undecided for so long that Mr. Simpson has decided to start proceedings very soon.

Worthy tribute to the memory of Bjornstjerne Bjornson was paid in speech and song by the Norwegians of Minneapolis. They filled the large Auditorium to the doors and many were unable to obtain entrance.

Agreement on the preliminary steps for starting a municipal lodging house was reached in Minneapolis by a special committee of the Associated Charities and the health commitee of the city council.

Eight hundred delegates attended the annual convention of the Minnesota State Fire Department association at Alexandria.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Thomas B. Clement, the aged Faribault banker who began to serve an eight-year sentence at Stillwater on July 24, 1907, for misapplying the funds of the First National bank of Faribault, of which he was president, will regain his liberty some time late this year, according to a press dispatch from Washington which says that President Taft has commuted the sentence to four years.

Frank Nesbit, twenty years old, son of William Nesbit, a prominent and wealthy Winona county farmer, while suffering with measles, went to the rear of the barn at his parent's home in Fremont, tore open his shirt, placed the end of the revolver barrel to his breast and fired. The bullet passed through the heart and death was instantaneous.

A. T. Bilson, son of a prominent attorney of Duluth, shot himself while in his room at the Rome hotel at Omaha, dying an hour later. He left a note saying that certain charges against him were untrue, but not indicating the nature of the charges. There was over $100 in his pockets.

While passenger train No. 7 was pulling into Barnesville it ran down a lineman named Leorrity, whose headquarters was in Minneapolis, killing him instantly. The man's head was crushed and one arm severed.

Rudolph Jalius, aged thirty, married, a farmer living near Amboy, was drowned in the Blue Earth river while seining for fish.

Fire at Park Rapids destroyed several business houses, causing a loss of $20,000.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

A. B. Robbins, founder of Robbinsdale, Hennepin county, and of a business widely known in the Northwest, died at his home in Robbinsdale after an illness of several months. Although he had been ill and had undergone one operation death was unexpected.

Charles J. Martin, aged sixty-eight, secretary and treasurer of the Washburn-Crosby Milling company of Minneapolis, is dead. He had been prominently identified with the milling business in Minneapolis since 1874.

J. Ross Nicols, sixty years old, one of the oldest and best known business men of St. Paul, died at his home in that city of Bright's disease, from which he had been suffering for a year and a half.

Mrs. Julia Bell Robertson, widow of Colonel D. A. Robertson, one of the earliest and most prominent of the old settlers of St. Paul, is dead. Mrs. Robertson was eighty-three years old.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The conference report on the administration railroad bill was presented to the senate by Chairman Elkins of the senate committee on interstate commerce. It was also laid before the house, but under the rules it cannot be acted upon by the house until disposed of by the senate. The bill carries most of the features of the original administration measure except the sections to permit railroads to make pooling agreements, to athorize the government to regulate the issuance of stocks and bonds and to permit a railroad to purchase the remaining stock of another line in which it already controls 50 per cent of the stock.

The house has adopted a new rule by which a majority of its membership may at any time recall from a committee any bill or resolution referred to it and place the measure upon the calendar for consideration. Advocates of this new rule claim that it will effectually prevent the pigeonholing of any proposed legislation which has the approval of a majority of the house. The adoption of the new rule was by a unanimous vote.

Representative Frank Nye of Minneapolis entertained the house for forty minutes "offering a few suggestions upon the general theme of patriotism and progress." Mr. Nye eulogized Uncle Joe Cannon, dwelt upon his service to the country, exalted the Republican party, urged more harmonious relations among men in public life, and spoke to some extent about the beauties of nature.

Senator Dolliver of Iowa delivered a remarkable speech in the senate in support of "insurgency" and against the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. Mr. Dolliver charged the Taft administration, in effect, with using the patronage club in an effort to beat recalcitrant party members into line and served notice that they could not force him to yield in this way.

Senator Cullom introduced in the senate a joint resolution postponing until Jan. 1 next the payment of the corporation tax. The legislation is desired because of the delay of the supreme court of the United States in determining the constitutionality of the corporation tax provision of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law.

Representative Poindexter, progressive Republican of Washington, introduced a resolution attacking the acquisition of timber lands in the state of Idaho by the Weyerhaeuser lumber syndicate, which is charged with being a trust, and proposing a congressional committee of three to investigate conditions.

After remaining on the senate calendar for almost three months in a state of uncertainty as to its fate the bill providing for the admission of the territories of New Mexico and Arizona to separate statehood was taken up by the senate and passed after a debate consuming little more than two hours.

With $30,000,000 provided for the completion of irrigation projects and various other amendments the house bill authorizing the withdrawal of public lands by the president passed the senate. It is one of the measures advocated in President Taft's legislative programme.

Representative Fowler has introduced a resolution requiring the rules committee to report a rule to the house at the beginning of the next session providing for a committee or committees.

In the course of a speech in the senate, during debate on the administration land withdrawal bill, Senator Heyburn spoke of ex-Forester Pinchot as an "apostle of fallacy, theory and ignorance."

By a vote of 50 to 11 the senate agreed to the conference report on the railroad bill. Six of the affirmative votes and all of the negative votes were cast by Democrats.

The house committee on labor has decided to report favorably a bill creating a department of labor with a seat in the president's cabinet.

L received the applause for perfect appearance while passing in review "Passing in review" is the grand finale of dress parade and the companies pass both the commanding officer and his staff, and the crowd that gathers to witness the ceremony, in a column front, or in two lines outward from the point of review. Sunday evening found Co. L at the critical point, in a perfect line and the applause which publicly proclaimed "THE" company was very enthusiastic. Capt. Wisto now wears a hat made to order! No wonder!

Company L has had very few men in the hospital and none in the guard house, which is a record that is still unbeaten this year.

The little field of gophers and mice that nest under the tent floors provide their share of amusement for the boys and it is safe to say that they are there as "fun producers."

The company team shoots are being held this (Sunday) afternoon, seven men from each company composing a team. The scores were not as good as they might have been, due to the extreme heat which affected more or less the shooting of all the teams.

Mayor Hamre was a Sunday night visitor in camp. His Honor was royally welcomed by the boys, all of whom realize that it was through his efforts that the securing of the company for Thief River Falls and incidentally the annual encampment, was made possible

The bundle of papers from the News office which arrived in camp Saturday, found little relief until the contents were read by the boys. They were as good as a letter from home.

The attendance of visitors at camp Sunday afternoon and evening exceeded by a large number the attendance of any previous encampment. The young ladies, especially, were royally entertained.

129 degrees in the shade was the reading of the thermometer at four o'clock p. m. Sunday, The company team shoot was pulled off on an open field and many surburns are the result.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG
CENTRAL POINT, ROGUE RIVER VALLEY, OREGON
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

A FLEA INQUIRY.

A reader of these notes living near Quinton, N. J., writes stating that he has lately moved on to a farm which is overrun with fleas and stating that he will be eternally grateful for any suggestion which would aid in getting rid of the pest. The writer's experience with fleas has been very limited, and he is mighty glad of it, judging from what he has been able to glean through other folks' trials with them. However, inquiry made of those who have run afoul of them has resulted in a suggestion or two which may help our good friend out of his trouble. One is stabling a few sheep in the infested quarters and then marketing the sheep, when the fleas will be on the other fellow, which, of course, is the prime consideration. A method which proved effective on another ranch which harbored millions of them, with headquarters in a dry wagon shed, was the scattering of wood ashes inside the building and then giving the place a good wetting down with water. The friend who relates this instance states that if an infested place is shut up tight and no animals allowed to enter it the fleas will die off. We offer this last for what it is worth. It is plain that fleas prefer dry and sandy places and seem to thrive there best; hence a wetting down of such places after scattering ashes would seem to be at least a partial solution. Doubtless a fumigation of infested places with fumes of sulphur or formaldehyde would be valuable. Another tells us that when one's clothing is inhabited with the pests the only way to have peaceful sleep is to disrobe on the back porch, shake out one's underclothing and nightrobe, and if an attack is made during the night to repeat the operation out of the window. The writer will keep this flea business in mind, and if he learns of anything more effective than the methods suggested he will give his readers the benefit of it.

A PLEA FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Many of the saddest and most heartrending of life's tragedies might be averted were parents to recognize the responsibility which is surely on their shoulders of informing their children in the early years—far better too early than too late—of the chief facts in connection with their physical origin and the dangers incident to ignorance of the vital facts. Find out about these things boys and girls will—if not from pure and reliable then from vulgar and untrustworthy sources. Perhaps the victim is a fair young girl, whose confidence has been betrayed and whose bright and happy life is blasted at its threshold, or maybe it is a stalwart son, who finds out too late through agonizing experience that he is a virtual imbecile or is tainted for life with some loathsome disease which may mean early death, but in any event must always debar him from those joys which center in a happy home of his own and a life of wholesomeness and usefulness. The teaching of these truths in the home and in the school is of far more account than mathematics, history or language, yet they are almost universally and most stupidly ignored. As a people we are devoting too much time and energy to material things—the shop, the office, the farm; too much time to horses and cattle, to sheep and swine, their breeding and their rations—and far too little thought to the boys and girls and their problems, on whom more than all other things or interests the future welfare of the country depends. The boys and girls are worth while. It is time they were given a square deal.

PEAR BLIGHT.

In portions of California and Oregon plant disease experts of the department of agriculture have for the past two or three years been directing a campaign for the stamping out of the pear blight, which in sections of the former state has ruined tens of thousands of bearing trees. A careful study of the pest coupled with numerous experiments has shown the only effective method of combating the blight to be the cutting out of affected shoots and limbs below the point of infection, the pruning instrument, saw or shears, being sterilized after each cutting by dipping in kerosene. Another means serving to lessen the severity of an attack of blight has been found to lie in the removal of all fruit spurs from the trunk and larger lower limbs, as the spores of the blight are transmitted to such spurs by bees at blossom time. Pear orchards in sections where the blight is prevalent should be inspected frequently and no time lost in cutting out affected limbs should the pest put in an appearance. A delay of a day has often meant the loss of many trees, as the blight works with great rapidity, often passing from twig to trunk in the course of a few hours.

While dry seasons have their drawbacks, it is a matter of common observation that the quality of both small grain and corn crops is better during such seasons than during those in which there is an excess of rain.

That buttermilk can hardly be recommended as a healthful beverage which is got from creameries or private dairies in which the cream product is in part furnished by cows badly affected with tuberculosis. And what is true of the buttermilk holds true in even larger measure with the fresh milk from the same animals.

If the piece of lowland dries out sufficiently so as to be put in fit shape as a seed bed by July 1 sorghum will give excellent returns as a forage crop. The seed should be sowed at the rate of a bushel and a half per acre. The crop should be cut at about the time of the first frost and put in large cocks in the field, where it may be left until needed. Sorghum does not pull heavily on the soil and may be grown on the same land several seasons with good results.

The California poppy, which grows in greatest profusion on the Pacific coast, exhibits as does no other flower pure yellow and orange colors, the outer portions of the four petaled flower showing the former color, while the inner portions, near the center, show the latter color with great purity. The flower has a spread of from one and a half to three inches, while the leaves, although larger, closely resemble those of the eastern wood flower the Dutchman's breeches.
